FLORIST.....

ADVERTISING.

A certain city florist spent $25 for a newspaper advertisement. He was so well pleased with the result that he contracted to use $1,300 worth of space in that newspaper within the year.

As florists try it out they come to realize that advertising is the greatest power that lies at the hand of the business man.

Florists will some day be large advertisers. Inclined, as men are, to go to extremes, they even may overadvertise.

But no danger of that yet a while.

No doubt much money has been wasted in advertising, as in other things.

But in taking up the subject of advertising the florist can get the benefit of the experience of other and earlier advertisers.

He can save the cost of experiment.

Everyone agrees the newspaper is the best vehicle for advertisements.

Also, it is agreed that a strong advertisement in the best paper pays better than weaker ones in several papers.

The only dissenting voice is that of the editor who might get one of the small spaces, but can't seem to connect with the big one.

Lump your money—unless you've got it to burn.

Picking the winner is easy.

The average man advertises in the newspaper he himself reads.

The more readers, the more advertisers; the more advertisers, the more readers.

It's as certain as that two and two make four.

You can pick the leading paper in any town, in any trade, without asking the editors for their opinions.

The boiled down judgment of any community, of any craft, is recorded in the number of advertisements, in the space occupied, in the newspapers of that community, or of that craft.

Pick the best newspaper, put into it enough to make the best showing you can, dress your space as you would your show window—and watch your business grow.

Time to plan something now for Easter.

AN IRELAND WINDOW.

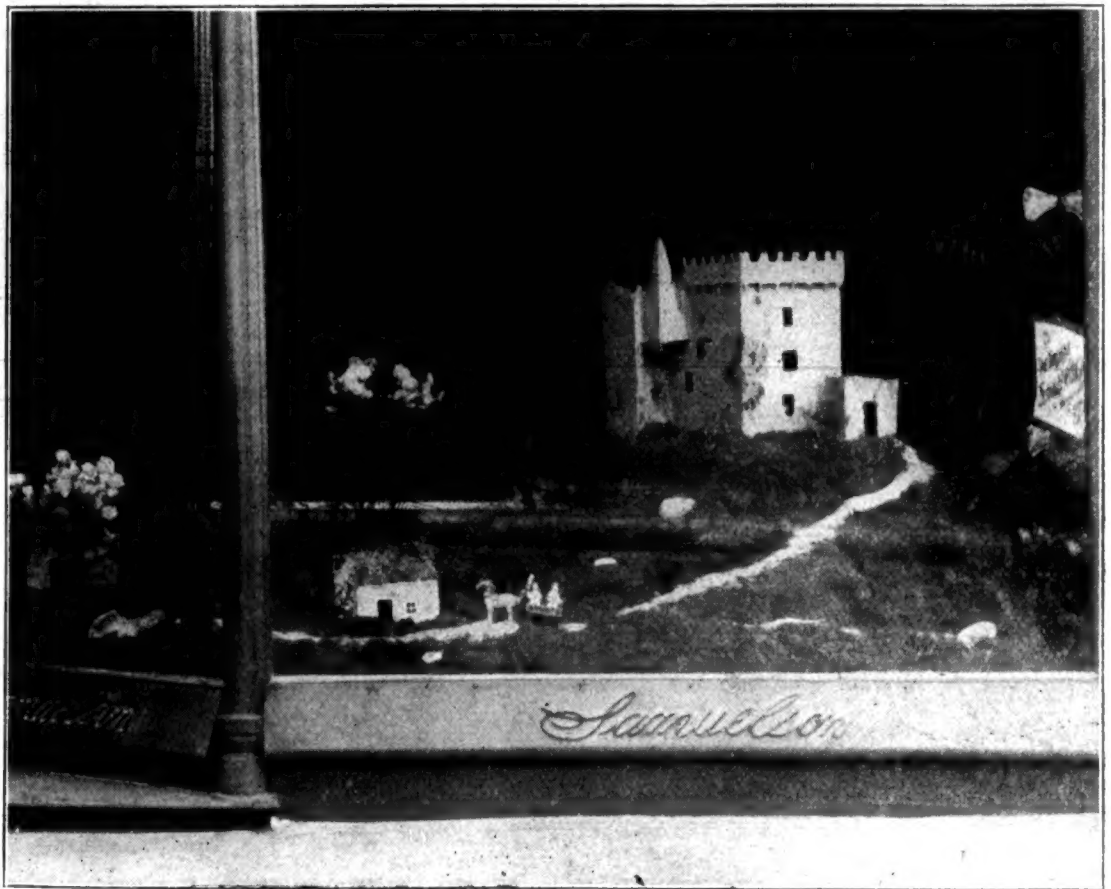

As a means of attracting attention to a flower store, special window decorations are worth all they cost. In a good many cases the cost is more in time and ingenuity than it is in money, and this is especially so at St. Patrick's day. It does not take a large sum to supply the materials for an Irish window, but it takes some agitation of the gray matter to conceive and execute a suitable idea.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a rather indifferent photograph of a very good window decoration. It was put up for St. Patrick's day last year at the store of C. A. Samuelson, Chicago. The large window was converted into a typical Irish landscape. The castle is quite apparent in the picture. Leading down from its walls was an uneven road, which crossed a trickling brooklet in the foreground. As if jogging along the road was one of those typical jaunting-cars always shown in the photographs returning travelers made in Ireland. In it are three unmistakably Irish figures. The two on the side even had shillalahs in their hands.

There were barns, bogs and brakes to add to the unmistakableness of the design, and groups of shamrocks were worked in profusely. A sign at one side advised that these were the true shamrocks, grown from seed imported from Ireland. Also, there were vases of dyed carnations.

TRIALS OF A COUNTRY FLORIST.

Not "Trials;" "Experience," if You Please.

Saturday night, 9 o'clock, and just in out of a raging storm that threatened to flood the boiler-pit. Wet, chilled to the bone. Sat down by the kitchen stove after supper to dry my feet, opened the REVIEW and started to read the "Trials of a Country Florist," when my wife reminded me of that before-breakfast funeral order. "What are we going to make it off?"

The order is for a family worth $80,000; connections worth twice as much. They want a "wreath of green, but a few flowers in it, all white, and some other loose flowers." We look this over and think out just what to do. Nothing said about price. The family and neighbors are of a religious sect that regard flowers as foolish display, and all display as vainglorious and to be frowned upon. No order at all except for the grandchildren, who have learned the message of flowers and buy a little now and then.

So we make a wreath of smilax with valley worked in and lay a stalk of Harrisii across it, using also a few sprays of bronze leucothoe. Then we put up a box of three dozen Bride roses, among which I lay one open, bewitching Killarney—and with some trepidation charge up $8 on this order.

By that time it is too late to resume the "Trials of a Country Florist."

he would be back later, but he didn't come.

While the boy went to find out definitely what he was to fetch, we started again to read about the "Trials of a Country Florist."

"Trials?" No! Call them "experiences," if you please.

Paper Flowers for Big Weddings.

The experiences of some of us country florists must seem a great joke to the city retailers, if they hear of them, but to us the reality is stern enough. Even at the risk of inviting ridicule, I will tell one or two of the things I have had to contend with in trying to sell flowers in a community that has plenty of money because it hasn't yet learned how to spend any.

Nearly 300 families live in a settlement near us. They nearly all are well-to-do; many are worth from $40,000 to $75,000. They ought to be good buyers, but they are not. Paper flowers are used by all, and real flowers shunned as poison. Three designs have been made for this settlement in five years, two crosses and one wreath, and we understand that special dispensation had to be issued by the head of their church permitting these indulgences. There are many weddings, but at most of these a few paper flowers are pinned on, and that is the limit.

This is not saying that weddings are not held here on a magnificent scale. There are those in which 50 to 100 families participate. A dance floor is specially erected for the occasion; there is a full carload of beer, and a brass band is hired from a neighboring city; there are wagon-loads of cookery and the festivities are long continued. But the concomitant of flowers represents an ex-communities and dropped to what could be had for $3.75; finally we offered him something for $1.75. He was about to go away without ordering, but saw a vase of red carnations. "What do you call these here?" We told him. "What do they cost?" And we told him 10 cents each flower. After hesitating a bit, he finally bought one, and at his wedding he wore the red carnation on his coat, but his bride took the vows flowerless.

Funny, isn't it? It would be, if such occurrences were not so common in a community just emerging from darkness.

The Home-made Pillow.

Last autumn I had a shipment to make by train. At the depot I noticed a dark veil and other evidences of a funeral. In the hands of one of the mourners was something that, on a second look, proved to be a home-made pillow. Sixteen inches had been sawed off a 1-foot board and covered with white cotton flannel, raised from the board with some sort of stuffing. The word "Mother" was daubed across the center in ink and on this "pillow" five asters were pinned, one on each corner, and one for the middle. I passed the mourners with as sad a countenance as possible and with great deference, but I did not see anything in next week's REVIEW about there having been a disturbance of the general cut flower markets on account of this event.

Really, there's nothing funny about it. When you come to think of it, it almost would bring tears to a hardened florist's eyes. Not that opportunity for business is so poor, but that sentiment is just beginning to creep into these people's lives.

high school part of the year, and it made them restless to see beyond their material home surroundings.

When the farmer went, the children brought the widow to me. She would buy flowers. They had never seen a cut flower in their home, but they gave me leave to use my judgment. I put in $25 worth of cut flowers at the house and in casket work, with about $15 in the church decoration. It took the breath of the community, and set the tongues of the township wagging over such extravagance. But we could see that secretly the widow and her children enjoyed the situation; their whole tastes were changed by those flowers. While they had been an honor and loving tribute to the dead, they marked the awakening of a new life for the woman and her children. Now they have left the hog lot and moved into a city home, where there are flowers continually.

One of the worst characters of our town came in one day, and, just a little shamefacedly, bought a rich red rose—one flower. A few days later he was back for another, and I learned his mother was sick. A little while after he bought a potted Easter lily and later an azalea in bloom.

Future of the Business.

These are not the "Trials of a Country Florist," but they are some of his "experiences."

There is no question about the future of the cut flower business. It is bound to grow. Nobody needs to cut another out of his trade, or try to. Ours is a product that appeals eventually to all natures. Our trade is most easily extended when the best is made to take the place of something not so good.

I hold that the work of the florist is not only æsthetic, but moral. But the work is most effectively done without preachment, and with tact. More flowers are needed in all human lives, and they represent a wonderful moral power that, once awakened, brings pleasure and profit to the florist. The very people who ought to use flowers, use few, if any. Here is where the wider extension of the flower trade is possible, and work for this will not interfere with anybody's established trade.

The florist who started these "Trials of a Country Florist" complained that after advertising carnations at a nickel apiece, he only sold sixty on a special sale. Let him try advertising to show the men of his community that by cutting out a cigar or a drink a day they can take home a dozen carnations Saturday night. To make flowers take the place of harmful luxuries is the duty and should be the aim of every florist.

ORCHID TABLES BY McCONNELL.

The social affairs of Miss Marjorie Gould have given the New York retail florists some of the best orders that have come out in the metropolis since Miss Gould's debut. Alexander McConnell has had the large share of this work and for the various Gould functions has done some of the finest decorating New York ever has seen. One of the most elaborate the season's decorations was that of the Gould residence, on Fifth avenue, for the reception January 18, at which Miss Gould's engagement was announced. There were twenty-five refreshment tables, each decorated with orchids. The accompanying illustration is a reproduction of a photograph of one corner of the room.

penditure of about $3.75, and it was hard work to get the bride's mother above the two-dollar mark.

Christmas week our attractive display brought in a party looking for flowers for one of these weddings. We tried to get $5 to $8, though the family might well have used $25 for flowers for the occasion. The groom scouted the idea and the extravagance we proposed. We showed him what was customary in other

The Second Generation.

A farmer died in mid-May. Corn, cattle and hog grower, he left about $160,000. It was all money in this home. Interest was in steers and steer fattening. Every dollar was honestly made, by the sweat and blood of the family. Economy was the watchword; the next dollar the anxiety of the whole family. But the children finally got into the town Establishment of Peter Murray, Fairhaven, Mass.

PETER MURRAY'S PLACE.

There probably are a good many florists who do not know Peter Murray, for that quiet, home-loving gardener has been little in the public eye, but there probably is not a florist anywhere in America who does not know the carnation Peter Murray raised—Winsor.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of Mr. Murray's well-kept place at Fairhaven, Mass. The picture shows how well he is situated. Nothing finer could be asked. With his broad frontage and the apple-pie condition of everything inside his berberis hedge, it is natural that the heavy traffic along this well-traveled road should mean good business for Murray. And, indeed, so good is business that the glass area will be doubled this season.

Mr. Murray is another grower—their name is legion—who has a pet seedling carnation of Enchantress color. His is a seedling of Winsor and has done so well that its hybridizer holds high hopes for it.

BOSTON MIDWINTER SHOW.

Although gotten up at comparatively short notice, the first midwinter show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, February 25 to 27, proved a grand success, paid admissions equaling those of the average spring exhibition. With minimum temperatures varying from zero in Boston to as low as 25 degrees below not many miles north and west of it from February 23 to 26, plants and flowers required careful wrapping, but in spite of the intense cold, we saw few frozen shipments. The exhibits filled the whole of the exhibition halls, although there were no classes for rambler roses and a number of other plants usually seen at the spring exhibitions.

For three palms, distinct varieties, William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, was first. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener, led for twenty hardwooded plants with a fine selection. A. Leuthy & Co. took the silver medal for the best group of foliage and flowering plants, with a fine selection. Some excellent acacias were included. Mrs. J. L. Gardner was second and W. W. Edgar Co. third, all showing well. Mrs. Gardner's group contained some fine specimen chorozeas.

Primula Kewensis was shown in large numbers and of grand quality. Competition for six specimens was close. Mrs.

Frederick Ayer, George Page gardener, was first; Winthrop Ames, Daniel Whyte gardener, second; Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, third. William Whitman took first and second for six Primula obconica with grand specimens. Mrs. J. L. Gardner was in the lead for six Primula stellata, showing big specimens; W. Whitman was a good second. Cyclamens, as usual, were grandly shown. Dr. C. G. Weld's twenty-four plants, in not over 7-inch pots, were perfect models of cultural skill. For twelve plants, splendid plants were shown by J. S. Bailey, W. McGillivray gardener, and E. J. Mitton, Joshua Lawson gardener, the first named taking first and third and Mr. Lawson second prizes. For six plants in not over 10-inch pots, Dr. C. G. Weld led, followed by E. J. Mitton and J. S. Bailey.

W. Whitman proved, as usual, almost invincible in the Dutch bulb classes, capturing first for six 10-inch pans of hyacinths, third for single pan, first and second for six pans of tulips, first for collection of large Trumpet narcissi, first and second for collection of short Trumpet narcissi and first for general display of spring bulbous plants, his exhibits being of grand quality. Mrs. J. L. Gardner took first and second for single pan of hyacinths and second for collection of large Trumpet narcissi. Miss M. A. Rand had the best amateur's collection of bulbs.

For specimen orchid, Mrs. H. F. Durant, T. Watt gardener, won with Lælia anceps; J. T. Butterworth second, with Dendrobium Wardianum; Mrs. Oliver Ames, H. Cole gardener, third with Lycaste Skinneri, finely grown.

The rose men made the reverse of a creditable display, there being hardly any competition for the excellent prizes offered. W. H. Elliott had the best Killarney and White Killarney. Montrose Greenhouses won for Richmond; Brant Bros., for Bridesmaid, and any other variety, with Bride. W. H. Elliott showed fine Safrano and Montrose Greenhouses, their dark variety of Killarney.

Carnations were out in force and made a splendid exhibition, the flowers being of high quality throughout. For fifty white, Patten & Co. were first and second with White Perfection and Shasta; C. S. Strout, third with No. 170. Fifty Enchantress shade of pink, S. J. Goddard, first with a fine vase of Pink Delight; Patten & Co., second with May Day; George E. Buxton, third with Pink Delight. Fifty Winsor shade of pink, Patten & Co., first and second with Winona and Winsor; S. J. Goddard, third with Winsor. Fifty Lawson shade of pink, S. J. Goddard, first with fine Helen Goddard. Fifty scarlet, Patten & Co., first; C. S. Strout, second; S. J. Goddard, third; all showing Beacon. Fifty crimson, Backer & Co., first with splendid Harry Fenn; S. J. Goddard, second with Ruby; Patten & Co., third with Sara Nicholson. Fifty white variegated, A. Roper, first with Bay State; Patten & Co., second with the same variety. Fifty yellow or yellow variegated, Patten & Co., first with Hattie Starrett; Backer & Co., second with No. 14a.

For fifty blooms mixed, private gardeners only, Mrs. F. Ayer was first; J. C. Whitin, second. For 100 blooms, any one variety, Peter Fisher was first with May Day. For 100 blooms, not less than four varieties, S. J. Goddard was first with some grand flowers; Patten & Co., second. For fifty blooms of any variety not in commerce, there was a close tussle between Wodenethe, the splendid pure white from Winthrop Sargent, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., and Alma Ward from Cottage Gardens Co. The first named scored one point higher and secured the silver medal. Patten & Co. showed Daille-douze's new variety, Mrs. C. W. Barron, in good shape in this class. John Barr showed, not for competition, a vase of his new white variegated seedling in the way of Mrs. Bradt, which showed up well and received honorable mention. A display of seedlings from the New Hampshire Agricultural College received a similar award. A. D. Emerson, Westville, N. H., showed a dark pink seedling. Robert Main, Gloversville, N. Y., had his new white seedling, which, however, came in a sleepy state. Backer & Co. received honorable mention for their scarlet, Red Prince.

For 100 Princess of Wales violets, Dobbin & Shannon were first; J. H. Newman & Sons, second; Estey Bros., third. For 100 Campbell, H. F. Woods was first; E. Bingham, second; H. F. Calder, third. For 100 any other double, H. F. Calder was first, with Marie Louise; H. F. Calder, second, with Farquhar; H. F. Woods, third.

For two vases of 100 blooms each of sweet peas, William Sim was first and second. He also secured the silver medal for six vases of 100 blooms each. Mr. Sim's varieties were Mrs. C. H. Totty,

A STEEL BENCH.

Wesley Wait, proprietor of the Newburgh Floral Co., Newburgh, N. Y., was granted a patent February 8, 1910, on a new bench for greenhouses, which may be either all steel construction, or steel framework with wood bottom and sides.

In his application for the patent Mr. Wait said: "The objects of my improvement are: (1) to provide a bench which may be readily and quickly placed in position; (2) which shall not be cumbersome; (3) in which neither nails, screws, adjusting screws, nor screw-threaded parts are used; (4) which shall be lasting, obviating frequent and costly renewal because of rotting of the parts by moisture as in the case of wooden construction; (5) which, if the metal parts become rusted by the moisture incident to greenhouses, may be readily disconnected; (6) which shall be cheap to manufacture. I accomplish these objects by the device illustrated in the accompanying drawing."

The illustration shows the general character of the bench, which is of steel and interlocking in all its parts. Dr. Wait was in the REVIEW office a few days ago with a model of the bench, which he set up in a few moments without the use of even so much as a screw driver. He stated that he is preparing to manufacture the bench and put it on the market.

them in these. Shade from sun and protect from frost and they will be all right. You will find that the double tulips, like Murillo and Couronne d'Or, take a little longer time to flower than La Reine, Yellow Prince and Keizerkroon; also that the large Yellow Trumpet narcissus comes in more quickly than the incomparabilis and Leedsii varieties.

Rambler Roses.

We like to have our rambler flowers opening about two weeks before Easter. Then they will be in fine condition if allowed a night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees. Keep the plants well spread out and water freely, especially where your plants have been pot-grown all summer. You will readily see the benefits of pot-grown over fall-lifted stock by this time. The trusses on the former are double the size of those on the latter, and the flowers seem to come of a better color and with more substance. Carefully avoid cold drafts. Mildew will speedily spoil a batch of plants if not carefully guarded against. Use sulphur on the steam pipes as a preventive.

Schizanthus.

Though not much seen as an Easter plant, there is a charm about the beautiful, airy-like schizanthus which appeals to about everyone. For Easter the plants should now be opening their flowers and be in a cool house—certainly not over 50 degrees at night and 45 degrees is better. The cooler they are grown the stockier they will be, and such plants require few supports, particularly if the dwarf forms of Wisetonensis are grown. No other annual is more easily grown and more quickly flowered than schizanthus, and anyone having nicely flowered pots will find them move at a lively rate at Easter, especially as they still are much of a novelty in store windows.

Bedding Geraniums.

It is difficult at this time to give the bedding stock adequate bench space; the increasing demands of many rapidly growing Easter plants cause them too often to be crowded until the Easter rush is over. This is unfortunate, as too often it means a serious permanent injury to them. Look the little plants over every few days and give them a fresh stand whenever possible. Remove moldy

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

This all-important Easter crop will require close attention during the next few weeks, in order to have all possible plants in flower for March 27. It is an early Easter, and it is always better to have the plants a little early than the reverse. Those which have buds of considerable size, some of which will show color within eight or ten days, should be moved to a cooler house. Do not let the change be too abrupt. We once saw a batch of lilies taken from a temperature of 65 degrees at night and placed in a cool, airy north house, held as near 45 degrees as possible. These lilies had the buds about ready to burst. As a matter of fact, few of them ever opened at all; the shock was too great. A drop of 5 degrees at a time is sufficient; then no injury will result. When opening, a colder house can be used to retard them.

Plants which are backward should have a night temperature of 65 to 70 degrees and frequent sprayings overhead. Air rather sparingly and bottle up all possible sun-heat. Such plants will be somewhat leggy and may lack substance when compared with cooler grown and gradually hardened stock, but if you can get even one flower open on a stem it may mean a sale. People will rarely buy those which have buds only. Water abundantly and use a pinch of nitrate of soda in the water, to help hurry along, as well as color up, the laggards.

Lilium candidum should now have its buds well separated. It takes a little shorter time to open than longiflorum and is better grown cooler. A minimum temperature of 50 degrees is better than 60 degrees, but let the plants have the higher temperature if they are late, for at Easter the flowers will bring double what they would a week later.

Spiraeas.

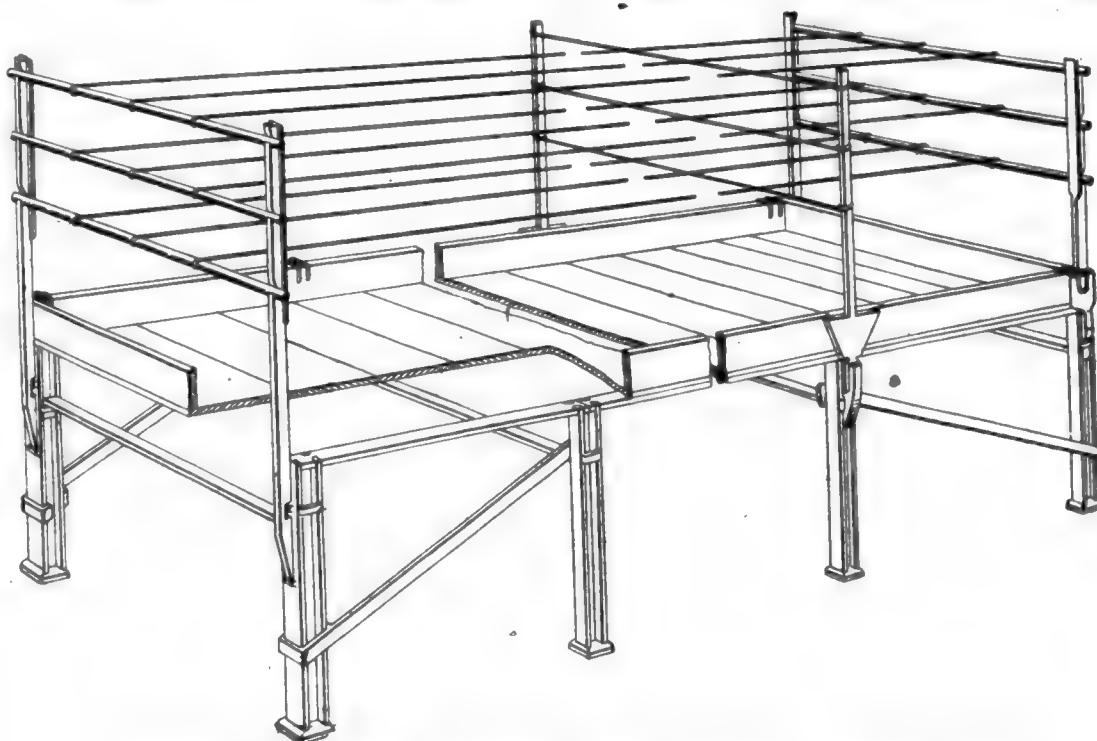

Spiraeas are thirsty subjects and can hardly be overwatered. They also relish manure water twice a week when in active growth. Elevate some of the plants on pots. Use saucers under them. This will give you nicely furnished specimens. While the plants will stand almost any amount of forcing, as the flowers start to open they should be grown cooler. Do not fumigate with tobacco stems or any powerful nicotine extracts where spiraeas are growing, as they are easily scorched. If stood on the floor and covered with papers they will be all right. Allow varieties like Gladstone and astilboides ten days longer than the old Japonica for full development.

Dutch Bulbs.

The first week in March is a good time to house hyacinths, tulips and narcissi for Easter. As a rule, they are, or should be, sufficiently well sprouted now to require no drawing up in the shade. Given full light from the start, much sturdier stalks are had. A few warm, clear days will send any of these bulbs on uncommonly fast, and it may be necessary to move them into a cool, shady house. With tulips, especially, use paper over the flowers on bright days to prevent their expansion.

If you get any of these bulbs in bloom some days earlier than you wished, stand them in a cold cellar, or dig out one or two empty coldframe sashes and stand

THE BROWN DEER PLANT.

The Holton & Hunkel Greenhouse Co., Milwaukee, is an enterprise entirely distinct from the Holton & Hunkel Co., wholesale florists. The ownership and management are the same, but the two industries are run each as an individual business for the purpose of maintaining an accurate account of what is being done under each head.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of the new range of the Holton & Hunkel Greenhouse Co., located at Brown Deer, Wis., eleven miles from the center of Milwaukee. Since this picture was taken one more house of equal size, namely 26x400 feet, was added, making eight in all, devoted to growing asparagus strings, American Beauties, Killarneys, Brides and White Killarneys. The place is heated with two 100 horse-power boilers, the condensation being returned by traps. A sidetrack to the boiler-shed makes unloading of coal easy.

The company has another lot of fourteen greenhouses located in Milwaukee, which are devoted to the growing of blooming plants, as well as Boston and Whitmani ferns, and valley, of which a specialty is made. All of the stock produced is handled through Holton & Hunkel Co.

for we have been cutting blooms all through the winter. I do not mean to imply that it does as well in winter as it does in the warm months, but we are more than satisfied with it. The houses have been carried at a night temperature of 64 to 65 degrees.

We have cut, from September 1 up to date, out of the house in which are the cement benches, 17,200 blooms, while from the house containing the wooden benches we have cut 9,340. From this record it would look as if this rose would do better on a solid bench, but I do not think so, for you must remember that the wooden benches were planted with poor stock, and mighty poor at that. Each house holds 1,150 plants.

I say, again, that we are highly satisfied with this rose, for several reasons. There are few unsalable blooms; in fact, the majority of stems and flowers are excellent. It is not subject to mildew. It is easy to keep free from red spider.

RAMBLER ROSES.

Will Crimson Rambler roses do well planted against the west side of a shed? Please state a few of the best outdoor climbing roses in pink and red for cut flowers.

M. B.

Crimson Rambler roses will do well planted against the west side of your shed. A few other good ramblers for cutting are: Hiawatha, single red; Farquhar, Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Tausendschon, pink, and Leuchstern, delicate pink. There is also a new form of Crimson Rambler of a perpetual blooming character, called Flower of Fairfield, well worthy of a trial.

WEAK-NECKED ROSES.

Can you tell me why my Brides and Maids should have crooked necks just below the flower? They are healthy, making a good growth, with fine foliage and flowers of good color and quality, except for the crooked necks. It was young stock, planted last July. The soil is rather light. The house is light and airy. Any helpful suggestions will be greatly appreciated.

C. L. D.

The reason why the stems of your roses are crooked or weak-necked, is lack of proper ventilation. The fact that a rose

MY MARYLAND.

After reading interesting articles at various times in the REVIEW, with reference to My Maryland, it has occurred to me that some of the readers might like to hear how this rose has done with us.

This is our first year with My Maryland and we were handicapped from the first, as we had our stock shipped in, and a good many of the plants were not what they should have been. We find that we have better stock after we have taken our own cuttings and grown them on. Next fall we expect to have some fine stock to start the season.

We planted My Maryland in two three-quarter-span houses, 125 feet long, each house having two 6-foot benches. In one house we had raised wooden benches; in the other, solid cement benches.

The house containing the cement benches was planted June 1, and with the best plants. The other house, containing the wooden benches, was planted June 26, and with the poorest plants.

Both houses have been treated alike as to mulching and liquid feeding. We gave the plants a light dressing of mulch about August 1. September 1 they received another light mulch. About October 1, as nearly as I can remember, we began feeding with liquid manure. This was kept up until about Thanksgiving, when they were given a heavy mulch, which would carry them through the dark weather. A month ago we started feeding them liquid again, every other watering.

I have noticed that in some of the articles it is stated that My Maryland is inclined to go to sleep in the winter months. We do not find that it does so with us, house can be kept up to the standard as far as temperature is concerned, and yet be far from having ideal conditions as regards rose growing, is certain.

I would suggest that C. L. D. should keep a night temperature of 56 to 58 degrees, with a day temperature of 60 to 75 degrees, according to the amount of sunshine, but at the same time he should give plenty of ventilation on every favorable occasion, even at the expense of fuel. There can be no other reason for weak necks than want of proper ventilation.

PETER M. MILLER.

Peter M. Miller, elected December 21 as vice-president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, is a native of Rothesay, Scotland, and served his apprenticeship in the seed business with the well known firm of Dobbie & Co., located there. He served three seasons at Dobbie & Co.'s seed farms in England. Coming to America in 1901, he first had charge of the flower seed and bulb department of Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston. In 1903 he went to Canada and traveled for the Steele-Briggs Seed Co., from Toronto to Vancouver, being later appointed manager of their branch in Winnipeg. Returning to Boston on the reorganization of the T. J. Grey Co., he became one of the new corporation and acts as secretary. The SPOT DISEASE ON GLADIOLI.

Last spring we received a consignment of America gladioli from an eastern firm. The soil in which we planted them was of medium richness and was also manured. They bloomed nicely, but several stalks seemed to rot off early. When the stock was dug, we noticed that about all this lot was affected with a blotch or scab, showing there was some fungous disease present.

Our Mrs. Francis King gladioli were planted about fifty feet away and they dug clean. Do you think we could treat the gladioli in the same way as Irish potatoes, for scab? S. & S.

The spot, or gladiolus, disease as it is termed by some, has been a subject of careful study by several state experiment stations during the last two years. So far as I can ascertain, the greatest progress in the solution of the problem has been made at Cornell University by Everett Wallace, under the direction of disease, but a condition, or a physical disintegration of the tissues. So far as my personal experience is concerned, I find that where any particular variety is inclined to this spot it is possible to provide soil conditions, as well as conditions between harvesting and planting time, which, if not entirely eliminating this spot, will greatly reduce the number of bulbs affected.

I do not believe the treatment for potato scab would eliminate this spot upon the gladiolus bulb, although it might have a tendency to check it. It has been demonstrated to my entire satisfaction that gladiolus bulbs that are known to be of strong constitution are less susceptible to the attacks of this spot, chance seedlings being more or less affected, while hand hybridized varieties in the same soil and under the same conditions would be immune.

I understand the bulletin in connection with this experimental work will soon be issued. I would suggest that you confer with Prof. H. H. Whetzel in regard to it. ARTHUR COWEE.

CYCLAMEN CULTURE.

[A paper by Christ. Winterlich, of Defiance, O., read at a meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, at Detroit, Mich., February 21, 1910.]

In attempting to say a few words regarding cyclamen culture, it is my desire to state how to grow good plants and what a cyclamen grower should know about it.

Years of experience in the growing of this beautiful winter blooming plant teach us that Christmas is the best selling season for cyclamens and effort should be made to sow the seed as early as the middle of August, to get in as many as possible for that date. Other sowings can be made until January. If sown as late as this, they would, perhaps, with good culture and everything in their favor, make strong 4-inch and 5-inch pot plants, but do not expect them to bloom until a year or thirteen months from their sowing.

The degree of success in growing cyclamens depends greatly upon the strain of seed used. Always get the best seed grown and of the highest standard, and disappointments will be fewer.

Sowing the Seed.

We are sowing our cyclamens in flats, 12x20x3 inches, inside measure, in rows an inch and a half apart, and in such flats we drop 500 seeds, about one-quarter inch apart in the rows. Of course, we usually make a sowing of about 20,000 or more at a time. For a florist that grows a limited quantity, I would advise that he sow the single seeds about one inch apart each way and grow them on until the plants have a nice ball of roots established; then shift them into flats, two to two and one-half inches apart, or into 2½-inch pots. I recommend the latter method, as they would make stockier plants if well taken care of while in such small pots.

The soil to sow in should be a loose mixture of about two-thirds flaky leaf-mold, with some loam, charcoal and sand added. This soil may do also for the first shift. For every following shift add some more loam and old hotbed soil. For the last two shifts we use some horn shavings, mixed with the soil in the proportion of a 5-inch potful to a bushel of soil.

Set the seed flats, which are thinly firm's business has shown a decided gain during the last two seasons, J. P. A. Guérineau, T. J. Grey and Peter M. Miller all being exceedingly popular in the trade and well known to a large clientele of private gardeners.

Mr. Miller has been a staunch supporter of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club since joining it, being valuable dur-

Prof. H. H. Whetzel, and, although the work is not completed, I think it has been decided by this station that the disease is of fungous growth. The best means of preventing or eliminating the disease, however, has not yet been determined, owing to further necessary experiments which are being made. There is some contention that the spot is not a covered with sphagnum moss, in a mild hotbed or greenhouse, with not too much ventilation until the seed germinates, which takes about four to five weeks. Keep them shaded and moist until the seedlings make the first leaf; then remove the moss and give them more light and ventilation gradually. Loosen the soil around the plants and keep the green moss removed; do this every three weeks at least, as this is essential to the growing of healthy plants.

Transplanting Into Flats.

We transplant the first sowing about eight or ten weeks after they were sown into flats, placing the plants about an inch and a half apart. We set them on shelves near the glass and give them an average night temperature of about 52 to 55 degrees and 10 degrees higher in the daytime, with plenty of fresh air. Never keep a close air or the plants will get weak, and such plants are hard to get through the hot summer months.

Do not shade cyclamens after the second part of October until the second part of February. Give the plants all the light possible until you see that they wilt even with two or three sprinklings, and then shade them only during the noon hours. Give them a sprinkling every day and twice or even three times in hot days; this will help to make large bulblets and of course the whole plant will get the benefit of it.

Plant them so that the bulblets are just covered. After you water them well, the watering will settle the soil so that the head of the bulb will be above the ground. I warn the grower not to plant too deep, as that would make spindly plants and weak bulbs. If planted too high, however, the bulbs grow hard and will never make a thriving plant. It is well to pick out the best marked and nicest plants for show plants right at the first shift, and keep them picked out until they make the plants desired.

Shifting Into Pots.

We manage to have the plants from the first sowing in 3-inch pots by the end of March, when they go on a mild hotbed. At the start keep the bed rather close, until you notice some root action. Shade them only in bright sunshine, from about 9:30 a. m. until 3 p. m. Sprinkle them at least once or twice a day. Keep the bottom heat at about 70 to 80 degrees. Gradually give more ventilation and maintain a temperature of about 55 to 65 degrees; any warmer will make spindly plants and much cooler will give them a setback. Shift whenever the potball is fairly well rooted; do not let them get potbound. Give them only a fair sized pot, with one-fifth drainage, for which washed coal ashes or coarse gravel is the best material.

Cyclamens, more than any other plants, enjoy clean pots. They also like a mild hotbed after every shift, but this is not necessary during the warm season. Should you use hotbeds or bottom heat during the summer, do not make the mistake of keeping the bed too close, as the bulbs would get soft and the plants would be liable to suffer. It is not the heat in the bed, but it is the bottom heat you want for quick root action, to give the plant a good start.

In the Larger Pots.

In shifting into larger pots, set the plants so that the bulb is about covered with soil; the first watering will then settle the soil, so as to show about one-fourth of the bulb. If the bulb is planted too high, it will get hard too soon and may burst or set on the buds too early. On the other hand, when planted too deep the plants get spindly, fall over and the flower stems rot easily. Most of the mistakes are made in watering and keeping the plants too wet and soggy. Let the plants dry out fairly well before you give another watering; this will keep the soil sweet, which is of the utmost importance for cyclamens.

The shade should not be too dense. We used thin burlap or sashes made out of plaster strips for shading, to good advantage. Last season we used shades made of bamboo sticks, which are easy to handle and quite durable.

Usually we make the last shift in August or September. It is now advisable to plant so the bulb comes to stand about one-half in the soil. This is very important to the setting of the buds and the plant comes to bloom with more flowers at one time; also the buds are not so liable to rot off and the plants are easier to keep clean.

During the warm nights in August and September the sashes can be removed from the plants; the dew will freshen up the plants, keep them short and help to set the buds.

Always give the plants plenty of room, so they will not grow high and spindly. Separate the foliage, so the younger leaves and buds can develop more easily. This keeps the plants from growing one-sided. About the end of June, we set our sashes on a railing, so the space between the lower part of the sash and the hotbed frame is about six to eight inches, while the upper part of the sash is raised or lowered according to the amount of ventilation that is wanted on the plants. On windy days let the ventilation down in the direction of the wind.

Housing the Plants.

In the latter part of October we commence to house the plants. Up to this time we have the beds covered with blankets during cold nights; this is a good way of holding your plants in the very best condition until the early mums will make room. In setting the plants on the greenhouse benches, give them plenty of space, as now is the time when cyclamens make the best and quickest growth and should have the chance to grow into shapely specimens. No shade should be required any more. Should the sun make it disagreeable for the plants, give them a fine sprinkling to keep them from wilting, and you had better get the plants gradually used to the bright weather while they are outside.

Keep a free circulation of fresh air on them nearly all the time. Water carefully and be particular not to drop the water right in the head of the plant, as it would rot the buds and leaves at the bulb. Space the plants about every two weeks, so the foliage will not crowd. The better the plants are shaped, the better they will sell, and shapely plants can only be secured by spacing them well apart. Old flowers and leaves should be pulled; never cut them off, as they may rot down to the bulb and spoil the whole plant.

Do not try to force a cyclamen by raising the temperature, for if this is done the plants will get a sleepy appearance and the flowers will be small and poorly colored. We should tell our customers to set the cyclamens in a moderately cool place, in a temperature not to exceed 65 degrees, in order to have the plants last longer and give better satisfaction to the customers as well as to the florist.

For Easter Flowering.

Should you want some cyclamens for

Carnations

THE TREND OF THE TIMES.

[A paper by Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia March 1, 1910.]

There seems to be no decrease in the number of promising novelties year after year; in fact, they seem to increase in number and improve wonderfully in quality. Those of us who were in Pittsburgh could not help but remark on this feature of the novelties exhibited there. Just what to expect from these novelties, from a commercial point of view, is a question for the future. No doubt some of them will prove a disappointment either to the originator or the buyer, or both, but what a monotonous world this would be with no disappointments to make us properly appreciate our successes!

Recommendations that Were Ignored.

In my address at Pittsburgh, as president of the Carnation Society, I recommended that reports be secured from a number of growers, giving their experience with the introductions of the previous year, these reports to be sent to the secretary of the Carnation Society and published in pamphlet form each year. The society, or rather the committee I appointed to take up the recommendations in this address, did not see fit to even bring this up for discussion. We can hardly ask the trade papers to take it up, but the various florists' clubs might have an experience meeting each January and discuss this matter of the preceding year's novelties. The opinions of the commission man and the store man would be quite as valuable as those of the growers. We can not expect to get as good results as the national society could, but with a free interchange of opinion we can buy the second year novelties with some assurance of success and quite a number of the $50 per thousand varieties would be hunting buyers at 50 cents per thousand. Publicity of failures is needed, and badly needed.

Elbert Hubbard says: "Let each individual work toward the betterment of as many other individuals as he possibly can and his financial reward will be money flowing into his pockets as naturally as water flows into a river." How many successes have you had among the novelties bought last season? Don't keep them to yourself. How many failures have you had among the novelties you bought last season? Tell us about them. Some one among us may be able to put you on the track of making failure a success. If not, then neither you nor I want to plant the failure another season.

Another point I tried to bring out, and which was ignored by my committee, was to have a tag attached to each bunch of flowers giving the date they were cut and the grower's name. This in the course of time would be looked for and demanded by the final consumer as a guarantee of good faith. I would like to see a "fresh flower" law enacted on similar lines to the pure food law and believe that such a law properly enforced would treble the use of our flowers. Not long ago I was in a store where a good looking vase of Enchantress stood in the window. The clerk told me about half the blooms in this vase were flowers Grow the Keepers.

Let the grower select such varieties as are known to be good keepers, making this one of his first demands in buying a novelty. Then let him grow them properly and tag them, as previously suggested, and in the course of time the man who does this will find himself on the high road to success, and the man who does not will be traveling in an opposite direction.

Enchantress and all of its sports can, if well grown, be turned out moderate keepers, but the careless grower wants to leave them alone. Pink Delight, Victory, White Perfection, all of the Lawson type, Winona and O. P. Bassett are all good keepers under ordinary culture and it is this class of varieties that should be planted in quantity and some of the softer but perhaps more beautiful sorts be experimented with until you learn to handle them and turn out flowers that will give good satisfaction.

Another point I tried to bring before the Carnation Society was our lack of business methods and ideas. The retailer in our business is perhaps nearest to 1910 business methods, but he has much to learn. The commission man follows along about 1900 style, and the grower is lagging back somewhere about 1850 style. Not that I know much about 1850 business methods, but it will do for a simile, and I believe it is a correct one. We do not need cultural methods—we have them once a week in the trade papers—but we sadly need business methods, and we need someone to come into our societies who has made a study of modern business to tell us something about this end of our work.

Money In the Business.

There is some money in carnation growing, in witness thereof just note the modern houses costing $8,000 and $10,000 going up exclusively for carnations. The man who has the cash to pay for these structures is all right, but the man who builds on credit will have many a weary year before his houses are paid for. I maintain that the modern carnation establishment can not produce carnations at a profit for less than a two-cent average from September 1 to June 1. Keep your own records, charging up every item of expense, interest, taxes, wear and tear and every item that goes into the production of your carnation blooms and see if I am wrong.

When you see retailers paying $16,000 a year rental for their stores, and wholesale establishments without number in all of the larger cities, with the growers from a distant market and that they were three days old, the balance of the vase being fresh flowers from a local grower. Enchantress is not the best of keepers, and we all know that the final consumer getting flowers from this vase was foreordained to disappointment.

Let our carnations be sold under a guarantee by the retail man that they have been cut on a certain date and add a little advice as to the best method of keeping, and many an occasional buyer will be turned into a regular customer. It is not so much the price of flowers that interferes with their sale as the fact that in many cases the buyer receives so little value for the money spent.

adding house after house, you naturally conclude each and every one is making money "à la Rockefeller." Analyze the situation carefully and you will find a triumvirate competing hordes.

I am not up in business methods well enough to suggest a remedy, but I want to give this as an opinion and that is: There are entirely too many commission houses in the larger centers, and the competition among them is getting to be a bit hard on the grower. The grower, the retail man, the commission man and the final consumer are all component parts of what is, and ought to be, an immense business. The healthy increase and life of that business needs the encouragement of each of these sections. Get together.

CARNATION ALMA WARD.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from an exceedingly fine photograph by John F. Johnston. The variety is Alma Ward, the white carnation which the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, has grown for some four years and which it has exhibited with such invariable success during that time.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

American Novelties.

By force of habit I annually tell the American raisers of carnations how their creations fare and what we think of them, over here in England. As our conditions and system of cultivation are so vastly different from yours in America, I feel that I can speak without reserve or fear of giving offense, because over here the buying of new varieties of carnations from America is looked upon as quite a reckless speculation, simply because conditions are almost reversed and the raisers cannot in the least be held responsible. Those of us who do speculate are a sort of cat's-paw for the others, who keep their powder dry and grab a share of the winners later, when they know which ones are adapted to our climate.

Fail Under Cloudy Skies.

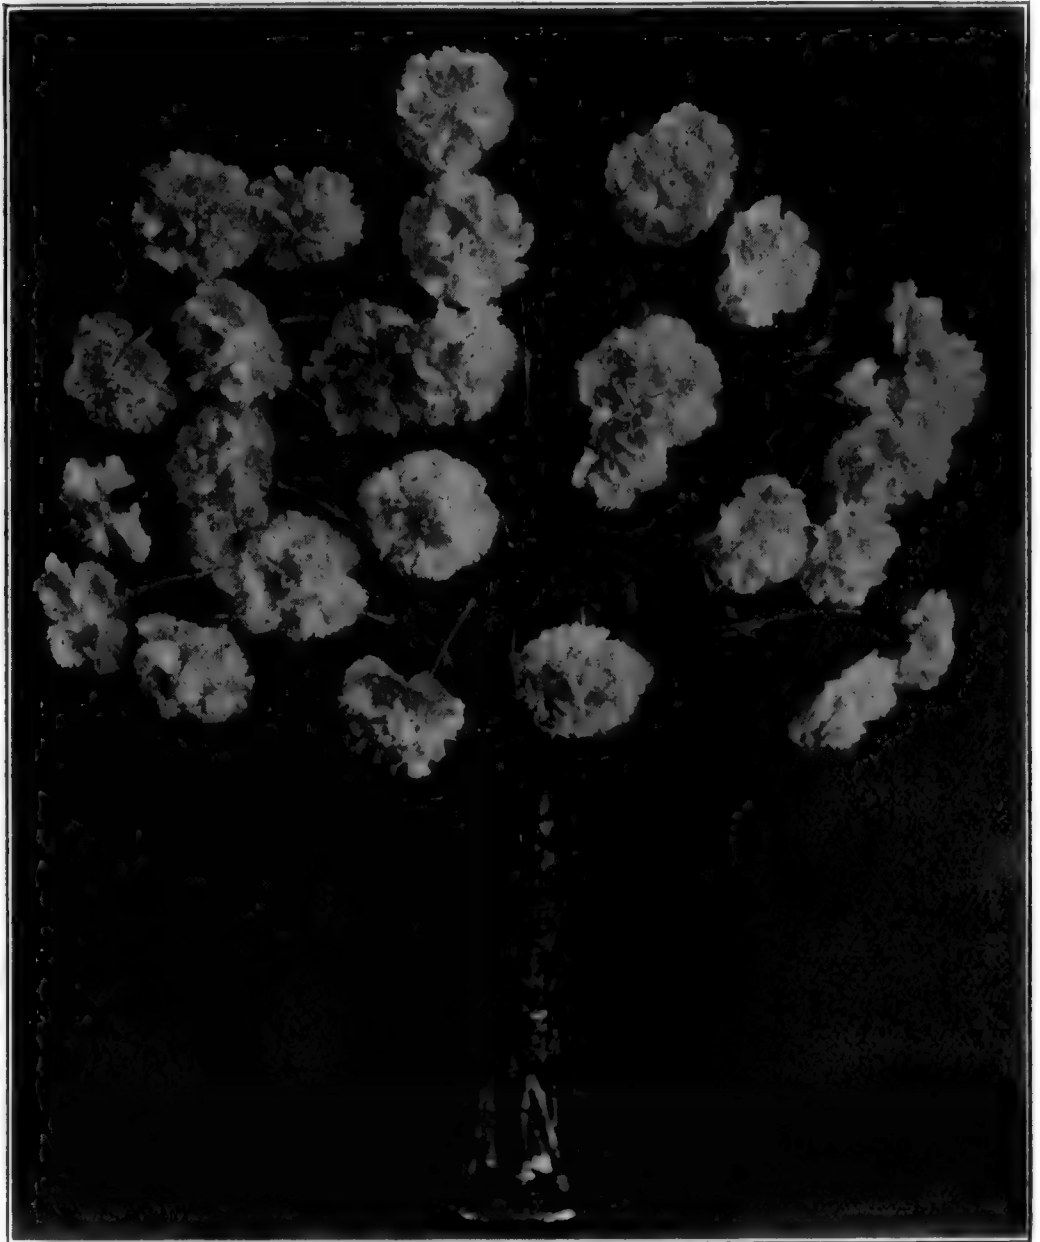

Apple Blossom has failed utterly, and in our dull climate only produces poor blooms of a dull white, instead of delightful flowers overlaid with pink, which even its name leads us to expect.

Alvina, in its habit, is one of the best and freest of all the American novelties we have tried and is almost ideal for cultivation in pots, being quite compact, with a reasonably short stem. Its one shortcoming is that the flowers develop poorly and come with an indifferent color in midwinter over here. That is why Alvina has failed.

In Bay State we all thought we had the perfect fancy carnation, one with gigantic flowers which could easily overshadow all its contemporaries. It made a fine summer growth, still further raising our hopes, yet dashed them all to the ground by producing, after a long wait, flowers below the average size. In fact, this variety is not as good as M. A. Patten over here.

Beautiful, but Unprofitable.

Lucille with us has produced some fine and beautiful flowers, and if we were simply growing carnations for recreation we should be perfectly satisfied with it, but, under the prevailing circumstances, we are compelled to judge a new carnation more from the returns it can show than from the beauty of its blooms. That is why we say Lucille will not pay the Britisher to grow for cut flowers.

Pink Delight has made some friends, even among the purely market growers, and if May Day was not in the field many would take it up on account of the shade of color, which is always popular in London. Its long and somewhat shy habit of growth is not at all suited to the British method of cultivation. The flowers are also not up to exhibition standard over here. In two years' time Pink Delight will be entirely blotted out.

Two That Succeeded.

May Day is quite good all the way, and, in our eyes, the best novelty sent out in America last year. We like that class of growth—not too strong. This variety also produces a moderate stem, not going to excess, while the flowers are refined in appearance.

Mrs. Chas. Knopf has also done well with us, and we shall get all we can for next season. We grew it very cool and obtained much better blooms than from Enchantress, as well as a better color.

O. P. Bassett gave us great promise in the autumn and early winter, producing some excellent blooms, but the first fog completely knocked it over, the growth being slow and the flowers off color. We shall try it another season.

Would Need to Import the Climate.

Ruby reminds us of the old variety, Harry Fenn, and has the same weakness in midwinter over here, that of failing to develop its flowers. What few we have seen well developed were full and large, but we should have to import climate to grow Ruby and make it pay.

Wanoka, I am told, is Indian for "One of a kind," and in the case of this variety it is a relief to think so.

As to W. H. Taft, I am afraid the President would not feel complimented if he knew what we thought of his namesake.

Mrs. J. C. Vaughan has failed utterly. It is difficult to find one redeeming feature in it. MONTAGU C. ALLWOOD.

RUST AND FAIRY RING.

Under separate cover I have sent two carnation plants that are affected with some disease. It started among my plants some time ago and seems to be becoming general, although the plants are in two different houses. I have grown carnations for several years and gave them about the same care this season as usual, but never before had any such trouble. The leaves turn dry and look as if they had been burnt. Please give me the name of the disease and state what remedy to apply. W. D.

The specimens forwarded were badly affected with fairy ring and also showed some rust, and any plants which are as bad as the ones forwarded might as well be pulled up and burnt at once. It is now getting too late to expect to doctor up such plants and get any profitable returns from them by the end of the present season. It will be better to destroy them and use the room for some other spring crop. A. F. J. B.

WELL'S WRITINGS.

"Dear Mr. Editor and readers, may I ask you a secret? Were you ever in love? I mean sufficiently so to make your eyes strike fire, and your heart go pitty-pat like a lamb's tail? If you were, you will sympathize with the writer when he explains to you how he was similarly affected, only not quite so badly as some of you young men who are still around about the age of 20. No, for I am the best part of a long way on the road for three score and ten, and I thought I was proof against being affected by a sweetly pretty face. But the following will prove:

"One day while I was in America, I was paying a visit with friend Totty to a place called Flatbush, N. Y., where there is a florist's establishment carried on by Mr. Eugene Dailedouze. I was struck by many things I saw there, especially a house about 100 feet long full of Baby. Just fancy a house full of Baby. Yes, and the next house was full of White Babies. Yes, dear readers, there were two long houses full of Babies, one full of yellow and the other full of White Babies. What! fall in love with Babies? No, not me; I've had my share of Babies. But after going through a forest of carnations and chrysanthemums, I suddenly stopped, for directly in front of me was one of the most beautiful faces I ever beheld. Could I ever forget it? No, it has haunted me ever since. But it would take the writer of a love story to describe all the charms (and one of my age would blush in the attempt). 'But I must ask your name.' 'Whitehouse.' Whitehouse!

been my motto, in this as in all other affairs. But what do I see in the WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW today? Whitehouse is appearing at a beauty show at Pittsburg; and this is how it reads:

"Dailedouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y., with Whitehouse, took a medal over three of the finest vases of 100 whites any set of judges ever tackled, and Alma Ward was among them."

"Oh, Whitehouse! * * * Some day, shortly, a boat will cross the Atlantic; in that boat will be a box; in that box will be Whitehouse. But Whitehouse, as your readers will see, is a carnation. Will she reach me? Time will prove."

"The two houses of Babies were the chrysanthemums called Baby (yellow) and White Baby."

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

Its Use in Greenhouses.

The REVIEW receives so many requests for information about the use of hydrocyanic acid gas that we reprint here the instructions for fumigating greenhouses, prepared by John J. Davis, assistant to the Illinois state entomologist:

The materials necessary for fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas are potassium cyanide (ninety-eight to ninety-nine per cent pure), commercial sulphuric acid and water; and the utensils required are half-gallon or gallon stone, earthen or granite jars, and a supply of ordinary small paper bags.

It is impossible to give a set formula prescribing the exact quantity of potassium cyanide to be used, owing to differences in the tightness of greenhouses. In those of average tightness I have used it on roses and cucumbers, without injury to them, at the rate of one ounce to 3,500 cubic feet of space.

The number of cubic feet in the house should first be accurately calculated. The than the average tightness, we may safely use the potassium cyanide at the rate of one ounce to every 3,500 cubic feet of space, and 24,000 divided by 3,500 equals 6.8+, which is the number of ounces required in this illustrative case.

The Necessary Preparations.

The next procedure is to get the materials in readiness for use, and to place the jars in the house. For every ounce of the potassium cyanide used, two ounces of sulphuric acid and four ounces of water are required. Two ounces of the cyanide is about the right quantity for each half-gallon jar; therefore, for a house of the foregoing dimensions, four jars should be placed at equal intervals along the aisles, and the 6.8+ ounces of it divided into four equal parts, and each part put into one of the paper bags. These are used not only for convenience in handling the cyanide when placing it in the jars, but also because they slightly delay the action of the acid upon it, thus giving the fumigator ample time to leave the house before the reaction occurs.

The jars being placed and the cyanide properly weighed and bagged, the next step is to close the ventilators, in order to prevent all avoidable escape of the gas. The water—four fluid ounces to each avoirdupois ounce of cyanide—is then placed in each jar, the sulphuric acid—half as much as of the water—is added, and as soon after as possible the bags of cyanide should be put into the jars and the house vacated immediately. Doors should be locked and labels posted designating the danger. No one should enter the house until it has been thoroughly aired by opening the side doors, and the ventilators, if convenient. It is advisable to fumigate in the evening, keeping the house closed until morning. I have never found a greenhouse so tight that the fumes would remain in it in dangerous quantity all night; nevertheless, it is safest to air the house well before entering.

Precautions and General Directions.

As cyanide of potassium is a powerful poison, it should be handled as little as possible, and if touched with the bare hands they should be thoroughly washed at once. It should be stored in tightly closed cans or jars, plainly labeled, and kept where it will be inaccessible to per-

ASTERS IN POTS.

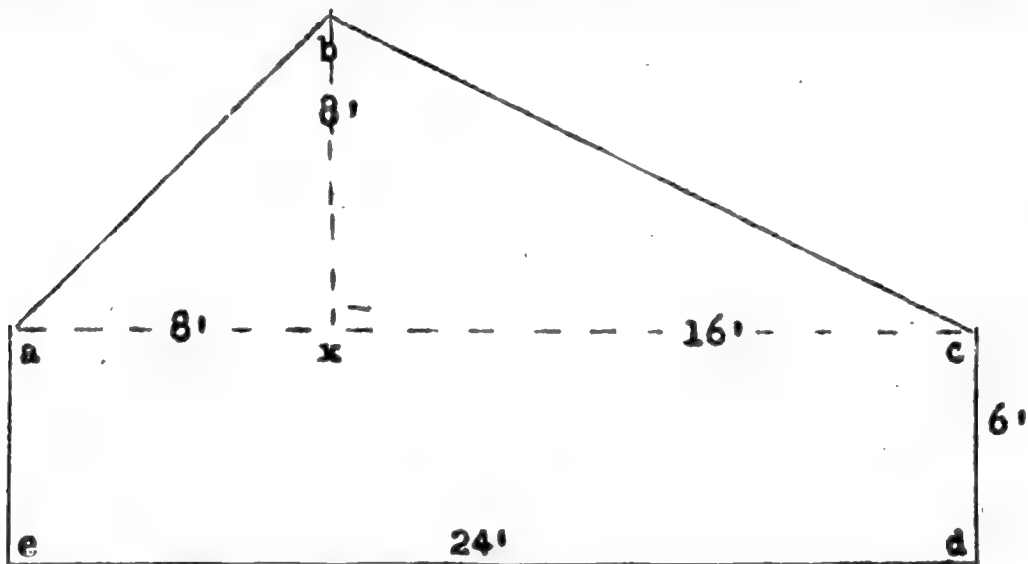

I often have calls for asters in pots, in bloom. Will you kindly tell me what varieties are especially suitable to grow in pots and what special preparation of soil is necessary to bring the best results? I intend to grow them outdoors.

M. W.

Compost such as you would use for chrysanthemums or carnations will answer well for asters in pots. Three-fourths good pasture loam and one-fourth well rotted cow manure is a good mixture. Plunge the pots in ashes or soil, to prevent their drying out. If allowed to root through the bottoms of the pots into good soil, they will be much finer plants.

The robust varieties, such as Semple's and American Branching, are less desirable for pot culture than Queen of the Market, Victoria and Mignon. The earliest variety of all is Dawn of Day, a pure white variety, which one grower has flowered as early as May.

Method of Figuring Cubical Contents of Greenhouse.

Where had I heard that name? Had I heard it, or had I read it? Why, had I not read 'From Log Cabin to Whitehouse'—the story of President Lincoln, who worked so hard and educated himself until he rose from the lowly life of a log cabin until he became the President of the United States, and resided at Whitehouse. But what of my beautiful Whitehouse? I can scarcely get the name out of my thoughts. 'Whitehouse must be mine,' and now some three months have elapsed since my first sight, what have I done to win her? Private detective agency? No; fair means have always method of doing this may be illustrated by a simple computation on the dimensions given in the accompanying figure, the understanding being that the length of the house is 100 feet.

The cubic contents of the rectangular part of the house, a c d e, equals $24 \times 6 \times 100 = 14,400$ cubic feet; that of the triangular part, a b x, equals $8 \times 8 \times 100 \div 2 = 3,200$ cubic feet; and that of the other triangular part, b c x, equals $8 \times 16 \times 100 \div 2 = 6,400$ cubic feet. The cubic contents of this house are, therefore, $14,400 + 3,200 + 6,400 = 24,000$ cubic feet. Assuming the house to be of no more

WILLIAM BLACKER'S PLACE.

William Blacker has been in the florists' business in the same county in Pennsylvania for more than twenty years. He spent ten years in the business at Houtzdale and now has been more than ten years at Clearfield, where he has two establishments. The accompanying illustration shows his residence and principal place, but Mr. Blacker also is superintendent for the Clearfield Cemetery Co., and has a range of greenhouses adjoining the cemetery. One plant is used for cut flowers and the other for pot plants and bedding stock. He has 10,000 feet of glass.

AT RIDGEWAY, PA.

The accompanying illustration gives the street view of the Mountain Park Greenhouse at Ridgeway, Pa., of which H. W. Girton is manager. The establishment has recently been built. It consists of three houses 24x82, one house 11x82, a store, boiler-shed, etc., 18x72. The house in the front of the range, which shows in the picture, was glazed the last week in September of this year. The construction is of modern character. The roofs are trussed, angle-iron purlins being employed, so that the houses are extremely light. As is always the case in small towns, a miscellaneous stock must be grown, including about everything that the trade ever handles. The prospect for business in 1910 is said to be excellent.

OBITUARY.Geo. W. Schroyer.

Geo. W. Schroyer, one of the pioneer florists of Lancaster, Pa., died at his home in that city February 22, at the age of 91 years. Though he had suffered several attacks of illness during the last few years, his death was due to old age and the general exhaustion of his vital energies. For a man of his years he was wonderfully well preserved, with the carriage of a man of middle age, and his keen intellect was unimpaired to the last.

Mr. Schroyer was born at Lewisburg, Pa., September 9, 1818. He was a son of Colonel Christian Schroyer, a man of prominence in his community. He received his primary training in the district school and in an evening writing school, rounding out his rather limited literary knowledge with a short term at a grammar school. When eighteen years old he started out for himself in the world, walking to Harrisburg, where he obtained a position as a printer in the office of a paper called the Keystone. He continued in its service until he became foreman.

While residing in Harrisburg he married, in 1845, Miss Annie E., daughter of J. B. Thompson, of Harrisburg. In the fall of the same year he bought a paper called the Spy, at Columbia, which he sold two years later, returning to Harrisburg. There he remained until 1854, when he removed to Lancaster and acted as foreman for different newspapers until 1862, when he resigned to engage in outdoor work, rendered necessary by ill health. That year he bought a fruit farm of seven acres. He grew at first outdoor fruits and vegetables, but soon entered the ranks of the florists and built up a flourishing trade, with a large range of greenhouses.

Associated with him in the business was his son, Harry A. Schroyer, who is treasurer of the Lancaster city school board. This son is the only surviving member of the family. Mrs. Schroyer died nearly twenty years ago.

Maurice Butterfield.

Maurice Butterfield, 64 years old, proprietor of nurseries at Lee's Summit and Farmington, Mo., died at Winona, Tex., February 20, of Bright's disease. Mr. Butterfield removed to Lee's Summit from Ohio in 1868 and started the Lee's Summit Star Nurseries, which he conducted to the time of his death. In 1900 the Missouri-Pacific Iron Mountain railway system and the city of Farmington, Mo., made concessions to him and induced him to go there and open the Farmington nurseries and greenhouses.

Mr. Butterfield was a benefactor and one of the organizers of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, and also of the Jackson county fair at Lee's Summit, Mo. Recently he went to Texas on a visit to his son, in the hope that he might benefit his health. He is survived by his wife and eight children, five sons and three daughters. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, under whose auspices the funeral was held at Farmington, Mo.

F. A. Pinoteau.

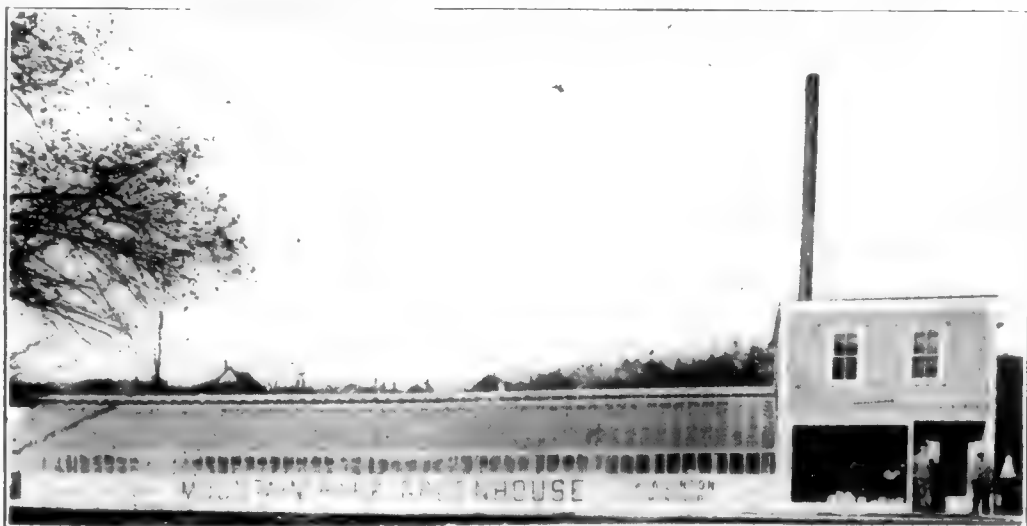

Fred A. Pinoteau, superintendent of Montreal parks, passed away suddenly February 23, at his home, after an illness of less than a day's duration. On the day before his death Mr. Pinoteau was performing his duties at the city hall and to all appearances was in good health. That evening, on returning to his home on Lafontaine park, he took sick, but his condition did not seem serious. The next day he took a turn for the worse, and died within a short time. Syncope was the cause of death.

Born in France, he came to Canada with his parents while quite a young boy. He was employed in the parks department for some years. For a time he was assistant to his brother, Auguste Pinoteau, who died in August, 1908, and on the death of his brother he succeeded to the post.

He was 39 years of age and is survived by a widow and three children. The funeral services were held on Saturday morning, February 26, at the church of the Immaculate Conception, and were largely attended by members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and the various fraternal organizations with which the deceased had been identified.

John C. Hubbard.

In the death of John C. Hubbard at Burlington, Ia., January 30, the arts and crafts basket world lost a valuable member and one who has done much for florists. Mr. Hubbard first started for himself in a small way in Ashtabula, O., and after a struggle of two years succeeded in bringing his work to the notice of local capitalists, who founded the Madison Basketcraft Co. Later, difficulties arose, and he severed connection with this firm, later taking up the work with the Burlington Willow Ware Co., where he was employed up to the time of his death. His work from the start was artistic.

WELL'S WRITINGS.

W. Wells, the widely known English chrysanthemum grower, who visited the eastern edge of the United States last autumn, has, since his return home, written many things about us for the edification of the readers of the British trade press. Here is one that is out of the ordinary, from the Horticultural Advertiser of February 16:

"Dear Mr. Editor and readers, may I ask you a secret? Were you ever in love? I mean sufficiently so to make your eyes strike fire, and your heart go pitty-pat like a lamb's tail? If you were, you will sympathize with the writer when he explains to you how he was similarly affected, only not quite so badly as some of you young men—who are still around about the age of 20. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dornier, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
THE REVIEW brings results.

MARCH is here, and we all are ready for spring.

A HOLLAND firm has a seedling of Caroline Testout and Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, named White Caroline Testout, that they think will prove the best rose ever.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

EVERY advertisement in the Want department of the REVIEW represents a legitimate, actual need—and that the needs of the trade are many a glance at that section of the paper will show. Watch the Wants—and use them.

IT now is proposed, in England, to raise a fund to institute a Peter Barr Memorial Medal, to be awarded annually in connection with work among daffodils; and the provision of a fund for the maintenance of an orphan through the medium of the Royal Gardeners' Orphan Fund. To carry out these proposals a general committee has been formed, with C. H. Curtis, Adelaide Road, Brentford, Middlesex, as secretary.

ALBERT M. HERR, last president of the American Carnation Society, thinks there are too many commission houses in the large centers and advances the new theory that their competition is "hard on the growers." Not many, we think, will agree with him. Commission house competition appears to the REVIEW to be the strongest of guarantees that the grower will not only get every penny that is coming to him but that keen intelligence will be indefatigably applied to making the stock realize every dollar it is worth. The commission man works far harder for the growers' interests than the growers themselves would work were there no commission men.

COVERS THE FIELD.

THE GODFREY CALLA.

In the REVIEW of February 24, page 7, T. N. makes an inquiry with reference to the Godfrey calla, asking how it should be cultivated and whether it is better than the common calla. According to our experience, it is far superior to the common calla. It produces more flowers, which are a purer white and not so coarse. We have had bulbs no larger than hickory nuts produce flowers the first season. Our first stock was in 2-inch pots when we received it in June, and the following winter they produced four flowers to the plant.

It produces more flowers to the square foot of bench room than any other calla we ever grew. The size depends upon the age of the bulbs and the richness of the soil. Our oldest bulbs are about five years old and are producing flowers about the size of the ordinary varieties, while the younger bulbs produce smaller flowers.

We plant in the house in August, for winter flowers, and in May or June we dry them off and take up the bulbs. The small ones we plant out in the field, taking them up in the fall and planting them in the house. These produce from two to four flowers per plant, while the large ones run from six to eight in a season. We plant the largest bulbs six inches apart each way, covered with about an inch of soil.

We use the same soil as for carnations and plant them in the side benches, where it is too shady for carnations to do well. We also use boxes, three feet long, six inches deep and seven inches wide; these hold ten plants and can be placed at the ends of the houses. We keep the temperature as near 50 degrees at night as possible. After growing it beside the old variety for two years, we kept it in preference and feel confident that any carnation grower can have good success with it.

The Great Central Market.

An immense amount of stock has come in and gone out during the last seven days. Sales have run into a pretty fair sum of money with all the wholesalers, in spite of the extremely low prices at which a large proportion of the receipts have been moved, but the wholesalers always are happiest when stock is comparatively scarce; depression of prices is reflected in personal temperaments. And the wholesalers have not only had a week of depression, but the indications are that the conditions of the last week are only what might be called a taste of that which is to come. In some cases the cancellation of standing orders may be taken as an indication of dull business in other cities, but a more general cause for cancellations is the increase in local supplies. The shipping trade always is the backbone of the Chicago market, and it has been especially so the last week or two, but the backbone weakens when cuts are on in all the towns through the Chicago shipping territory. Many of the largest users of stock have some glass of their own, or some home source of supply for a part of their needs. When this home glass is in full crop not much need be drawn from Chicago. Just now it appears that crops are coming on everywhere and Chicago wholesalers will be left to rely in a large degree upon the local outlet and the shipping orders of those who can use quantity at a price. There has been some improvement in quality within the last week.

Beauty crops have increased considerably, but are not yet what anyone could call heavy. There are, however, plenty of Beauties for all buyers and prices are easier. Some splendid Killarney are seen in all lengths. The average quality of this rose with all growers is good; only an exceptional one is turning out other than first-class stock. But there are one or two who do not yet understand Killarney, and the difference in the selling price of their cuts as compared with the price of the perfect flowers is considerable. There are some splendid Bride and Maid, plenty of Richmond, fine Jardine, good Field and Uncle John. Rose crops have increased to the point where prices have become extremely reasonable in comparison to the high quality of the goods.

The carnation growers will find little satisfaction in the returns of the last week or ten days. The receipts have been much the heaviest of the season. Some of the stock is of superior quality, but there continues to be a large percentage of splits and other low grades. There has been a fair call for fancy white and occasionally a brisk inquiry for good reds, but by far the largest part of the cut has had to be jobbed off when a day out to those who run the cheap sales, and there has been loss of flowers for which no buyer could be found at any price. Carnation averages probably never were lower for a week in February.

We Claim ThatAPHINE

Is the most effective insecticide now on the market for the destruction of the MEALY BUG, BROWN and WHITE SCALE.

Others may claim their remedy to be "just as good"—but we claim ours to be better—and have publicly proven this beyond a doubt.

We also claim Aphine to be no less effective against Green, Black and White Fly, Red Spider and Thrips.

We are prepared to guarantee a uniform product at all times and one that will do all we claim for it.

For Green, Black and White Fly it is used at the strength of 1 part Aphine to 40 parts water.

For Red Spider, Thrips, Slugs and Ants, 1 part Aphine to 25 parts water.

For Mealy Bug, White and Brown Scale, 1 part Aphine to 15 parts water.

Price, $2.50 per gallon

Aphine is becoming universally recognized as the leading general insecticide for the greenhouse and garden.

Your spring order will not be complete if it does not include Aphine.

If your supply house does not yet handle Aphine, write us for names of our nearest selling agents.

But the carnation grower can get consolation from his neighbor whose crop is violets. The quality of the eastern violets is nothing to brag of but the supply is not extremely large. The local singles are fine and the crop is heavy. The best stock has been sold in small lots at fair figures, and the poorest has been thrown away. Far the greater part of the receipts have been sold at from $2 to $4 per thousand in large lots. As the local growers of singles did not get in crop in season to get the high prices, they need even more sympathy than the carnation grower does.

Sweet peas have come in like a deluge. It seems that pretty nearly every grower of any other crop, and especially every carnation grower, has found a place for a few sweet peas. The stock so produced seldom possesses the necessary quality to realize a profitable price. The buyers have become accustomed to the fancy peas produced in large quantity by the men who have made this crop a specialty, and where a grower sends in only a few bunches a day of short-stemmed, weak flowers, it is next to impossible to find any buyer who will take them; the good buyers all want the fancy goods and have no difficulty in getting them. There really is nothing that sells better than the long, fancy peas the specialists produce.

There is an abundance of everything in the bulb line, from Easter lilies and callas to Paper Whites and freesias, and prices on the small bulb stock are down to where it seems difficult for a grower to realize any profit on it.

The one line on which the market is lightly supplied is greens. Asparagus strings are scarce and if it were not for the asparagus bunches from Florida, the demand for this green could not be supplied. Not much Sprenger is seen. Good adiantum is scarce. Smilax is fairly plentiful. Everything of the hardy green character is abundant.

The Lily Situation.

The prospect for lilies for Easter is the general theme of conversation. To hear the growers tell it, each one thinks he is going to have his own crop ready in time, but that nobody else is. Naturally, with so early an Easter, lilies will be less plentiful and poorer in quality than usual, but the wholesalers feel that the one way to insure a strong finish is to book a lot of advance orders at reasonable prices. To them few orders mean a slump March 26. Therefore the early bird is catching his worm about as usual.

February Business.

It does not appear that February business has broken any records. Valentine's day, Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays made a little better trade than in other years, but otherwise the month was not more active than last season. Lent was earlier, which counted for something; also, the weather was colder. At the beginning of the month prices were high, especially on roses, but they eased off rapidly and it was not long before carnations, bulb stock, sweet peas and violets were as cheap as they ever are in a winter month, with roses not above normal. Beauties were in light supply all month, but the demand also was light, so that prices were moderate and the money taken in did not run as high for most growers as it did in other Februaries, when larger cuts were sold at lower rates.

Various Notes.

Hoerber Bros. have let the contract to the John C. Moninger Co. for the material for the eleven houses to be put up this spring, just doubling the capacity of their plant at Des Plaines. It is the intention to use the Garland gutter on this range. Harry Manheim, for several years with J. A. Budlong, began work February 28 in the city store of Hoerber Bros.

The mother of the Hunt brothers, of Evanston, died Saturday, February 26, the funeral being held Tuesday morning from the family residence at 1515 Main street. Peter Reinberg says that he has two cars of glass on hand, but will not use it this season. However, there is plenty of time for him to change his mind, and election will soon be over. He says he will make additional room for White Killarney by dropping Maid and cutting down on Bride and Uncle John. He will not reduce the number of Beauty plants. Mr. Reinberg says he never has seen such a call for cuttings as he finds this year for White Perfection and Enchantress.

ports an excellent demand for small ferns, exhausting his supply.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, says the carnation growers have either to grow fewer carnations and better ones, or to accept the verdict of the buyers that the carnation must be a cheap flower. He says only the best white and Enchantress have had a real demand the last few days.

It is stated that J. Hrudka will retire from the pot making business.

Albert T. Hey Floral Co., of Maywood, is cutting Mrs. Lawson carnations that show no signs of deterioration of that variety.

A. L. Randall says that he does not agree with those who insist that the price of cut flowers is going down. He believes that each square foot of glass is today returning the growers as much money as it ever did. He agrees that it takes a better flower to get the money, but says the growers are producing the better goods.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Considering that we are in the midst of Lent, there was quite a lot of activity displayed among the retail florists, both downtown and in the west end. The florists who are situated north and south, too, say they did a nice business last week.

Cut stock is selling cheap among the retailers downtown. They say transient trade was good all week and they disposed of a lot of stock at low prices. The wholesalers say that there was plenty of everything in season and in some varieties a big glut was evident. This is particularly true with violets and carnations. Roses are equal to the demand at present, but they have been off crop for some time, so in these the prices have kept up. Jonquils are in plenty, also

Various Notes.

E. J. Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week. Mr. Fancourt is one of the favorites of the many traveling salesmen who visit this city.

E. W. Guy and Henry Emunds, both of Belleville, paid a visit to the trade here last week. They report satisfactory business since Lent set in.

Louis Gieger has given up his Maryland avenue store and is now in the employ of Grimm & Gorly at their Washington avenue store. Mr. Gieger has charge of the designing department and is a first-class man when it comes to making up good work.

C. De Wever, of Clayton, spent a few days in Chicago last week. Mr. De Wever is going into the importing business in the plant and bulb line. His brother is a large grower in Holland.

W. H. Kruse, the well known Arsenal street florist, says that his business has been good since Lent began. He had a busy week in funeral work.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, has had grand success with his new violet. It blooms more freely than any of the other varieties and has stems exceeding those of the Princess of Wales and always brings double the price of the California violets.

C. Young & Sons Co. is making a grand show of white lilacs, azaleas, Easter lilies and other fine spring blooming plants. James Young says they are making preparation for handling a large spring seed trade. Their new catalogue is the handsomest they have yet issued.

The Florists' Club's trustees, Messrs. Bentzen, Ostertag and Schoenle, all promise to be at the next club meeting, which will be pleasing news to the rest of the officers.

DRAINAGE FOR RETENTIVE SOIL.

My land, which I use for summer cut flowers, has a gentle slope, but dries out rather slowly. The top soil is about eight inches deep and the subsoil is a heavy clay. How deep should tiles be laid for drainage in this soil and what distance from one line to the other? M. B.

I would advise making drains two and one-half to three feet deep and thirty to forty feet apart, using 2½-inch or 3-inch cylindrical unglazed tiles. A fall of three inches per hundred feet will answer well if you have not much slope. Of course, double that fall would insure even better drainage. Tiles are preferable to stones; the latter occupy ten to twelve inches of space and are more easily clogged. Carefully avoid any sharp angles in the drains; where not straight, let them have a wide curve. This drainage will both sweeten and warm the soil and you will find your plants succeed much better in it. Be sure to mark the outlets of the several drains and keep them open. C.

BIRCH FOR BENCH POSTS.

As a subscriber to the REVIEW, I would like to ask you to allow me space for the following question: How is white birch wood for bench posts as to durability? The locality is near Washington, D. C. B. W.

Birch is a hard, tough wood, much used for furniture and the manufacture of small articles, but hardly ever employed in the rough building operations. It should make fairly enduring bench posts. Has any reader tried it?

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The closing days of February and the early days of March find the cut flower market in the worst condition of the season. The supply of flowers is increasing, the demand has fallen off, the mid-Lenten dullness being accentuated by bad weather and the strife of the carmen's strike. The streets in the shopping district are quiet. Nearly everybody who can postpone shopping does so, while in the districts where the battle has been most fearfully waged by the strikers against the trolley company a Sabbath-like quiet prevails between the stormy gusts. This brief description clearly pictures business conditions. There is a fair shipping demand, and a certain amount of local business, in which it is evident that when the buyers do not want flowers price is unimportant. A prominent wholesaler, when asked whether there was any bright spot on the dark side, smilingly answered: "Yes, the police were so busy with the strikers on Saturday that the street boys had it all their own way." They sold a lot of left-overs that nobody wanted. The average of returns to the growers during the week of February 24 to March 2 will be extremely low.

Beauties are scarcer now than in February, prices being fairly well maintained on thin receipts. Adiantum and both kinds of asparagus sell well. White roses continue in demand, White Killarney seeming to be preferred to Bride. Sweet peas of quality are difficult to produce this weather. The really good ones coming to town go fairly well. The rest of the flowers on the list suffer more or less severely from the dullness, carnations and Easter lilies faring the worst. The bulk of the bulbous stock sells cheaply, good freesia and fancy tulips being about the only exception.

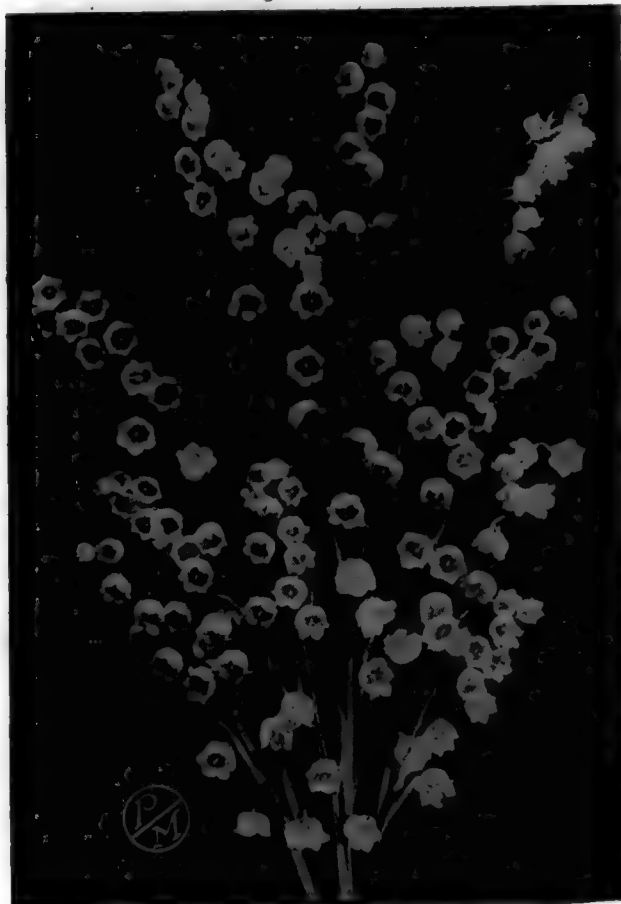

Easter Plants.

The demand for Easter blooming plants that has been increasing steadily year by year will not be affected by the early Easter. The wholesale growers in this city, believing that it will be more than usually difficult for the florists to supply their own wants, have made an extraordinary effort to be ready should there prove a shortage in any of the staple stock. The cold, stormy weather has retarded the crops to an unusual extent, demanding skill and perseverance to get them in time.

An hour spent in the Robert Craig Co. greenhouses showed that a large proportion, it might be fair to say practically all, of the stock will be on time, a feather in the cap of Robert A. Craig. Mr. Craig has banked heavily on lilies and on roses, believing that these two crops will be most difficult to flower nicely by the end of March. Azaleas, too, are in immense supply, with spiræas, genistas, rhododendrons, bougainvilleas, hydrangeas and some novelties strongly represented.

The total glass area devoted to Easter plants is larger even than last year, two large carnation houses and one or two smaller ones now being filled with Easter stock, the entire carnation stock having gone to the new place at Norwood. The lilies average from five to eight flowers on the bulbs reserved for selling as pot plants. The few-flower bulbs will be cut. The foliage is clean and healthy. The sizes vary from the tall church to the medium and even dwarf window plants. The roses, too, were most pleasing. Crimson and Baby Ramblers, Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Tausendschon were all well set with buds of promising size, the plants free from mildew. The azaleas showed especial strength in Mme. Van der Cruyssen. The whites are represented by carried over or spring imported plants of Bernard Andre alba and a few of the white sport of Veraneana. The specimens were particularly fine, some measuring three feet across. A whole house was given up to Spiræa Gladstone that looked extremely well. The genistas were being carried cool already, to insure that much desired hardness. The rhododendrons were better than I remember to have seen. The

The carnation meeting, March 1, was the best of the season in attendance and exhibits. Albert M. Herr was heartily applauded for his paper, which evoked an interesting debate. Samuel Batchelor, Jenkintown, showed White Perfection; Robert Craig Co., its white seedling, Norwood; Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Rose Violet Blue, which is a Ger-

Patten, red and variegated; William Swayne, Kennett Square, a light seedling between Enchantress and Dorothy, quality fine. Visitors included Robert Pyle and Edmond A. Harvey.

The Drift of the Times.

The authorities tell us that a suffragist is one who favors the voting of our better-halves and daughters when they reach years of discretion and will urge these views gently. A suffragette, on the other hand, urges the same views violently. The leader of the future must find remunerative employment for all suffragists and suffragettes who may so desire. The desks in the banks, the counters in the stores, the machines in the factory, the Remingtons everywhere, may not give sufficient scope. The floral possibilities naturally suggest themselves, most naturally in the shops where the field has already been half won from the "worse" half, but it is the possibilities in the greenhouses that a talk with one of our brightest men has brought before me. He spoke of the easy and pleasant work of bunching lily of the valley. Four or five hours a day, a little taste, deft fingers—that was all it required. The experiment so far has not proved a success, but perseverance will surely make it so. Many of our growers owe much more than they can tell to the neat bunching by their better-halves of violets, pansies, and what-nots.

The Market.

Prices are showing a drooping tendency all around, although business for Lent has not been at all bad. In spite of zero weather, last week's trade held up well. We now have milder climatic conditions and an increased output of flowers, rather more than the market can handle. Roses are not moving quite so well; values run all the way from $3 to $12.50 per hundred, extra fancy Killarney and Richmond bringing rather more. Long-stemmed Bride and Maid are bringing no more money than short-stemmed Killarney. Beauties are not abundant, but the demand for them is comparatively light. Carnations average a little lower and are harder to move; $4 is now top price on fancies.

Violets vary all the way from 20 cents to 50 cents per hundred, only fancy and well bunched flowers bringing more. Tulips and narcissi have been low in price, but are shortening up a little in supply. There is now an abundance of all varieties of narcissi, both long and short Trumpets. Hyacinths move slowly. Lily of the valley is more plentiful and inclined to sag. Sweet peas are numerous; the finest make $1 to $1.50 per hundred, while some sell as low as 20 cents per hundred. Lilies are in good supply, but sell slowly. There is a large variety of miscellaneous flowers now coming in. Green stock finds a fair sale.

The pot plant trade is looking up. Acacias, ericas, genistas, rambler roses, bulbous stock, cyclamens and many other varieties are now in evidence on every hand.

Various Notes.

Visitors to the recent midwinter show included R. T. Brown, Queens, N. Y.; C. S. Strout, Biddeford, Me.; G. W. Strange, Summit, N. J.; A. C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J.; Edward Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; Thomas Knight, New York, N. Y.; George E. Baldwin, Mamaronock, N. Y.; A. Jenkins, E. Jenkins and J. Morris, Lenox, Mass.; C. W. Hoitt and G. E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H.; William Miller, Bar Harbor, Me.; and Frank E. Witney, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Harold J. Patten, son of M. A. Patten, of Tewksbury, understands other things than carnation growing. He is one of the best known marksmen in New England.

Last year he had a place in a Massachusetts team of fifteen at the national meet in Ohio. February 22, at Lowell, he won the handsome Pratt gold medal from a big field of contestants. Mr. Patten is sergeant in the Sixth Infantry, M. V. M.

Thomas Roland has his numerous houses overflowing with beautifully grown rambler roses, acacias, ericas, genistas and many other flowering plants for the Easter trade.

Welch Bros. are looking forward to the heaviest Easter business on record. They will again make a specialty of crated lilies in pots and will also handle many other plants.

Peter Fisher paid a flying visit to the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., February 24, to look over the carnations. R. T. Brown, of Queens, arrived in Boston the same day.

Norris F. Comley has the contract for decorating Mechanics building for the coming big automobile show. He will use many wagon-loads of Spiraea Van Houttei, lilacs and other flowering shrubs, in addition to quantities of other decorative material.

flower market recently vacated by them, on satisfactory terms.

John L. Porter, gardener to Charles D. Sias, of Wenham, Mass., has a fine golden yellow sport from Rose General McArthur. The flower has a delightful odor, suggestive of the old Marechal Niel. The spines, so objectionable on General McArthur, are lacking on the sport, which proves a continuous winter bloomer. Mr. Porter will devote a whole bench to it next year.

Dobbins & Shannon, of Woburn, are marketing thousands of superb Princess of Wales daily at their stand in Music Hall Market No. 2.

A party of friends gave J. W. Duncan a good send-off February 24 at the South Terminal station on his way to Spokane, Wash.

Henry R. Comley, on Park street, always keeps one of the most attractive and varied florists' windows in Boston. If there are any rare or unique flowers, Mr. Comley is sure to have them. He is doing an excellent and increasing trade.

Mrs. Wilfrid Wheeler, of Concord, who has been confined to a hospital for some weeks, consequent on a serious operation, is, we are glad to say, convalescent.

J. H. Leach & Son, of North Easton, have been picking quantities of sweet peas since last October. They are having great success with lily of the valley, which is of fine quality.

Peirce Bros., of Waverley, have their usual big lot of lilies, azaleas and other plants in fine shape for Easter.

Miss Laura Dawson, daughter of Jackson Dawson, will be the lecturer at Horticultural hall, March 5, on "Horticulture as a Vocation for Women."

Edward MacMulkin, among his other orchids, has some fine pieces of the pure white form of Cattleya Trianae; one plant carried fourteen flowers.

The bankruptcy of A. G. Lake, of Wellesley Hills, referred to in last week's REVIEW, was due in large measure to the heavy losses sustained on his fields of asters for two successive years, smoke from the Boston & Albany railroad ruining practically the entire crops. An action is pending against the railroad and will probably soon come to trial.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, is making quite a hit with Dimorphotheca aurantiaca. Everyone admires its deep orange color.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 22, A. E. Thatcher, of the Arnold Arboretum, will read a paper on "New and Desirable Hardy Herbaceous Perennials." There promises to be a large attendance at the Waverly field day, March 19.

A camellia house eighty-six feet in length at the A. T. Lyman estate in Waltham is a fine sight at present. There are many fine specimens ten to twelve feet high smothered with bloom. The skillful head gardener, Walter Angus, has the plants in fine shape. There is quite a revival of interest in camellias in the vicinity of Boston.

The King Construction Co. has work well advanced on one of C. E. Holbrow's new houses at Brighton and will be ready to start on the second within a few days.

The most scrutinized carnation at the late show in Horticultural hall was the new Wodenethe from Frank E. Witney, gardener to Winthrop Sargent, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y. The flowers held in fine shape until the end of the show. This new white promises to put all existing varieties in the shade.

W. N. CRAIG.

ANSONIA, CONN.—One of the boilers in the Hotchkiss greenhouses was recently rendered useless by a leak, but the stock was saved by installing heating stoves, as the weather was mild at the time. Before the arrival of the next cold snap, the defective boiler had been replaced by a new one.

BELOIT, WIS.—Building operations will begin soon on a new greenhouse for John Rindfleisch. It is to consist of four sections, each 25x100, and in addition to this an office, potting room and boiler room will occupy a space 20x120 feet adjoining the greenhouse proper. The estimated cost of the building will be $6,000.

SCRANTON, PA.—Director of Public Works C. V. Terwilliger and John Cleland, who will donate a greenhouse to this city, visited Nay Aug park, Saturday, February 19, and after a conference with Superintendent of Parks Thomas Phillips, decided upon the present site of the deer park as the best location for the greenhouse. The building is to be 130 feet long and will be of ornate design.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

foliage, flowers and weeds. Be careful not to overwater. They are always better if allowed to dry out well between waterings. A temperature of 50 degrees, full sun and an abundance of fresh air are desideratums. The strongest plants should now be fit for 4-inch pots. Use but little barnyard manure in the soil. A little old mushroom manure, with some fine bone added, is good as a compost.

Tuberous Begonias.

Tuberous begonias intended for early summer blooming in pots should be started without delay. Place the tubers in flats containing a little leaf-mold and sand; barely cover them and water them sparingly until growths are well advanced. The seed sown in January should now be ready to prick off. Use flats of light, sandy soil and shade for a few days after transplanting. These seedlings will make splendid plants for bedding out in shady locations, or are useful in pots for late summer or fall flowering, being specially good on piazzas where the boxes are shielded from the sun's direct rays.

Shamrocks.

Any potting of shamrocks, or making up pans of them, should be completed without delay, in order that the plants may get somewhat established before being marketed. The demand for these for March 17 grows larger each year and many florists are finding them quite a profitable side line to carry. They should never be forced; a violet or mignonette are usually cheap Ribbons that look all right until you use them with your decorations, and then you wish you had something different. Something different in Ribbons, are the qualities that bear THE PINE TREE LABEL. These are the Ribbons for Novelty Decorations, Funeral Decorations, Banquets, Weddings, etc.; they are rich toned Ribbons, have a high luster, are soundly constructed and yet they often cost little more than these Blunder Ribbons.

You will find it pays to use the best Ribbons, especially when you can get them at our close quotations direct from the mill.

house, kept at 40 to 42 degrees at night, is the ideal temperature for them. They get "thrippy" in a warmer house.

Shading.

We get some hot days early in March. They are deceptive and are usually followed by spells of dark, cold weather. The temptation is often strong to shade the glass with some form of whitening. Our advice would be not to do so, at least not for a while yet in the colder northern states; farther south it is no doubt necessary thus early. Use cheesecloth, rather than darken the houses with shading you may wish to have removed a day or two later. To retard Easter stock, a shaded house is a necessity, but in growing houses it is not only unnecessary, but harmful. Even palms need but little shade yet, especially if, as often happens, they are grown under ground glass. Tropical plants, such as crotons and dracaenas, are benefited by some sun, and if you shade this class of plants at all now, let it be quite thin. Seedlings, whether just germinating or transplanted, will want a little shade, but cheesecloth or papers, which are readily removed, are all they need.

Propagation.

Keep the propagating benches well filled. There is still pretty steady fire heat and the sand will keep of a genial warmth, excellent for propagating coleus, heliotropes, alternantheras, crotons and other foliage plants, lemon verbenas and many other plants. Where there is less bottom heat, chrysanthemums, verbenas, petunias, carnations, hydrangeas, variegated vincas, lobelias, rambler roses (from half ripened wood), ericas, genistas, acacias and diosmas are among those which can be readily rooted. If you are short of English ivy, now is a suitable time to insert a good batch of this also.

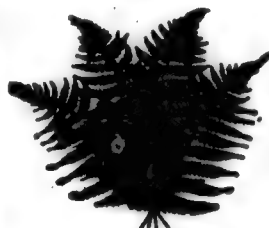

Freesia.

The bulk of the freesias will now be done flowering. As a general rule, these are now cut close to the soil, in order to secure long stems for market. When such is the case it does not pay to carry the bulbs over. They may be of good size, but their returns will be disappointing the next season. If, however, you have used the flowers with short stems and have not sacrificed too much foliage, you can get just as fine flowers next year, provided you allow them to ripen off gradually on a sunny shelf. A common practice is to stand them under the benches as soon as the flowers are cut. This means that they are to remain in a more or less saturated and sour condition and be the abiding place of any larvæ which may care to locate there. If you cannot spare space to properly ripen the bulbs, it would be far better to throw them away and buy fresh each season. Purity is now the variety par excellence, at $6 to $8 per hundred, which good stalks have realized right along the present season. It pays better to grow it than almost any other bulb.

FREEMONT, ME.—G. Edward Bartol, who hitherto has grown only outside vegetable crops, has now built a greenhouse for vegetable forcing.

DIGHTON, MASS.—The greenhouse owned by John Tavis, of Brock street, was badly damaged by fire February 15. The house was stocked with cabbage and tomato plants. There was no insurance.

OSWEGO, N. Y.—George L. Munroe & Sons, dealers in ashes for fertilizers, say that orders come to them faster than they can be filled, so that they are obliged to decline a part of the business offered.

HARDY PHLOXES.

We are called upon to put in a bed of hardy phlox. The customer would like varieties that would give blooms from early summer until late in fall. Would that make a pretty bed in a front yard on a prominent street? Will you kindly advise us as to the varieties to use and the preparation of the soil? They do not have to be the latest varieties; some good, old, reliable sorts will do.

F. & F.

In the way of hardy herbaceous perennials there is no more satisfactory and persistent flowering genus than the phloxes. The soil should be deeply trenched, not less than two feet, and liberally manured. Well rotted animal manure is better than any chemical fertilizer. A bed of phlox, unlike one of geraniums or cannas, will last for some years and produce a splendid show with little care. A liberal mulch of rotted manure each fall and frequent stirring of the surface soil will keep the plants in a satisfactory condition. If the land is deeply spaded, they will stand quite a severe drought without suffering any ill effects, but a soaking of water occasionally in dry weather will benefit them greatly.

The best early phlox—and, in my opinion, the finest of the whole family—is Miss Lingard, white with a pink eye; this starts to flower in June and will persist until sharp frost. Some other reliable sorts are: Le Cygne and F. G. Von Lassburg, pure white; Coquelicot, scarlet; R. P. Struthers, rosy carmine, crimson eye; Tapis Blanc, very dwarf, pure white, fine for edging; Eclairer, carmine, salmon pink eye; Pantheon, carmine rose; Saison's Lierval, white, deep rose eye; Lumineau, carmine, suffused salmon. All the foregoing are inexpensive varieties.

Retail Design Catalogues

Or any hints or pointers you can give us that will help in getting out a catalogue for this purpose.

We intend to make up a book from photographs of our own work and put in just such printed matter as is adapted to our trade.

What we want is the advice of some of our brother florists in regard to some of the small points in making up a catalogue of this character.

Any information or points, no matter how small, will be appreciated.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co., Philadelphia, have issued their annual catalogue of forty pages on the premium offers of 1909 and 1910.

THE death is reported of Jonathan Cocks, who for twenty years had traveled for Nutting & Sons, the widely known London seedsmen.

CHAUNCEY P. COY & SON, Waterloo, Neb., say that in vine seeds nowadays it is much more difficult to get the seed grown than it is to make the sales.

THE well known English seed firm of James Carter & Co., Holborn, has purchased a site of twenty acres near Rayne's Park, on the London and South-western railway, and is erecting warehouses covering about two and one-half acres.

THE well known seed establishments of Conrad Appel, at Darmstadt, Germany, recently were visited by about fifty students of Biltmore Forest School, under Dr. C. A. Schenck, and twelve forest students of the University of Oxford, England. Both parties were interested to see the extended desiccating establishments, cleaning departments, warehouses and testing laboratory of this firm, and were later on entertained by the present proprietor, Mr. Heyn, Councilor of Commerce.

THE Campbell Flower & Seed Co., Oswego, N. Y., has incorporated, capitalized at $10,000, divided into 1,000 shares of $10 each. The directors for the first year are Anna R. Partridge, Patrick G. Campbell, Charles J. Bellinger, James Kelly and Harry E. Joy. The business, which has heretofore been conducted by P. G. Campbell, will be taken over. The company will soon move from the present quarters at the western terminal of the lower bridge to the new building under course of erection on the river dock.

LAND OF THE FREE—SEEDS.

A writer in the Horticultural Trade-Journal (English) thinks the United States must be a good place for seedsmen—to keep away from. This is what he has to say of government by the people as it bears on the seed industry:

"Some of our home traders are disposed to grumble about competition, but they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have no government free seed scheme, as is prevalent in U. S. A. I venture to think that seedsmen over here would give a howl if their local M. P. was distributing free seed to all and sundry. Just what it means in America will be gathered from the statement that one congressman received no less than sixty-one mailbags, each containing parcels of seed, which he distributes as largess among the good folk that helped him into congress. These sacks were sent to him at the government's expense, not by the cheapest express rate, but by the regular mail trains, and after the packets and parcels have been addressed by the kind-hearted congressman, they are again sent through the post, again at the government's expense. To cut it short, the government gives the seed, pays the highest rate for carriage to the congressman, and then pays the cost of distribution to the congressman's friends. Well might the postal authorities complain of heavy deficits, and yet one kind-hearted postmaster ventured to declare that seedsmen should pay the full letter rate on their parcels, because the seed

BUT HOW GOOD"

HORSESHOE BRAND PRODUCTS

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN said: "Different things have different degrees of perfection, and the same thing at different times. Thus, a horse is more perfect than an oyster, yet the oyster may be a perfect oyster, as well as the horse a perfect horse. And an egg is not so perfect as a chicken, nor a chicken as a hen; for the hen has more strength than the chicken, and the chicken more life than the egg; yet it may be a perfect egg, chicken, and hen."

A Giganteum grown near the top soil is not so perfect as one grown six to eight inches below, although it may be a perfect bulb of that kind; it has not the strength of the deep-planted kind. The kind planted deep down in the soil is of superior degree of perfection, and will undoubtedly produce more flowers per thousand than the top soil or cheaper bulbs. That's one reason why Horseshoe Brand Giganteums are of superior quality. Try them and see for yourself. Count the cut and compare notes.

THE SITUATION IN SEEDS.

The seed trade now stands at the threshold of the busy season; the time has passed for early business, and the rush will come with the arrival of spring days. Neither January nor February appears to have brought special favor to the seed trade. Of course, there was much inquiry for quantities of stocks which are known to be among the short items, but the general run of the seed trade in February has not exceeded normal. It has been good, but not unusually good. Indeed, in one or two lines of seasonable specialties the southern and southwestern trade has been a disappointment. When the catalogues first were mailed the early response was rather better than usual and led to high hopes, but the orders did not increase as expected. And the mail-order houses begin March with the number of orders filled to date, and value of orders, not above those of an average season.

While hardly anyone will say that business has not been good, and everybody looks forward to the next few weeks bringing all the business that can be handled, a good many mail-order seedsman feel that they have not got the results they expected for the work put in this season in the attempt to develop the January and February sales. There is a limit to what can be done during the height of the season, and the seedsman has little control over the last end of the selling season, so a good many have been pushing to lengthen the busy season at the early end.

THE HOLLAND BULB SHOW.

It is unfortunate for the American seedsman that the jubilee bulb show of the General Bulb Growers' Society at Haarlem, Holland, must of necessity come at a date when American bulb dealers are busiest. Not many from this side of the Atlantic will be able to attend, though many would like to do so.

The show at Haarlem opens March 23. The show enjoys a remarkable enthusiasm all over Holland and abroad, not only from bulb growers and nurserymen, but also from the public in general. The bulb fields of Holland have always been an attraction to tourists, and a visit to Haarlem and its environs this spring will be of special interest. The bulb fields are only at their best for a few days, but the Haarlem flower show is arranged so as to remain in full glory from the opening to the end.

The bulbs planted (nearly a million) will regularly succeed each other; the opening week will prove the usefulness of the crocus. Next comes the stately hyacinth and its elegant "miniature" offspring, which will be shown in the exhibition grounds in the most modern patterns and most artistic grouping, indeed a new feature for the decoration of gardens and parks. Daffodils and narcissi are naturally grouped at the feet of the old trees which are the pride of the Haarlem wood. From April to the end of May tulips will bloom in such variety as the visitor probably will never have seen in his life. And, besides, there are numbers of miscellaneous bulbs, rockery plants and herbaceous perennials, flowering trees and shrubs, banks of rhododendrons and azaleas along the water side, and clipped trees in the French garden.

The temporary shows in buildings will be held from March 23 to 31, April 4 to 12 and May 20 to 22. The international jury will meet in March and April under the presidency of Mr. de Marez Oyens, ex-minister of commerce, and now president of the Netherlands federation of horticultural societies.

THE FREE SEEDS.

The congressional seed distribution has been written about until there is little new to say of it, but the opposition is steadily gathering volume and in the end seems pretty certain to reach the members of congress. The following editorial from the Bangor, Me., Herald is reprinted, not because it contains new matter, but because it is a rational statement of the case:

This is the time of the year for the government free seed distribution. The first seeds were sent out several weeks ago, and the distribution will continue until the planting season is well over.

This annual seed distribution has become a standing subject for jokes. For years also there has been a demand from certain sources that this seed distribution be discontinued. But it keeps right on. Carloads of these seeds are sent out into every state and county each spring. Why is it kept up?

It is claimed by many that these seeds are no good. This is not wholly true. In buying them the government contracts with responsible firms and pays them full price to get the best, and as a rule the best are sent. Perhaps it may happen sometimes that when the stock runs short some inferior stock is substituted. But if this happens few people are ever the wiser, since few of these seeds are used by practical gardeners.

Most of them fall into the hands of amateurs, residents of the towns who may tinker a little with a garden; and many people receive them who have no use for them, and give them away to somebody who hasn't much more use for them. Even where they are received by people who plant gardens they are useless, because of the lot they receive invariably the most are of a variety for which they have no use, and of those which they might use the quantity is too small to make it worth while to bother with.

So the seeds, while they may be ever so good, are of no value whatever to those who receive them. This probably applies to more than 99 per cent of all the seed sent out in this distribution.

It costs the government a lot of money. Several hundred thousand dollars are paid out annually for these seeds and the cost of packaging them, and after that the mails are cumbered for weeks with this junk. The deficit in the postoffice department would be considerably reduced if the distribution of seeds were discontinued.

Why is it not done? Simply because congressmen like to have these seeds to give away. They imagine it makes them friends, and votes. Under the law each congressman gets a certain number of packages, enough to supply a half dozen or more to every voter in the district, with the privilege of sending them through the mails free. Hence all efforts to repeal this law have failed. Costing them nothing, congressmen vote to continue the distribution, and the absurd custom and useless waste of seeds continues.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Prices were at the lowest ebb last week. The big strike at Philadelphia sent the Quaker City's surplus here to be sold at whatever it would bring. Fortunately, as one merchant expressed it, the street men and the big department stores and the speculators cleaned up the accumulations, and even if at half their value, what would we do without them? That tells the story, and that seems to be the only way to solve the problem here. The shipments go on increasing. The outlets must be multiplied. Otherwise comes the dam, and then the flood, and complete demoralization.

Beauties alone were independent. First-class stock sold readily at good prices because of scarcity. The supply this week promises to be ample. There is a tremendous supply of other roses, except Richmond. There seems to be no let-up to Killarney, and its popularity holds the finest arrivals steady. On the lower grades values are far above quotations and clearances are made at buyer's dictation. The same thing applies to carnations. Many thousands were sold last week at 50 cents per hundred. Even the novelties of carnations do not get above $3 per hundred. Violets also have fallen and only the specials touch 50 cents; 40 cents would be a fairer price for the selected and so on down to 100,000 lots, as one Brooklyn plunger buys them, at $2 per thousand.

Gardenias hold up fairly well and

Various Notes.

The rose show is only two weeks distant. The exhibit at the Museum of Natural History promises to exceed any display ever seen in New York. The silver cup given by Moore, Hentz & Nash will bring out one of the most novel exhibits. The banquet will be a great success. Chairman Sheridan reports many tables spoken for and preparations will be made to accommodate 400. The following have been appointed the reception committee: P. O'Mara, chairman; F. H. Traendly, A. One of the signs of spring will be the opening of the auction season Tuesday, March 15. Evergreens and roses have already arrived at Elliott's for the initial sale.

The greenhouse men are getting busy all over the east. From present contracts and indications the coming season will break all records for increase of glass area and add immensely to the problem of the wholesalers another year.

Mr. and Mrs. Le Moutt contemplate a trip shortly to Carlsbad, Germany. For the Sullivan funeral Le Moutt had the largest number of funeral pieces ever made for one person in New York.

We believe it is beyond dispute that this concern, which has introduced more new varieties than any other Seedhouse and grows each year an acreage of more than double that of any competitor, has done more for the development and dissemination of High Grade Asters than all other American Seedsmen.

VICK'S MIKADO PINK-ROCHESTER

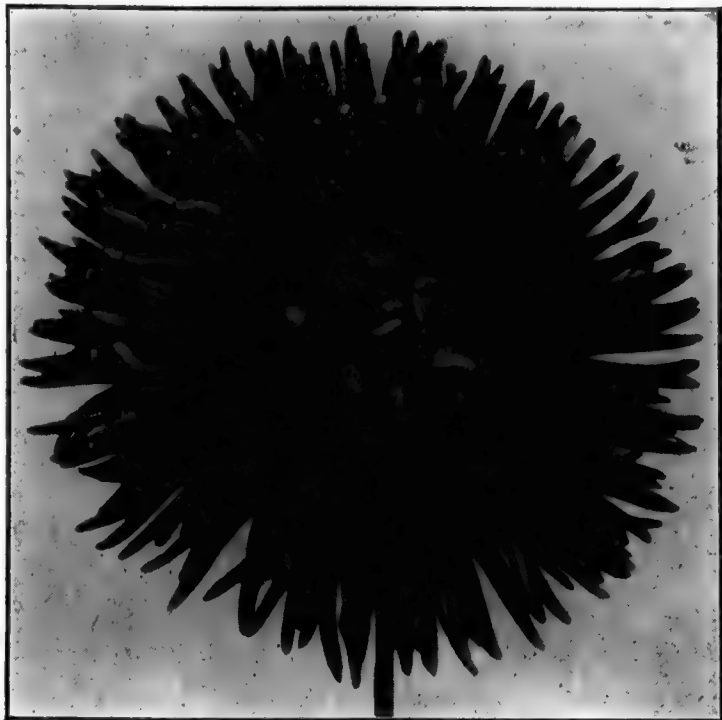

(Cut reduced to $\frac{1}{2}$ natural size)

The story of its new name is of more than passing interest. Members of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, which has recently chosen the Aster as the representative flower of this city, were so pleased with the color, shape and size of Vick's Mikado Pink, that they have selected it as the official flower of Rochester, and have requested that we rename it "Rochester." Therefore, in addition to its former name it now bears the honored name of this city.

During the recent Industrial Exposition reproductions of this Aster have appeared in countless papers, programs and private advertising matter. Thousands of souvenir spoons, watch fobs, and hat pins, carrying a design of this Aster, have been sold by various concerns. The design and coloring of this beautiful flower are an important feature of the mural decorations of the Temple Theater, just finished, which, by the richness of its appointments, in many respects, surpasses any other playhouse between New York and Chicago. It will also appear in the color schemes and figurative designs of the decorations and furnishings of the handsome new lake steamship, "THE ROCHESTER."

Naturally we are proud of the various honors which have been bestowed upon this flower, especially in view of our prediction last year that it would spring into popularity surpassing that of any other variety in the last ten years.

Prices: 1/64 oz., 20 cents; 1/32 oz., 35 cents; 1/16 oz., 50 cents; 1/8 oz., 85 cents; 1/4 oz., $1.50; 1/2 oz., $2.75; 1 oz., $5.00.

Sprengeri they should be spread out thinly in a shallow box and placed in a dry and fairly warm position for about a month. A shelf in a greenhouse is a good place for such seeds as these, provided it is secure from mice and also is protected from drip from the roof.

After this period of curing is finished, the seeds may be sown in flats of good soil, pressing the seeds into the surface of the soil with a small piece of board and then covering them with about one-fourth inch of sand. The soil should be kept moist and the flats should be placed in a greenhouse where a temperature of 65 degrees is kept. Under these conditions the seeds should germinate soon and well. W. H. T.

Aster, Vick's New Early

Branching. (Novelty '09.)

H. A. The Early Branching come into bloom about two weeks earlier than the Late Branching. The plants have but few branches and are free from side buds, the whole strength of the plant being given to the development of the very few large and perfect flowers, which are borne on extra-long stems. We offer two colors only. Early Branching White, Early Branching Rose. Each, trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Aster, Branching Rosy Carmine.

The color is hard to describe, but we think rosy carmine about right. As a cut-flower variety this Aster catches the eye every time. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Aster, Improved Early Branching Semple. (Novelty '09.)

H. A. A seedling from that grand old variety Semple's Pink, which on account of its earliness will certainly become equally and we predict more popular than its parent. The color is of the same shade of bright pink and the habit of the plant and form of flowers are identical, being of the same strong robust growth and branching habit. Its greatest value is in its earliness, blooming as it does ten days earlier than Semple's Pink. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Aster, Early Wonder. White. (Novelty, '08.)

H. A. This is the earliest Aster in cultivation, blooming several days before Queen of the market, with pure white flowers double the size; nice shape and stands well. It is after the style of the Giant Comet, and is destined to become the leading early variety, and will prove a great acquisition to growers requiring large, early blooms. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 5 pkts. for $1, 1/8 oz. 40 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Early Wonder Pink. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 5 pkts. $1, 1/8 oz. 40 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Asters, Crego. (Novelty, '09.) H. A. The Crego Asters are of American origin, and are very strong growers, attaining a height of from 2 to 3 feet, with long, strong stems. The flowers are of a mammoth Comet type, measuring from 4 to 5 inches in diameter and resembling large chrysanthemums.

We offer the Crego Asters in the following delightful colors: White, Rose, Light Pink, Purple, Lavender, Crimson, Mixed. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/8 oz. 40 cts., 1/4 oz. 70 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.30, oz. 2.50.

Aster, Hercules (Rosy Lilac).

(Novelty, '10). This grand novelty is the first break from the Grand White Hercules Aster which we introduced some years ago. The color is a splendid delicate rosy lilac. The plants are compact and semi-dwarf, not exceeding 15 to 20 inches in height. In addition to the enormous flower of the main stem, this Aster produces five to six long-petaled lateral flowers, measuring 5 1/2 to 6 1/2 inches across, of the most perfect form. The Hercules Aster is one of the grandest varieties of the Giant Hohenzollern type ever introduced, and we are sure that this variety will find favor with all lovers of good Asters. Trade pkt., 25 cts., 5 for $1.

Hercules. Of imposing aspect, the plants throw up a very strong stem, 15 to 20 inches high, which begins to branch about 4 inches from the ground. Flowers are borne on remarkably strong stalks, are all the purest white, of the genuine Hohenzollern form, with very long petals, and attain the enormous diameter of 6, or, with good culture, as much as 7 inches. Trade pkt. 35 cts., 3 for $1.

Daybreak. Flowers are very large and double, of a beautiful shell-pink color. This is a grand Aster for cutting purposes, growing two feet high. The best late market Aster of its color to date. Trade pkt. 35 cts., oz. $1.75.

The Favorite. An aristocrat among the Comet Asters. Color beautiful blush, changing to rich deep pink as the flower becomes older; the petals wavy reflexed. The plants grow 18 inches high, bearing large-sized blooms of beautiful form; invaluable for cutting. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/4 oz. 60 cts., oz. $2.00.

Purity. One of the most beautiful of the Branching Asters. Double flowers of glistening pure white; similar to Daybreak in form and habit of growth. Trade pkt. 35 cts., oz. $1.75.

Vick's Violet King. The peer of the grandest Chrysanthemums. The habit is similar to the popular Vick's Branching, vigorous in growth, long, stiff stems; petals somewhat resemble the quilled varieties, but much larger and broader, completely covering the crown. In shape and size the bloom is round, full and large, many of the flowers 4 to 5 inches. Its color is a soft violet-lilac. Trade pkt. 30 cts., oz. $1.50.

Lavender Gem. A beautiful variety of Aster, of the Comet type, with large, loosely arranged flowers, which are perfectly double, and of a beautiful, delicate shade of lavender; flowers are borne on long stems, and are excellent for cutting. Trade pkt. 35 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

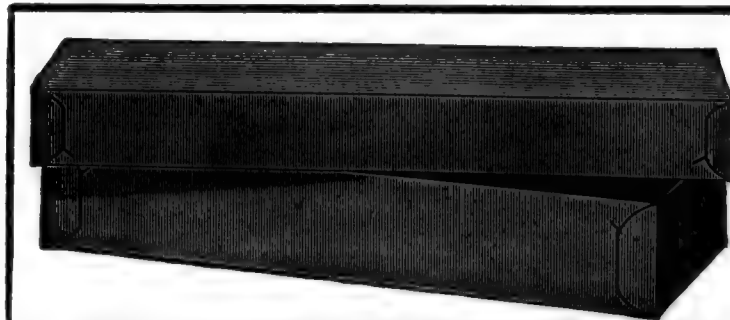

Business holds up to a remarkable degree and is good in practically all lines. Funeral work is unusually plentiful; a number of prominent people having died recently has accelerated this branch and everyone is getting a good share. Last week witnessed a price war inaugurated between the retail florists and the drug and department stores. The principal cut was on violets, which sold as low as two bunches of twenty-five each for a quarter by the retailers, while the outsiders were advertised at 19 cents a bunch. Fifteen cents was the ruling price by the regular trade.

Carnations are plentiful and good, Perfection, Enchantress and Beacon taking the lead. There has been a constantly increasing demand for Beacon ever since Christmas. Roses are coming good, and freesias, hyacinths, jonquils, narcissi, tulips and daffodils are in good supply and sell readily. Potted azaleas and bulbous stock are making their appearance, but command but little sale as yet. Orders are placing, however, for the Easter trade.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held at the rooms of the association, 98 Westminster street, this city, the evening of February 21 and was one of the most interesting sessions in a long time. President Robert Johnston made an encouraging address on the prospects of the club and urged the members to make a special canvass so as to have every florist and gardener in the state enrolled under the club's banner. Charles Hartstra, gardener at the Rhode Island hospital, exhibited one of the finest specimens of cyclamen ever seen here and an animated discussion was provoked regarding the cultivation, propagation and selling qualities of these plants.

The club voted to indorse the petition, now pending before the general assembly, to grant the Grand Trunk railway a charter to operate in this state. This matter was introduced by Alex Macrae, who said he thought that the club and its members should go on record as favoring the project, and he pointed out the advantages that the florists, in common with other business interests, would receive from additional railroad facilities for the city and vicinity. President Johnston, Eugene Appleton, William Chappell and several others spoke favorably on the question and the club was unanimously in favor of the indorsement of the proposition and of sending a copy of the vote to the general assembly.

Various Notes.

Henry J. Hass, of Newport, was called to this city February 23 by the serious illness of his son. The latter is employed in the rose houses at J. A. Budlong & Son Co.'s place in Auburn and during that afternoon was seized by a fainting attack which rendered him unconscious. His father was sent for and it was not until late the following afternoon that he was restored to consciousness. The attack was due to acute indigestion.

A. L. Rickards, of Rickards Bros., New York city, was present at the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society February 22, and after an instructive and entertaining address, made the society an offer of a silver cup to be given as a first prize in any suitable class of flowers which the society may arrange for and also offered $10 cash as a second prize in the same class. The offer was received with manifestations of enthusiasm and was unanimously accepted.

The Market.

We are having heavy rains after several weeks of snowfall. Flowers were scarce while the greenhouses were covered with two feet of snow. Prospects are good for better weather and stock is commencing to improve. California violets are fine at present and bulbous stock is making a good showing. Good Beauties are shipped in from Buffalo and Cleveland.

BEVERLY, MASS.

The first meeting in Essex county of the Boston Market Gardeners' Association was held here February 19 and was attended by seventy-five members, who came on a special car attached to the 8:53 train from Boston. The visitors were met at the station by a number of the local market gardeners. They boarded special electric cars and were carried to North Beverly, where they spent the morning inspecting the greenhouses of J. F. Potter, A. H. Kitter, Wilder Caldwell, Frank Woodberry and Charles Caldwell.

Dinner was served at the North Beverly chapel. Following the dinner, the meeting of the association was held, J. B. Shurtleff, Jr., of Revere, president of the association, presiding. Mr. Shurtleff gave a history of the association, which was formed twenty-five years ago, and has done great work in the interest of market gardening.

Prof. Charles Brooks, of the New Hampshire Agricultural College, was the first speaker at the afternoon meeting. He took for his subject "Diseased Ground," giving advice in regard to the growing of vegetables. C. S. Heller, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, told of the way that market gardening was carried on in Norfolk, Va.

Bad weather and Lent are a bad combination and that is what we have been up against for some time. There has been plenty of stock of all kinds, and of some things more than plenty. The only branch of the business that was good was the funeral end; there has been lots of funeral work. However, there is not much complaint.

satisfied that less disbudding will allow of equally large blooms.

Smith T. Bradley, of New Haven, indorses the foregoing opinion, judging by the enormous crops he has had right through the season. Business has been so good that no blooms have gone to waste. Washington's birthday found him extremely busy with funeral work. He has a grand scarlet seedling, with a flower as large as Beacon and much brighter. Formosum is his favorite lily. Grown cool, it comes regular and averages five buds to a plant.

John Champion, of New Haven, says the violet is as popular as ever with the sons of "Old Eli," with sales highly satisfactory.

The Rowden & Mitchell Co., of Wallingford, Conn., has had the best winter business on record and is working up a big stock for spring sales.

John Coombs, of Hartford, Conn., a veteran and one of our most successful craftsmen, is confined indoors with rheumatism. His large circle of friends hope to see him around before long, as of yore. He suffered a heavy loss through a range of houses being overdosed with hydrocyanic acid gas, the loss being more serious because it occurred at a time when carnations were bringing the best prices.

J. F. Huss, gardener for J. J. Goodwin, at Hartford, says one of the prettiest of the hardy fern family is Blechnum speciosum, which becomes variegated with age. He justly prides himself on having what he believes to be the most

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Business in Spokane is on a see-saw order, like the weather. One day is quite busy and the next is quite the opposite. A young blizzard has lately been making plenty of funeral work and causing a scarcity of good roses. The winter season, at best, keeps the rose grower wishing for just a few more bright days. While not having strictly a rainy season, like the coast locations, we have our full quota of dark days.

Valentine trade was brisk, with plenty of good stock.

There is an abundance of most kinds of good stock, consisting of callas and Easter lilies, freesias, daffodils, alliums, azaleas, cyclamens, primulas, single violets and sweet peas. The California violet has invaded this market, being offered in all the stores, and also on the streets when the weather permits.

Various Notes.

A number of pretty Valentine's windows were seen on Riverside avenue. One of the best windows of the Spokane Florist Co. was in violet and white. The design was a collection of hampers, filled, and display boxes scattered about, with ribbon decorations. The special feature was a purple chiffon umbrella, with electric lights on the lower ends of the ribs. Below the umbrella was an attractive collection of seasonable white flowers. Another window shown by this firm had as its principal feature a floral fan, executed in light and dark pink. This window was all in pink and one of its good points was a collection of small valentine baskets.

The Hoyt Bros. Co. has eliminated the show window as a separate feature and thrown the whole store open to view from the street, from the floor up. This change is a decided improvement. Their Valentine's window consisted of a central piece, from which streamers extended to different arrangements, such as flower and plant baskets in pink, violet and white. The central figure was a heart of Enchantress carnations. Embedded in the heart was a picture of "Cupid Asleep." Some of the baskets were decorated with pussy willows.

A late feature of Miss Armstrong's window was a cascade wreath, all of valley, on a base of Easter lilies.

A new concern has opened for business at 420 Riverside avenue. It is styled the Rose Floral Co. The promoters are F. H. Manahan and H. J. Vollmer, both formerly of Chicago. It is their intention to run a popular priced store and they have announced the plant trade as one of their specialties. The store room is decorated in blue, rose color and white.

Miss Armstrong is again in her store, after a long illness.

C. E. Sullivan has left the city for Seattle. We understand that he has ambitions in the direction of Alaska.

Fred Winters has again taken his old position with Miss Armstrong.

Mr. Lundy, of San Francisco, representing the W. A. Manda Co., was calling on his customers in this vicinity lately, as was also J. R. Fotheringham, of the F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

The Market.

Lent is well under way and business in consequence is moving slowly. As there is nothing whatever doing in a social way, the retailers have nothing to console themselves with except funeral orders, and even these are not over-plentiful at this time. In summing up the business done, however, and comparing it with that of one year ago, there is a slight balance in favor of the present season. This is the experience of a majority of the dealers here, both retailers and wholesalers, and shows that we are moving in the right direction.

We have been treated to several sorts of weather during the last week and at the present writing the climatic conditions are all that we could wish for. Carnations are now at their best. The few weeks of cold weather kept them so backward that with the advent of warm nights and bright, sunshiny days they quickly made up the number of flowers which they were behind. Roses, although not so plentiful as carnations, are daily becoming more in evidence, with a corresponding advance both in color and form. Prices are a shade lower than they were, but they are now liable to remain about stationary until Easter.

Never have daffodils and narcissi been so cheap as at this time. The season was backward for everything out of doors until about February 1, when all came with a rush. From $1 per hundred down to about half will give an idea how cheap the stores can purchase bulbous stock. Violets are still at the height of their season and the growers are cutting them in such enormous quantities that they can be bought for almost any price the retailer cares to offer. Easter lilies are in good shape apparently and the chances are that there will be a heavy crop. Considerable depends on the weather, but so far all is favorable.

Valley is rather scarce, but there is quite enough to fill all orders. All other kinds of stock are in the same condition that they have been for the last few weeks. Fruit blossoms and wild flowers of several kinds help to remind us that spring is already here.

TRENTON, MO.—The projected Trenton Floral Co., which was to have built a place here, has been dropped. Plans had been made, some stock subscribed and the company partly organized, but the promoter, L. Derocher, has left town.

BOSTON, MASS.—R. C. Bridgham is sending out announcements to the effect that he has purchased the stock and good will of the business formerly conducted by Albert Scott, florist, at 67 Beacon street. Mr. Bridgham will continue the business, with his conservatories at Newtonville as a source of supply.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THE death of Maurice Butterfield, proprietor of nurseries at Lee's Summit and Farmington, Mo., is reported in this week's obituary column.

THE office building of the Lyon County Evergreen Nursery Co., at Marshall, Minn., was recently destroyed by fire, together with a large quantity of nursery stock, office fixtures and tools. The loss on the building was partly covered by insurance and the company will probably build again.

THE DOCK INSPECTION BILL.

The horticultural importers and forwarders have joined the American Association of Nurserymen in opposition to the Simmons bill now before congress, requiring dock inspection of imported nursery stock. The interests of the importing agents are identical with those of the nurserymen and each thinks the proposed law impracticable.

Referring to a recent record, McHutchison & Co., New York, say:

"The arrivals at the port of New York for the last eleven days of French nursery stock were as follows, which is about the average weekly shipment for the last three months:

Per S.S.	Date.	Cases.
Mexico	January 20	927
Oceanic	January 24	20
New York	January 29	22
Florida	January 31	408

Total1,375

"Each case contains 10,000 to 15,000 seedlings (some cases contain 40,000), so that the 1,375 cases contain an approximate total of 17,000,000 seedlings, valued when shipped at approximately $60,000, or at the dock in New York approximately $100,000, which includes about $26,000 paid to the United States government in import duties.

"The above shipments represent almost exclusively seedlings from France (representing raw material for nurserymen) which cannot be produced in the United States. The import duty exceeds in some instances 200 per cent of foreign cost. The seedlings are packed tightly by means of machinery and appliances in paper lined cases and unpacking in transit would greatly damage the contents, even if they could be repacked into the same cases.

"Entry has to be made and duty paid to the United States customs within forty-eight hours to comply with customs regulations. The cases must be removed within three to four days to comply with the steamship regulations, and a glance at above figures will prove that it cannot be done, even though the present congestion on the docks be entirely overlooked."

At a recent meeting of the Horticultural Importers' Association the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas: In January, 1909, a bill known as H. R. 27367 was introduced into the United States congress, providing for the inspection of nursery stock at ports of entry of the United States, which bill passed the House, was before the Senate and was being considered before the nurserymen had knowledge of it;

And Whereas: The legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen at that stage, receiving information that such a bill was being considered, secured a hearing before the committee on agriculture, Dr. Howard, the framer of the bill being present, and after lengthy argument succeeded in having the bill withdrawn on the understanding that the legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen would prepare a new bill which would be acceptable to Dr. Howard and the nurserymen of the United States;

And Whereas: The nurserymen did prepare such a bill having the endorsement and approval of the American Association of Nurserymen and the Association of Horticultural Inspectors, but though repeated efforts have been made to arrange a conference with Dr. Howard, those efforts have so far been without result;

And Whereas: On December 16, 1909, a bill known as H. R. 15656 was introduced into the House by Mr. Simmons, the text and purport of which is exactly the same as the former bill, known as H. R. 27367, and to which the nurserymen and kindred interests so strongly objected;

Therefore Be It Resolved: That the Horticultural Importers' Association here assembled protests against the passage of Bill H. R. 15656 as being impracticable and in the present congested condition of the New York docks impossible of execution without large unnecessary losses being incurred, and as the nurserymen's bill provides for adequate inspection at destination—which we believe to be the only practical and effective way—we strongly urge that the bill prepared by the legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen be substituted for H. R. 15656;

And Be It Further Resolved: That the secretary of this association be authorized to forward a copy of this resolution to the Hon. Chas. F. Scott, chairman of the committee on agriculture, the Hon. Wm. W. Cocks, of New York, and the other members of the committee on agriculture;

Both the nurserymen and the horticultural importers will welcome the assistance of any other horticulturists, acting either as organizations or as individuals, in accomplishing the defeat of what is considered impracticable and therefore pernicious legislation.

PLANTING SEED.

Choosing the Right Time.

It is now about time that all vegetable seeds, such as tomato, eggplant, pepper, etc., should be planted. They ought to be ready to transplant from the seed boxes in about seven to twelve days, and a month after transplanting they are ready for the field or for the market. In most small greenhouse ranges and in many large places the handling of vegetable plants is an important part of the business. There is usually a demand for more plants than the grower has room to produce. The greatest mistake that many make is to plant the seed too early or too late and the most troublesome and expensive item is getting the plants transplanted.

A Safe Rule to Follow.

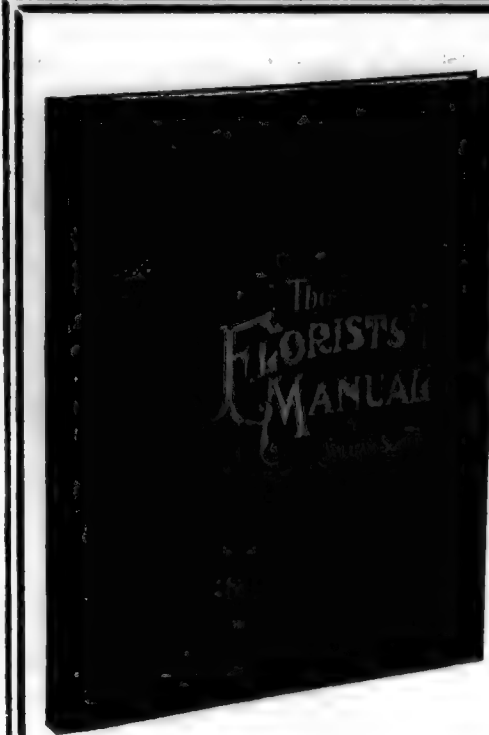

It is difficult to give exact dates for the planting of the seed, because in some latitudes it is possible to plant out into the garden much earlier than in others. It also makes considerable difference how the temperature of the house is kept in which the plants are started. But it is a safe rule to allow about five weeks from the date of planting the seed to the date of setting out the plants in the field. In the latitude of Chicago and New York it is risky to plant out tender plants earlier than the last week in May—excepting, of course, cabbage and cauliflower, which may be put out as soon as the ground can be worked, if they are hardy and cool grown.

Tomato plants seem to be in greatest demand of all vegetable plants, but eggplant and peppers are also good sellers. The earliest cabbage plants, being in demand several weeks earlier, must be planted much sooner, but it is not too late yet to plant the seeds of second early varieties, such as Succession and Early Summer. Cauliflower is not so much in demand and the seed is so expensive that it is best to grow only a very limited number, for which a good price must be received to come out even.

The Seed Flats.

All seed should be sown in flats, which should be about three and one-half inches deep. Fill these almost level full of finely sifted, sandy soil. Make the surface perfectly smooth and level with a square piece of board, pressed down gently. Barely cover the seed and sprinkle lightly with a fine spray; then, if any seed shows through, cover with a little more fine soil.

If a paper or a pane of glass is kept over the top of the box a few days, until the seeds commence to germinate, they will not dry out so much and will come up better and without any more than the first sprinkling. Any covering must be removed promptly as the seeds begin to sprout. They must be watered sparingly and aired freely. The object in filling the box almost level full of soil is to allow a free circulation of air across the top, through the tiny seedlings, to keep fungous growths from starting to damp them off.

Transplanting.

Transplant as soon as the seed leaves are spread, as they are handled much more easily then than later. Usually the last ones are too large to handle, anyhow, before they get attention. For this reason it is best not to plant all the seed in one day. If a few boxes are planted every day or two, they will not come on faster than one man can handle them.

In transplanting, they should not be less than two inches apart; two and one-half inches is better. If crowded too closely, they grow too tall and weak. I like to use flats for transplanting into and I keep them inside for a few days, until braced up; then I carry them out to the coldframes or hotbeds where they are to remain, being covered carefully at night.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The severe cold weather of last week had a depressing effect on the cut flower market. Stock of all kinds moved slowly, the end of the week finding the wholesalers loaded with flowers. The street fakers were in evidence on the downtown thoroughfares.

Roses are coming in more freely, there being plenty to fill all orders. Carnations are a drug. Bulb stock of fine quality finds practically no sale. Sweet peas, callas, Easter lilies and violets have sold better than other stock.

Various Notes.

The bowling match between the wholesalers and retailers now stands two for the retailers and one for the wholesalers. The wholesale men promise to take the next game, making it two games each, after which the fifth game will be played to decide just who are the best bowlers.

The Market.

The heavy call for funeral work continues, but with all this, flowers of all kinds, except roses, are a glut on the market. Roses still are quite scarce and, as stated last week, it takes large shipments from out of town to help supply the demand. It is with the colored carnations that the trouble lies. With the price so low that it hardly pays the growers to pick them, there are thousands thrown out. Bulb stock also is altogether too plentiful, especially tulips, daffs and valley. The latter has been in good demand all along and it is rather unusual to have it pile up. There has been an overabundance of sweet peas and forget-me-nots. Greens of all kinds clean up well and Asparagus plumosus sprays are scarce.

Various Notes.

J. F. Sullivan was compelled to walk several miles in a recent blizzard at midnight, and he froze both his ears badly. He was laid up several days, but is again on the job.

Many thousands of fancy ferns are packed and shipped daily from the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, going to all parts of the state.

Thos. Browne gave the members of the finance committee of the Florists' Club the use of his touring car for two days, and much of their success in obtaining so liberal a guarantee fund for the fall show is due to his efforts. H. S.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—G. Bischoff, one of the leading retailers here, has a fine, up-to-date place and grows everything that he needs in his line of trade. He has two houses of carnations, one house of roses, one house of palms and ferns, two houses of bedding plants, one house of lettuce, and one house of smilax with side benches of Sprenger. John Ferne, of Mr. Bischoff's place, says that business is good, as this is a great university town, with about 5,000 students, who spend their money liberally for flowers.

DENVER.

The Market.

Trade last week was fair. There was quite an amount of funeral work and some of it was of high class. Nearly everyone got some of it, making business fairly good, but not so much so but what each one could have done more. Flowers of all kinds are not yet any too plentiful and no one has a surplus to amount to anything when closing time comes. Roses continue to sell well, and white has been called for quite a little, some days hardly enough being brought in to go around. Killarney continues to be a good seller. Carnations, while a little more plentiful, are not yet abundant and the wholesalers still keep up the price. Violets are becoming more abundant every day, the best making 75 cents per hundred and the seconds 50 cents. Quite a number have been shipped in from California and are handled by the street fakery at a cheap price, much to the dissatisfaction of the retailers. But as yet they have found no way to get around them.

There is nothing as scarce as greens. Nearly all the smilax that is being used has been shipped in. There is quite a lot of bulb stock coming in; some of it is good and helps out wonderfully, for there is an increasing call for flowering plants of these. Rambler roses are unusually fine. Easter lilies have already taken the attention of the store men. It is reported that there is not such a big crop on hand.

Various Notes.

The Park Floral Co. has one of the finest lots of rambler roses seen in some time.

FLORIST PETUNIAS

Every florist having a design trade has felt the difficulty of getting suitable flowers for the work during hot weather, when roses and carnations are barely presentable. After years of selection we have found three varieties of Double Petunias, No. 1, Pure White; No. 2, Clear Shining Pink; No. 3, Pure Lavender, which have made us more money for the labor expended than anything we have ever handled. The flowers are large, 4 1/4 to 6 inches in diameter, and as a keeper during hot weather beats anything we have ever tried, while the enormous quantity of blooms they produce makes the cost practically nothing. We find indoor culture suits them best. Price, 2-inch pot plants, $1.50 per doz.; one dozen of each of the three varieties for $4.00.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

sons not acquainted with its poisonous properties. Only a grade which is ninety-eight to ninety-nine per cent pure should be used.

Sulphuric acid should not come in contact either with hands or clothes, as it will severely burn the flesh and ruin the clothes. It must not be placed in metal receptacles, as it will soon eat them to pieces.

Always put the water into the jars first, adding the acid later. Never pour water into the undiluted acid. After placing it in the jars the bags of cyanide should be added as soon as possible, for any delay will interfere with the proper reaction of the chemicals, owing to the fact that the acid acts most powerfully when it first unites with the water. The manner of putting the cyanide into the acid is also important. The bags should not be held a foot or more above the jars and dropped in, as the concussion might cause them to be thrown out by the reaction. Each bag must be carefully laid in the jar; but the fumigator must not lean over the jar as he does it, nor remain near it to watch the reaction.

The best-shaped jar, when using two ounces of cyanide to a jar, is one four or five inches in diameter and about nine inches high. If more cyanide is to be used in each receptacle, a larger jar must be used.

The foliage of plants to be fumigated should be perfectly dry; otherwise it will absorb the gas and be burned.

Fumigate in the cooler part of the day, and avoid, if possible, a temperature above 60 to 65 degrees, since at a higher one plants are more liable to be injured.

After a few fumigations the operator often becomes less attentive to the prescribed directions and precautions. This tendency should be promptly checked, the utmost care and caution being uniformly exercised.

CYCLAMEN CULTURE.

Easter flowering, you can easily hold them back by giving them as low a temperature as 42 to 45 degrees. After the plants are well rooted in their blooming pots, it is quite beneficial to water them with cow manure and soot water once or twice in two weeks, to give them the finishing touches of a glossy foliage and larger flowers, with good color.

As to insects, the green fly and thrips are the most injurious, but they are easily kept off with the nicotine solution, which we use regularly once a week.

The main points to be considered in growing good cyclamens are: Never neglect them in the least; avoid drafts, too dry or too wet conditions, or a close temperature; keep a circulation of fresh air; look out for insects; water moderately; do not use too strong manure and never use any chemicals.

A strong, rich leaf-mold, mixed with some mild sandy loam and allowed plenty of drainage, will make the culture of a good strain of cyclamens highly profitable and will make the plant a favorite with both the grower and his customer.

Should you want to select your own seed bearers, you will do well to start with the best strain of seed obtainable. From October to December is the right time to select the seed bearing plants for best results. I know of no other plant that so strikingly shows the good qualities—and still more the bad qualities—of the seed bearing plants, especially in the next generation. In selecting seed plants I look for a generally well built plant—stocky, not too spindly built; flowers well above the finely marked leaves; close growth of foliage; large five-petal flower spikes; clear, distinct colors; straight bearing of the flowers; in fact, everything that will help to make a finely built plant should be considered when picking out seed bearers.

The cyclamen plant illustrated in connection with this paper was grown by M. Bloy, a member of the Detroit Florists' Club, who had a whole houseful of such plants at Christmas and sold them all and who may justly claim to be some cyclamen grower himself.

Headquarters for Easter Plants Prepare for Easter!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see,

Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.

Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show

Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow.

The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day.

Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.

The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green,

With bulbs, and plumed Spiraea, the best you've ever seen.

And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear,

For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear.

If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring,

Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

This seems now to be the daily talk of every florist.

"I know what I am going to do," a wise man remarked the other day. "I have been so often deceived I will be no more, but I shall send in my order direct to our friend Godfrey Aschmann. He shall be my man this Easter. He has everything full and plenty and what he advertises is no BLUFF. We can always depend on him to get what we need, and cheap, too. As much as we know, he goes himself to Europe and selects in Belgium the cream of Azaleas, Palms and Araucarias. He does all that for the sake of his customers, to please them."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, planted in the fall as soon as they arrive from Belgium into 6-in., 7 and 8-in. pots, placed in greenhouses and kept cool in the winter, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. Please bear in mind the fact (mostly unknown to some Azalea consumers) that fully 80 per cent to 40 per cent of the newly imported azaleas in dormant state will lose their buds and leaves during sea voyage and during winter up to February 1, and have to be kept over for another year. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers, and, therefore, you can't expect an azalea at this time as big and as cheap as if you would buy them in dormant state in the fall.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. All sizes in the following prices: 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Azalea Indica

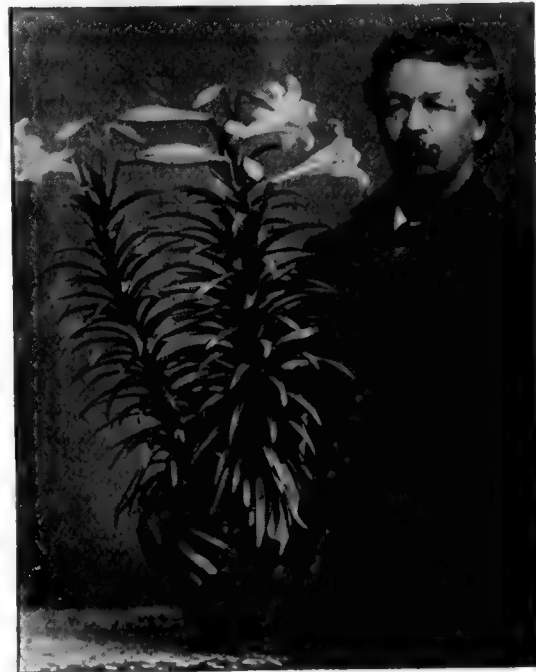

In large plants we have the following, full of buds: Bernard Andre Alba (pure white), Niobe (pure white), Helene Thelemann (rose, light pink), Memoire de L. Van Houtte, large flowers (double pink), Empress of India, large flowering (double variegated), Dr. Moore (double pink), Mme. Van der Cruyssen (best of all the pink), Apollo (red), De Schryveriana (double variegated), $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00. In smaller sizes we have the following varieties, full of buds: Deutsche Perle (double white), Vervaneana (double variegated), a well known standard variety, Apollo (red), Simon Mardner (double pink), De Schryveriana (double variegated), Empress of India (double variegated), all well budded, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. This is a well known, bright, variegated variety. Mme. Van der Cruyssen (pink), 60c, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25. In Niobe (double white), have only the $1.00 and $1.25 sizes to offer, the smaller plants having dropped their buds. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please. No references.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

GODFREY ASCHMANN, 1012 West Ontario Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.
IMPORTER, WHOLESALE GROWER AND SHIPPER OF POT PLANTS

ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

The 9 to 10 Japanese lily bulbs were nearly a failure last fall, owing to the bad weather. While other florists and some dealers only received 20 to 30 per cent of their orders, we were one of the fortunate, receiving the full amount of our order (5000) from one grower in Japan. No joke when I tell you our lilies were never so nice and perfect as this year. Orders of lilies only positively will not be filled; if you want the lilies it will be necessary for your caller to call for other stock also.

Begonia, new improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per doz. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per doz.

Primula Obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida grandiflora. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. We have a house full in very fine condition, in bud now, just right for Easter, large plants, full of buds. Remember Gladstone is scarce this year, owing to the dry weather in Holland last year, but we were fortunate to have received enough to supply all of our customers; price, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, 4-in. pots, $12.00 per 100.

Murillo Tulips, best double pink, 3 bulbs in a 4-in. pot, $2.00 per dozen pots.

Touneol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a 4 in. pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Daffodil Von Sion, this is the best double nosed narcissus in cultivation, 8 double nosed bulbs, planted in a 6-in. pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per doz. pots. All bulb stock is strictly of our own importation and is of the best Holland production.

Arcia Lutescens, 5-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 35c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½-in., 25c to 30c.

POTTING SHED PHILOSOPHY.

A rooted cutting specialist sends out a card with the following:

"Did it ever occur to you that a man's life is full of crosses and temptations? He comes into the world without his consent, and goes out against his will, and the trip between is exceedingly rocky. The rule of contraries is one of the features of the trip.

"When he is little, the big girls kiss him; when he is big the little girls kiss him. If he is poor, he is a bad manager; if he is rich, he is dishonest. If he needs credit, he can't get it; if he is prosperous, everyone wants to do him a favor.

"If he is in politics, it is for graft. If he is out of politics, he is no good to the country. If he doesn't give to charity, he is a stingy cuss; if he does, it is for show. If he is actively religious, he is a hypocrite; if he takes no interest in religion, he is a hardened sinner.

"If he gives affection, he is a soft specimen; if he cares for no one, he is cold-blooded. If he dies young, there was a future for him; if he lives to an old age, he missed his calling.

"If he saves money, he is a grouch; if he spends it, he is a loafer; if he gets it, he is a grafter; if he don't get it, he's a bum. So what's the use? Life is one damn thing after another; but since you must tarry here for a while, you might as well make the most of it by sending me an order for your rooted cuttings."

CRICKET SAVED GREENHOUSES.

Attention! All ye nature fakers! Can you beat this? It comes from Wenatchee, Wash.:

"Last Friday night the costly greenhouse and buildings of the Milot-Mills Floral Co. would have been burned to the ground if it had not been for the timely warning of 'Billiken,' a pet cricket that Leon Milot has been taming for some time.

"So far he has never seen Billiken, but the chirping starts up every time he enters the greenhouse. Milot always chirps back, and a friendship sprang up between him and Billiken that stood him in good stead a few nights ago.

"He was awakened in the middle of the night by Billiken's chirping, and as the noise was not only at an unusual hour, but also more pronounced than ever before, Mr. Milot decided that something must be wrong. He did not get up at first, but waited and wondered what it could be that was distressing Billiken so very much. Finally he got up and followed in the direction of the chirping. Down in the furnace room there was cause enough. A large pile of newspapers had caught fire, and in a little while more the building would have been burned to the ground.

"Mr. Milot was able to put the fire out alone, and Billiken evidently went back to bed, exhausted by his frantic attempts at saving the nursery.

"So far Billiken is still too shy to come out, but his cheerful chirp is heard around the greenhouse every day, assuring his friend that he is always on the job, ready any moment to chirp the fire call."

Greenhouse Heating.

UNDERGROUND SMOKE FLUE.

I have a brick smokestack, eighteen feet high. The inside opening is 12x12 inches. I should like to change my flue, because my neighbors complain of too much smoke. Could I run a 10-inch flue underground for forty feet and then run this flue into the chimney of my dwelling house, where the flue is 9x9 inches? My boiler at present draws so hard that the flames come out four feet if I have the dampers open. I intend to have my underground pipes arranged so that I can clean them out every month if necessary.

W. H.

I have never seen a plan of this sort in operation, but it appears to me to be the same in principle as the flue carried around a greenhouse, and such flues, when well built and properly graded, work well. If you can give the underground flue a rise of from eight inches to one foot in the forty feet, I believe it will work.

C.

ESTIMATING RADIATION.

In figuring on a boiler, how many square feet of heating surface to the foot? One square foot of boiler heating surface will heat how many square feet of hot water radiation?

J. H. T.

It is estimated that one square foot of heating surface in a hot water boiler will provide heat for eight square feet of radiation in the heating system.

If a pipe heater is in question, the heating surface will depend upon the size of the pipe used, each square foot of radiation being supplied by two lineal feet of 1½-inch pipe, or two and three-tenths lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe, or one and three-fifths lineal feet of 2-inch pipe.

The Market.

We still have a touch of winter with us. The crocuses are not yet sprouting with us, but the weather is bright and good for blooming stock. Roses continue scarce, especially white, while Beauties are still hard to get and high. Carnations are about equal to the demand, and violets are plentiful, as is also bulb stock. Trade has been fairly good, there having been a great deal of funeral work. Easter orders are beginning to straggle in already. Price lists are out, and we are now waiting for time and the weather man.

Various Notes.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some first-class double and single violets. They also have some fine bulb stock and a good quantity of Easter plants on sale now.

T. H. Hall has been cutting a lot of good red tulips and also had a fine crop of La Reine.

E. Nagel is cutting carnations and has some fine looking houses ready for the Easter trade.

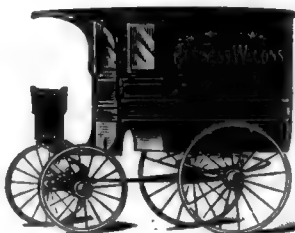

R. A. Latham finds business first-class, and bulb stock moves quickly at this store.

Mrs. Helena Swanson, mother of O. C. Swanson and S. R. Swanson, of Minneapolis, and Aug. S. Swanson, of St. Anthony Park, died February 22 at her home, 1114 East Nineteenth street, of heart failure, the burial taking place Monday afternoon, February 28. The sympathy of the trade is with our brother florists.

Here's Food For Thought

A very large percentage of your business is done by means of telephoning. Hundreds of your customers never see the inside of your store, but they do see your wagon, and if it is cheap and shabby, they will think that your store is of the same character. But if your wagon is well painted and artistically lettered, they will know that you are progressive, and they will be glad to trust you with their business.

You will never need to worry if your wagon is an ARMLEDER. Get our Catalogue I. It shows more than one hundred styles and you'll know the reason why. It's free, but you must ask for it. Easy terms if desired.

"A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE"

NEW YORK BELTING
AND
PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

THE MASTIN AUTOMATIC WHITEWASH AND SPRAYING MACHINE IS RELIABLE, PRACTICAL AND DURABLE

The tank is made of galvanized sheet steel, and in brass.
The pump is of brass throughout, simple and powerful.
The mixing device keeps the contents of the tank well stirred up from start to finish.

When the machine is filled to within six inches of the top, a few strokes of the pump will compress enough air in the tank to produce a continuous mist-like spray for 15 minutes.

All parts are made to gauge and may be had for repairs.
Ask your dealer about our Extension Hose, Extension Rods, and the Mastin Whitewash Nozzle for Bordeaux mixture.

Sold through seedsmen, dealers in florists' and poultry supplies.

The Market.

Trade is still heavy, with stock a little scarce, especially in roses. The continued cloudy weather has been quite hard on all stock and all coming in is more or less soft. Carnations have been quite plentiful, with demand heavy. The supply of roses is not nearly equal to the demand. Killarney and Richmond have been badly off crop locally, but a nice crop is in sight for the near future. Brides and Maids are in fairly good supply, but are cleaned up daily. Beauties have been a scarce article in this market for the last two or three weeks, with demand fair. Large quantities of bulbous stock are in now and demand is heavy, especially on tulips, which have moved much better than in previous seasons. Paper Whites sell readily and help out a great deal in funeral work. The demand for valley is quite heavy and there is a good supply.

Single violets have not been plentiful here, owing to the cloudy weather, and the call for them is heavy. The double violets are coming in quantities, but at times there are not nearly enough to meet the demand. Sweet peas are quite plentiful, with a variable call. Azaleas are moving well at good figures and the demand for medium-priced plants has been extra heavy, while other plants have been moving nicely, especially in blooming stock. Ferns and palms have been selling rather slowly since azaleas, etc., have been in good supply.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club gave its dance February 16 and a nice crowd was present and had a fine time. The next dance will be held March 30, when it is expected to have a record breaking crowd.

Sherman Stephens reports business heavy, especially in funeral work.

E. Metzmaier says business keeps up well in all branches.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting heavily on carnations at present and finds a ready sale for them. They also have a fine lot of azaleas, etc.

The Riverside Floral Co. reports business good.

Wm. Graff has been on the sick list for a few days with an attack of grip, but is on deck again and reports business heavy on funeral work.

The street fakers are out again in numbers and seem to have plenty of stock at all times. They were out in the freezing weather of last week and the trade is wondering how well pleased their customers were after getting their frozen stock home.

About ten couples went out to O. A. Munk's residence Tuesday night, February 22, and gave him and his wife quite a surprise, as they all masked and went in a bob sled, taking plenty of ice cream and cake along. J. M.

You Can't Mistake a U-Bar House

The very minute you see a U-Bar you know it is a U-Bar. It has that U-Bar light airiness about it—that nicety of detail and perfection of finish that stamps it as the finest of greenhouses. Everybody knows they can't be equalled for growing houses, and that's what you want houses for. Don't make the mistake of getting a house that looks like the U-Bar; have a U-Bar and then you know you have the best house. Glad to send you a catalogue if you will write for it.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business for the last fortnight was, considering that we are in the midst of Lent, quite satisfactory. The supply of bulbous stock, violets and carnations has increased to such an extent that it means hustle on the part of the wholesale dealers to keep stock from piling up. In consequence prices have taken a drop. The only article that held its own and was quickly disposed of was white carnations.

Sweet peas are arriving in larger quantities and the quality is good. They move well. Roses are about equal to demand and all Beauties are disposed of. The supply of green goods is not equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

Last week the Milwaukee Automobile Club held its second annual exhibition, in the large hall of the Auditorium, and this created a demand for decorative plants, wild smilax and wreathing, which were furnished by Wm. Zimmermann. Owing to a misunderstanding, quite a number of local auto dealers held an independent exhibition, which in turn also kept several florists busy decorating the private garages.

The Wisconsin Floral Co. reports a good business for Washington's birthday, in flowers running in the red, white and blue shades.

The Baumgarten Floral Co., at Fifth street and Grand avenue, had its window decorated with sweet peas, violets and daffodils, in vases that were covered with crepe paper of the same shade as the flowers, presenting a most artistic sight.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. says that the average business for the month of February was quite satisfactory. At present the firm is having a run on sweet peas and bulbous stock.

J. M. Fox & Son, on Milwaukee street, are displaying some exceptionally fine tulips in neat pans.

Owing to sickness, Manager Gust Rush, of the Holton & Hunkel Co. force at the wholesale house, was confined to his home the first part of this week.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. always keeps a good supply of blooming plants on hand and reports them moving finely. Shipping trade with them keeps up well.

Mr. Olson, of Holm & Olson, St. Paul, Minn., spent Tuesday and Wednesday, February 22 and 23, in our city, for a sociable call.

Harry Balsley, the pot man from Detroit, was a week-end caller. E. O.

EL PASO, ILL.—The El Paso Carnation Co. now has nine houses, one for growing violets having been put up last fall. Business is good and the demand constantly increasing.

The Cockcroft Range at Saugatuck, Conn.

Where two connected houses are desired for locating in some certain square of ground, a parallel layout like this one works out to splendid advantage. It happens that this particular one is located in the very midst of a walled-in garden, and was laid out to occupy the space between the garden drive and main walk. The result is certainly charming. The small house connecting the larger ones, gives additional valuable space, and makes it possible to place the houses wide enough apart so one will not shade the other, which is a highly important consideration in successful greenhouse results.

So much for its plan—now a word about its construction. It is Sectional Iron Frame throughout. Not a stick of wood used in it, where iron or steel could be employed. It is not the kind of construction that answers to the question how cheap, but how good. If you want just such a thoroughly good, practical, every way enduring and best growing house built, then you want us to build it. If you are interested, we will be glad to send you a large size photo of this house, along with a sketch plan and a more detailed description.

MASONIC DESIGNS.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from photographs of three designs recently made by the Bell Floral Co., for the funeral of a prominent Mason of Franklin, Pa. The designs represent the three different branches of the Masonic body and are of the character often called for in every flower store. And the average florist finds it an extremely difficult proposition to reproduce society emblems in recognizable form and give his work any artistic quality. For this reason these designs will be specially interesting.

The picture on the right was for the Knights Templar. It represents the blood red cross and golden crown. The cross is easy to achieve; regular in form and can be made of Richmond roses at any time of year. The crown of gold must vary in accordance with the season, and sometimes immortelles are the only yellow material available. The compass and square is for the Blue Lodge and the Bell concern worked out the figures, one in violets and the other in white roses, backed by the cycas leaves. The keystone is the insignia of the Chapter and is made in white, using any small flowers. The edging of smilax serves to give the design form and the spray of roses is all the embellishment that can safely be added without detracting from the characteristic quality of the piece.

PROBLEMS IN DECORATING.

Making the Most of Small Flowers.

We must often make the best of what is at hand, while we can think of a dozen other things that would be better, but which are not at hand. Among some of these difficult things is to use small flowers tellingly in a large building or room. Of course, we must have them in quantities, but even then it takes planning to get any kind of a striking effect.

For instance, suppose we are to decorate a church for a wedding and it is to be a sweet pea wedding. In this case the sweet peas, as ordinarily used in vases or bowls, would amount to nothing at all. Instead, we must plan to display the flowers in masses and yet in such a way that they will be visible from all parts of the building without obstructing the view of the ceremony. In the first place, we must have thousands of them and we must have the ability to work them up quickly, with a decided plan, and with the details well in mind at the beginning.

The Ball and Garland Decoration.

To secure something which will be suggestive and dainty enough to conform to the character of the flowers, try a huge ball or a group of balls, with showers, which can be attached late to avoid any wilting. The ball should be made suspended and should never be set on anything after the flowers have been put in. One good-sized ball is better than a number of small ones, unless they are well grouped from one central point. This point should be well to the front, especially if it is a chancel decoration. Garlands of sweet peas on green may be extended to as many and as distant points as the size of the building and the supply of flowers will allow. The garlands should be decidedly heavy, as slender ones are apt to appear stringy at a little distance. After starting from the ball as a center, if the space is wide, catch up the garlands one-half or two-thirds of the way across and carry them through a wreath suspended slightly higher than the ball. This wreath may be of the same or a contrasting color, and either solid or blended coloring will best develop the decorative lines.

Possibly a little explanation may be needed of the term "blended." If, for instance, pink sweet peas of different tints and shades are employed, they should be shaded and painted in from dark to light, rather than mixed indiscriminately.

The Finishing Touches.

After passing a group of garlands through the wreath, they may be scattered and caught up on the sides of the chancel at convenient distances apart. Care should be taken that they shall terminate at odd lengths, and a pretty finish from the ends of them, as they hang from the points where they are finally fastened, would be bows of ribbon or chiffon or tiny balls. To complete this decorative scheme, bank the top of the chancel rail along its entire distance, just high enough to show the flowers from a distance, but not to obscure the view into the chancel.

Another plan to use this same material would be what might be called a pendant and pedestal effect, which is a collection of baskets or plaques mounted on pedestals, with an overhanging basket or bowl, from which a shower extends to the group of flowers below. A shower attached to the lower group, as near the floor as is desired, will lengthen the effect. Repeat this design indefinitely, as space will permit.

Other small flowers may be used in much the same way. Among others might be hyacinths, valley, freesias, daffodils and other narcissi. There is no reason why carnations, and other moderate-sized flowers which will work in to good advantage in ordinary design work, could not be used in the ball and garland decoration. The wreath and the garland alone could be employed with good effect without the balls. If the weather is warm, considerable care will be needed to get the flowers in place without showing the effects of the heat, but if it is possible to do so the result will be well worth the extra care and quick work.

Masonic Designs by the Bell Floral Co., Franklin, Pa.

The Spectator's Point of View.

Another little problem that bobs up serenely every little while is, how to improve the looks of the sides of a funeral design or spray. Too often all the flowers are made to look upward and not sideways. This point is more important in a design than many people seem to think, judging by the looks of the work they turn out. There is another point of view, besides that of the person who stands over the work bench and looks down upon his piece. Suppose you are at a funeral and you see a number of sprays on top of the casket. The carnations and roses in the sprays are often all turned upward and not one is allowed to fall to the side or over the stems, and as you view it from the side you see nothing but profile views of the flowers. The same is true of designs. Train some of the flowers downward as far as the bottom of the frame.

Opinions are quite conflicting as to whether the stems of violets and other small flower bunches should be covered or not. In many places the bunch is considered unfinished if the stems are not swathed in tinfoil. In other places the trade has been educated to the point of appreciation of the beauty of the stems themselves, and it seems to be the wiser course to leave the stems uncovered unless customers express a preference for the other arrangement.

Copying Nature.

You have often seen a graceful branch or tip of a plant or tree, and have wondered if the same pattern could not be used somewhere in your design work. It surely could be, and to good advantage. Why not make a casket spray after its pattern, or throw a festoon across the thusiasm into something which you think is foolish and it is sure to be unsatisfactory to the customer as well as yourself. Follow along the line of a customer's thought and develop something a little different from what he expects, and you will thus introduce a little element of pleasant surprise, by working out a better scheme than he had in mind himself.

A WORD FOR CLEAR OUTLINES.

Charles P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., thinks a set piece should be made with sharp enough outline to show unmistakably what it is intended to represent. "I often have seen the Masonic square and compass made up so that if it were not for the letter 'G' in the center you could not tell the design from a loosely made wreath," said he. "This I think is all wrong, but I should be glad to hear from others who have ideas on the subject. Let them set them forth in this department of the REVIEW." The Editor will, with pleasure.

"To illustrate my meaning," said Mr. Mueller, "take the order we recently had for a floral mail car. It was one of those orders that come through the taking up of a collection among the fellow employees of the deceased—a good bit of money is raised and nothing will do but some eccentric piece, usually self, was to be four feet long, so we first made our panel, about a foot longer. The background for the car proper was of galax leaves, with boxwood for the lower background, or base. The car stood on rails of chenille, the ballast in the track being represented by yellow immortelles. The body of the car was made of white carnations, with Enchantress for the doors and windows. All the outlines, as well as wheels, doors, pouch catcher, windows, etc., were brought out with chenille. There also was an envelope made on a small panel, of white carnations, bearing full address, stamp, cancellation and postmark, and the piece made a great hit with the railway mail clerks.

"The outer edges of the panel were, in this case, left plain, but if anything further seemed necessary I should rather have added it in the shape of an edging of smilax and flowers outside the panel than to have obscured the character of the design itself by any use of flowers that would take away from the recognizability of the idea."

The Landscape Beautiful, by Frank A. Waugh; the Orange Judd Co., New York; price, $2 net.

Frank A. Waugh, professor of horticulture and landscape gardening at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., has written a number of essays on the different phases of landscape that have just been published as a handsomely printed volume of more than 300 pages. This is not for "those amiable and practical people who always prefer a concrete statement," but, rather, is designed to hold the interest of the amateur student of landscape, whose purpose is "to enlarge his own capacities of enjoyment." In other words, this is not one of the "How to" gardening books of which so many have made their appearance in the last few years; its purpose is to develop the reader's appreciation of the work of nature, and of man, rather than to teach "the art that does mend nature."

"An intelligent appreciation of landscape seems to have been too rare among all sorts of art students," says Prof. Waugh, but no one who has the slightest interest in the subject can lay this volume down without having had that appreciation stimulated. In addition to the purely discursive essays there is an excellent one "On American Landscape Gardeners," and another "On American Masterpieces of Landscape Architecture" that will be enjoyed by all who have found pleasure in these men and their characteristic works. The volume concludes with a chapter "Suggesting Some Practical Applications," descriptive of a plan of landscape study which has been tried in the schools of Amherst, Mass., and which might with profit be applied to the study of other things than the landscape, for it is nothing more than a scheme for teaching pupils to see that which lies before their eyes—not the general effect, but the details.

The volume is freely illustrated with halftone reproductions of photographs.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

National Chrysanthemum Society.

At the annual meeting of the National Chrysanthemum Society, recently held in London, the committee placed a favorable report in the hands of the members and the proceedings were of a harmonious character. The principal officers were re-elected, namely: T. Bevan, chairman of the executive committee; J. Green, treasurer, and J. H. Witty, secretary.

A resolution to appoint foreign corresponding members was carried without dissension and the following were appointed: C. H. Totty, America; T. W. Pockett, Australia; Rene Monneja, France.

First-class certificates were awarded in 1909 as follows: Early-flowering Japanese, 2; Japanese, 6; early-flowering singles, 2; singles, 4; Japanese single, 1; incurved, 3; decorative and market, 8.

It was decided to institute a new award, to be known as an award for color, to meet the case where a variety has a particularly pleasing shade of color, but which may not reach the necessary standard of quality on all points to receive a first-class certificate. From a decorative point of view such flowers are worthy of notice and it will now be at the discretion of the floral committee to grant an award for color.

Work of the English Societies.

The activity of the English special horticultural societies is by no means confined to the holding of exhibitions. Trials of sweet peas and carnations were conducted last summer under the auspices of the societies devoted to these flowers, and conferences were successfully organized by the National Chrysanthemum and National Sweet Pea Societies. Now the National Dahlia Society has arrangements well in hand for a conference, March 4, at which G. Gordon, V. M. H., J. Stredwick and J. B. Riding will take the leading parts. The Royal Horticultural Society is experimenting with plants supposed to be good for salads, introducing, from the continent of Europe and from America, seeds of all known plants reputed as good for salads.

For the purpose of afforestation in Scotland, the British government has placed orders with nurserymen for 240,000 common spruce, 150,000 larch, 80, 000 Scotch spruce, 45,000 silver fir, 40,000 Sitka spruce and 35,000 Douglas spruce.

On the Continent.

Reports from Holland and Belgium show that there is now great activity among the executives responsible for the international exhibitions in Haarlem and Brussels, which open, respectively, in March and April, and steamship and railway time-tables are now being anxiously studied and plans made by up-to-date horticulturists who cannot afford to miss the events of the year. A Japanese exhibition in London will also claim attention, on account of the Japanese gardens, at present in the hands of one of Japan's leading landscape gardeners and a staff of Japanese gardeners.

Determined not to be outdone, F. Henkel, of Darmstadt, Germany, has gone to Japan to study Japanese gardening on the spot. He is no novice as it is, in this style of gardening, as was proved by his Japanese gardens at the Mannheim exhibition a year or two ago, and he has constructed many gardens on Japanese lines in Germany. He is also an authority on, and an extensive grower of, aquatic plants. Already one of Germany's foremost men, he will no doubt return with wider views and new ideas, to capture fresh laurels in the world of horticulture.

A DISEASED KENTIA.

I recently sold a Kentia Belmoreana which I had owned nearly two years. It left my hands in a perfectly healthy condition. I delivered it to the customer on a mild day, and placed it in a bay window where it has southern exposure, in a large, airy room in a steam-heated apartment. The plant had been there only five days when I was called to prescribe for it. It had been watered only once during that time, as I had watered it thoroughly when I delivered it. It has not suffered for want of water. There is no gas used in the room, as electricity is used for lighting. Yet, at the end of five days the plant was nearly dead, with the leaves fast turning yellow.

Can you give me any reason for such a change in its condition? It had not been repotted since last June. I have had a palm from the same importation in my house, with steam heat and gas for light, and no harm has come to it for over two years. G. J. B.

From the description of the condition of this kentia, it is evidently a case of stem-rot, a disease that occasionally breaks out among the plants of this genus, and if one should lift the plant by the top or bend it sharply it would probably break off at the base and the heart of the stem would be found to be rotten. If this diagnosis is correct, the disease probably had already attacked the plant before it was sold, but had not progressed far enough to be noticeable. W. H. T.

RETARDING EASTER LILIES.

Do you know if Formosa lily plants in green bud, nearly ready to bloom, could be put in a cellar carried at 40 to 45 degrees, where we keep cut flowers, and be held back two or three weeks. If so, how long would it take to bloom them when put back on the bench? Or would it be better to wait until part of the buds are in bloom and then put them in the cellar? I am afraid of blasting the buds or damping off, unless advised to do so.

H. D. H.

It will be much better for you to allow the first flowers to open on your Formosas before placing them in the cool cellar. You can hold them a couple of weeks in good condition in the temperature you refer to. It would not do to take plants in bud from a warm house into the cellar. In all probability many of the buds would never open at all. Before you move them, lower your greenhouse temperature in advance, so that the change will be less marked.

PRIMULA OBCONICA.

A primrose by the river's brim,
Only a primrose is to him.

For years the trade did not realize the great beauty and usefulness of Primula obconica, but lately it has become such a common article of stock that the average florist is apt to overlook its importance and sometimes neglect its not exacting requirements. But the primrose, no less than most other subjects for greenhouse culture, gives results in proportion to the care that is put upon it; it suffers from the sins of omission as much as from those of commission, and it responds nobly to rational, liberal treatment. Well grown primulas are a joy to their grower, along about Thanksgiving time and later, and they turn in an excellent interest on the investment.

The primulas are the least troubled with any of our greenhouse pests of any cultivated plants. The principal thing to remember is that they do not like much heat—there is far more danger of growing them too warm than too cool. After they have left the seed pan they need a good, open soil; two parts loam, one part sifted cow manure and one part leaf-mold will suit them nicely, potted only moderately firm. The leaf stems break rather easily and to get the best of plants the shifting should not be left to a careless man.

"If you wish to have primroses by are many other plants, not better, but the people want a change, and for an Easter plant we do not prize them. It is in early winter that they are such favorites with everybody.

"The coldframe is an excellent place to summer over the primroses. With the glass shaded and the sashes raised back and front, it is cool, and if you will not neglect them there is no place in the greenhouse where they can be grown as well. If the frame is in the shade of trees, so much the better. It is coolness you want.

"Sow on some light loam and leaf-mold that has been previously well watered. Just press in the seed and cover with more leaf-mold very lightly; when the seed is out of sight it is covering enough. Place a pane of glass over the flat or pan and don't let the soil get parched. When the little plants are up keep the pan in the coolest place you have.

"In five or six weeks they can be potted singly in 2-inch pots, using clean pots. I have found these little plants do finely on a shelf in a house that had a good shade. In another five or six weeks they will go into a 3-inch pot. If you don't have a coldframe, then give them a bench where it is shaded overhead, and they can get plenty of air. By the end of August or early September they should be shifted into their flowering pot. We sell most of them in 4-inch pots, and the great majority go as soon as one fine truss is developed, but to grow a fine plant they should have a 5-inch.

"After the heat of summer is gone we try to keep them at about 50 degrees at night, but less won't hurt them in the least. And don't crowd them at any time. They must have full room for the spread of their pretty leaves, or they are useless. They need little syringing, and none when in flower, but when growing during summer a fine sprinkling does them good. They wilt quickly when allowed to suffer for want of water and need plenty of water from seedpan to flowering. The soil should be always in that condition that it will take plenty of water.

"If you flower them as late as March or April their flowers will need shading."

The illustration opposite is prepared from a photograph made early in November, 1909, in a house at Lakeside cemetery, Minneapolis, in which A. J. Smith had grown 2,000 fine plants of Primula obconica.

EXPERIMENTS WITH PRIMULAS.

J. L. Schiller, of Toledo, O., has lately been giving a good deal of time and attention to the culture of primulas, partly for experimental purposes, and he has found this class of flowers even more interesting and pleasing than he expected. He says that when his sample plants—about 250 of them—were in bloom, the array of colors was really a revelation to him. As he has watched them time after time, his admiration has increased, and each plant, as his gaze has rested on it, has seemed to him for the moment to be more beautiful than all the others.

The colors, he says, are numerous and distinct, ranging from the softest lilac to a deep purplish crimson, and from pure white and light pink to a dark blood-red. They are mostly self colors, combined in many cases, of course, with dark and bright eyes, which contrast magnificently with the rest of the flower.

to make of them is to plant them in your flower border or lawn. The daffodils look well in grass, especially where it is not mown too closely, and the tulips will bloom nicely in any mixed flower border where herbaceous and annual plants are grown.

October you should sow in April," advised Wm. Scott, author of that widely read volume, the "Florists' Manual," "and if you wish to have them in spring you should sow again at the end of August. You can with care sow any time from March to September. We usually sow about May 1, which gives us flowering plants from November on to March, after which we think there House Containing Two Thousand Primula Obconica.

Many of the flowers have shown remarkable lasting qualities, remaining on the plants for two months, though their record in this respect, Mr. Schiller thinks, may have been partly due to the lack of sunshine during the present winter.

One specimen from Mr. Schiller's collection, a Primula obconica grandiflora, is shown in the illustration. The flowers on this plant were from one and a quarter to one and a half inches in diameter, and would probably have been considerably larger, he says, if he had been able to give the plants the most favorable sort of treatment. "But the time and the space were always lacking," he says, "and my special reason for growing them was my desire to become acquainted with all the new colors and with the growth and general development of the flowers.

"The fringed strain of the grandiflora type is perfect," Mr. Schiller continues, "but the colors are not yet so varied, though they will surely become so in time.

"The gigantea type, a production of Mr. Arends, of Germany, has flowers of extra large size. Many that I have measured at the establishment of a neighboring florist, whom I supplied with the seed, have a diameter of one and seven-eighths inches. The colors of this strain are likewise distinct, but not numerous. White is entirely missing so far, and the fringed flowers are not so perfect as in the grandiflora type.

"Sowings made during March and early April, or even later, can be had in full bloom for Christmas, and no special hurry is needed. Their greatest growth takes place during the months of August, September and October, when the nights are cool and dewy."

FREDONIA, N. Y.—The J. H. Larder Floral Co. has been incorporated.

THE FIRE QUEEN PRIMULA.

Primula obconica is not as largely grown in Great Britain as it is in Germany, and new shades of this easily grown half-hardy perennial will not excite as much interest as in that country, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser (English), but everyone who has appreciated the commercial value of this primula will not be indifferent to the progress recently made in its evolution.

The novelty, Fire Queen, shown at the Berlin International Exhibition by George Arends, of Ronsdorf, near Elberfeld, Germany, is the latest acquisition among Primula obconica, and it deserves the interest of any market grower making a specialty of quick-growing, half-hardy plants.

I, myself, have never been an enthusiastic admirer of this kind of primula, notwithstanding the popularity it enjoys in Germany, considering, as I did, the color as being capable of much improvement, and seeing no possibility of a sudden change into a bright, pure red or crimson. My surprise was therefore complete when I saw last summer a lot of this novelty grown at the raiser's nursery, at Ronsdorf. Fire Queen originated in a batch of seedlings of the Kermesina strain, among which the raiser observed a few plants showing a tendency to salmon-red. If this novelty is not yet a true scarlet, it is all that can be desired as to purity, intensity and distinctness of color, which may be classed as a salmon-tinted carmine, quite distinct from crimson or purple, and rather inclining to orange-red. It may be compared to Primula Chinensis Defiance.

The growing qualities and the vigor of the flower trusses are nearly as perfect as in other colors of the Ronsdorf strain, the reputation of which is generally known. On the other hand, the size of the individual flower does not yet reach that of the giant-flowering class, but it would be asking too much to have at once all qualities developed to the summit of perfection in a novelty of this kind. It will certainly take less trouble to select within a few years a large-flowering strain out of this variety than has been necessary to fix this new color.

DISEASE ON PRIMULAS.

Here are some primula leaves that are affected with a disease, the like of which I never have seen. Only a part of the stock is thus far affected, but it is spreading rapidly to the others. The plants are growing in rich soil in a temperature of 48 to 52 degrees. The treatment has been identical with what I have given in other seasons when I had no trouble. Please tell me what the disease is, and what should be done to overcome it. Can I save the affected plants, which now number several hundreds?

P. P.

An excess of water at the root, too heavy feeding, or too rich soil will sometimes cause the foliage on Primula obconica to blight, as yours have done. All you can do is to separate any clean plants. They may take the disease also, even if this is done. Avoid heavy doses of manure water, especially chemicals. Remove affected foliage. Give the plants a little shade from the direct rays of the sun, and keep the foliage dry. Perhaps you can use some of the affected plants by making them up into pans, using one or two plants with the best foliage around the outsides. The disease is not uncommon on Primula obconica. It should have a cool house; 45 degrees at night is ample. In a warm house it soon goes to pieces.

MILLEPEDS IN FERN HOUSE.

I should like to offer a suggestion to E. W., who recently inquired, through the REVIEW, as to the best means of exterminating the millepedes, or thousand-legged worms, which were infesting the benches of his fern house. The best remedy I have tried for millepedes, sow bugs and snails is Paris green and brown sugar, half and half. On one occasion, when the treatment was badly needed, I spread the mixture along the benches at the rate of about half a thimbleful every two feet. Next morning I found the dead bodies of the pests scattered about by the hundreds.

TEMPERATURE FOR BOSTONS.

I am sending, under separate cover, some samples of ferns, Boston and others. They have not done well all winter. The tops of the older fronds show no growth. The bottom of the stems is black and brittle. The younger growths are not thrifty, either, but soon curl up and die. As they were somewhat infested with scale, a few weeks ago I washed them with a solution of whale oil soap. They looked worse afterward. Could that have injured them? I send also a sample of the roots. There appears to be a new growth starting from them. I have just cut the tops nearly all off, close to the pots, hoping they will grow up again fresh and strong. Will this plan work, or would it be better to throw them away and start with entirely new stock? The young plants in the same house appear to be affected just as badly as the older ones.

The temperature of the house often runs down close to 40 degrees on cold mornings, as I do not fire any at night. Do you think it is too cold for them? The day temperature is 50 to 70 degrees.

T. H. S.

The fern fronds in question did show some injury from the soap solution with which they had been washed, this being a rather strong remedy to use on ferns, but in addition to this some of the fronds looked much as if they had been frozen. Boston ferns will not make satisfactory progress in a house in which the temperature falls to 40 degrees at night, for 55 to 60 degrees is much more to their liking.

If the plants are badly infested with scale, it would be better to throw them away and to get some young plants in the spring for growing on.

BEST ASTERS FOR MARKET.

I have thought of growing some asters. There is but little local demand for them, but I could have them at Indianapolis by 8:30 a. m., if that would be any advantage in selling them there. Would you advise me to do this? Is it necessary to plant more than the earliest varieties indoors? Could the later ones be planted outdoors? Please name three good varieties for a succession of bloom, including Queen of the Market. How about the Early Wonder?

R. F.

Three good varieties for you to grow will be Queen of the Market, American or Vick's Branching and Semple's late. The two last named sorts can be sown either in a coldframe or outdoors. A coldframe will insure better germination, however.

Use only one or two colors; white is always in heaviest demand, next to pink. Quite a few lavender blue are also sold, and a smaller number of dark purple. Other shades are not wanted and mixed bunches will not sell. Of course, aster markets are variable. There are periods of glut, and then again they bring excellent prices. If your land is good and you can get strong stems, they will pay you better than any other annual.

NORTHERN OUTDOOR FLOWERS.

[A paper by Richard Rothe, of Northeast Harbor, Me., read before the Bar Harbor Horticultural Society at its meeting in March, 1910.]

Broadly speaking, the New England states have a well established and enviable record in all lines of outdoor floriculture as far north as Boston. Beyond the Massachusetts boundary, however, the horticultural fraternity of this country still looks with more or less doubt. Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont have not been heard from often enough to make an impression. I do not think I am exaggerating when stating that, in the minds of a great majority of American horticulturists, floriculture within those states is still in its infancy, and little is expected of this section in the near future.

While this may properly apply to the thinly settled regions, it hardly does to our larger cities. Floriculture as a means of beautifying home surroundings and city squares is better understood and becomes more noticeable year after year. For obvious reasons, we find it farthest advanced along the seacoast line. With the establishment of fashionable summer resorts and subsequent building of cottages, the desire to have the immediate surroundings laid out in the customary lawn-like shape, planted with trees, ornamental shrubbery and some flowers, followed. It was, and in many cases still is, simply the introduction of the conventional city suburban lawn into the native spruce and pine region of the north.

Early Troubles and Triumphs.

The small number of flowering, everyday bedding plants that were employed during the early stages of development, were supplied by the large, far-away, central markets. The comparatively short growing seasons, the uncertainty whether such plant material, coming a long distance from a much warmer climate, would thrive, not to speak of the frequent absence of skilled labor for proper handling and care, proved in many instances serious obstacles in the pathway of quick advance. The rapid floricultural progress of Bar Harbor is first and last due to the early employment of high-class professional plantmen and subsequent foundation of her own plant-growing industries. To lay bare the floricultural possibilities of a region, which at the beginning must have looked nearly hopeless, required a vast amount of patient experimenting. There is no need to talk to you of the many disappointments, or, on the other hand, of the many happy surprises the northern floriculturist meets with, but it is safe to say that so far the latter have far outclassed the former in number and importance.

It was one of the happy surprises to find out that we can safely employ many of the Azalea mollis and A. Pontica varieties along the Atlantic coast line as far north as Canada. Calycanthus floridus, Cydonia Japonica, all the free flowering deutzias, diervillas, forsythias, bush honeysuckles, mock oranges, spiræas and viburnums have proven perfectly hardy, and the rich florescence of immense lilac bushes gives evidence that the climatic conditions of the north are exceptionally favorable for their growth.

The Widening Outlook.

Let us hope that the popularity of the hardy hydrangeas and Rosa rugosa is soon to be shared by rose varieties such as the Austrian brier, Copper, Harrison's Yellow and Persian Yellow. Likewise are the rubiginosa Penzance hybrids and the many comparatively new rugosa hybrids worth serious consideration, for they are not only perfectly hardy within this locality, but also exceedingly prolific in flowering. Hybrid perpetuals, teas and hybrid teas need winter protection in New England, and more so along the Canadian boundary. If carried through in good shape and otherwise properly cared for, their growth is extraordinarily vigorous, the crops of buds are heavy and the period of their flowering long lasting; not to mention the fortunate absence of the obnoxious rose-bugs which often ravage crops of outdoor roses in the middle Atlantic states.

There is no climatic or other hindrance to the free use of nearly all the popular bedding plants, such as geraniums, tuberous rooted begonias, heliotropes, salvias, petunias and so forth. If there had been any doubt as to the possibility of flowering such bulbs as dahlias, gladioli and cannas, your magnificent exhibits at last year's flower show would have quickly removed it. But, after all, there is nothing that can eclipse the great success we had in the line of hardy biennials and perennials. Not alone can we grow nearly everything worth having, but time has divulged the fact that we can also cultivate many varieties up to a perfection and floriferousness that is simply impossible south of Massachusetts. I said, cultivate up, lest we forget that growing of perennials in the north means increased attention and, in consequence thereof, higher expenses, especially in overwintering, than in the middle states. But northern grown plants, after surviving our long, icy winters under protecting leaf-covering, hardy and vigorous, are ready to put forth that wonderful, sturdy growth, rich floriferousness and brilliancy of colors which year after year compel the unreserved admiration of the multitude of our flower-loving visitors.

The Rich Northern Colors.

This marvelous color phenomenon, manifested with equal distinctness in the flowers of all our summer annuals, is variously attributed to the moderate average summer temperature, the cool nights, and, along the seacoast line, the beneficent influence of the sea atmosphere. In the interest of all future progress, I cannot emphasize too strongly that a liberal amount of care in the preparation and fertilization of the soil, timely irrigation, weeding and cultivating are not less important, whenever first-class results are desired.

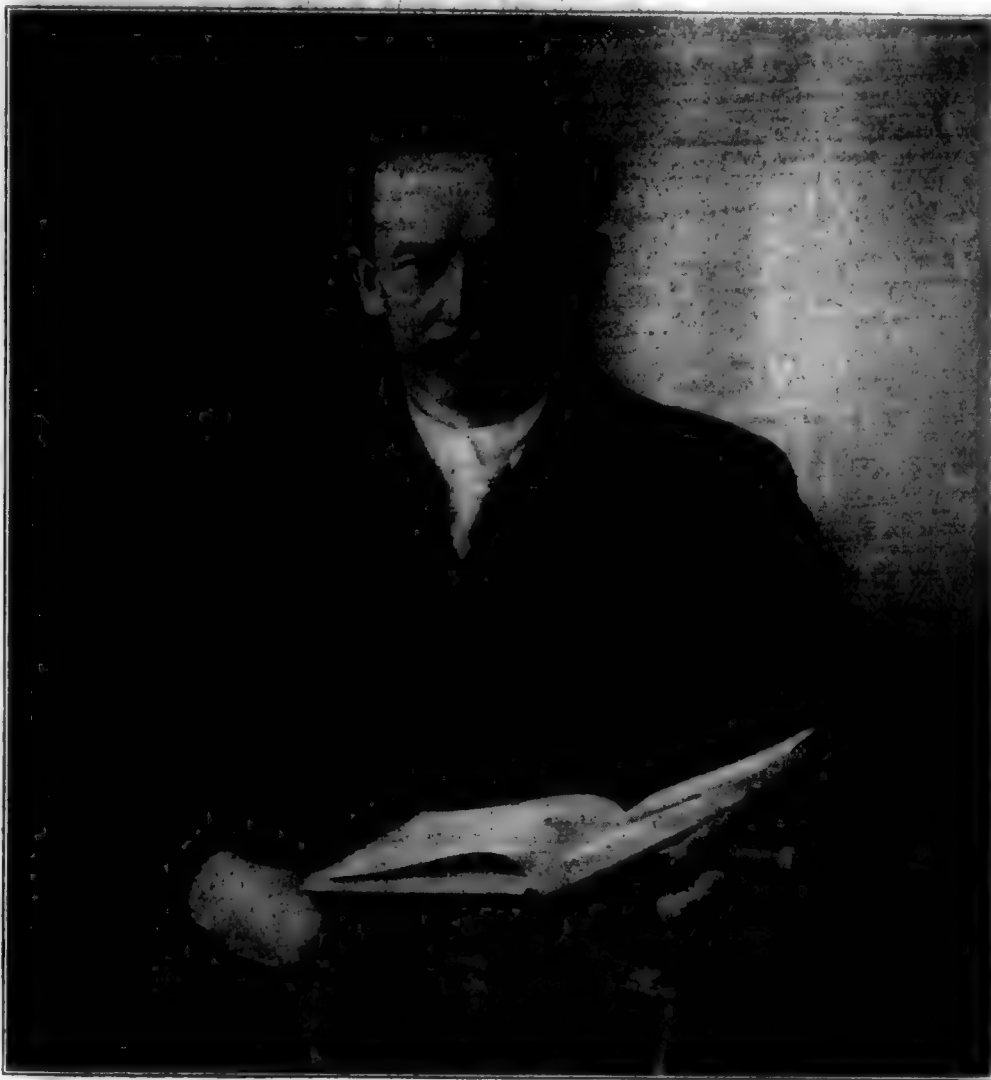

Some years ago I read an article on new amaryllis hybrids and their magnificent outdoor effect in Florida gardens. I can easily imagine that a mass of them in full bloom must be a floral revelation to the eye; still, I cannot believe that they ever can vie with the splendor of hue, say, for instance, of a well assorted bed of Japanese iris. It is not necessary to go into any further details on color questions, for Bar Harbor, for years past, has witnessed veritable floral color carnivals in peonies, phloxes, irises, and, in fact, in all hardy flowering plants, both perennial and annual. This remarkable clarity in tints and shades has hereabout elevated many varieties to the rank of salable cut flowers, which ordinarily, as such, find no market at all.

I fear this brief recapitulation of facts, to those of you who have been for years familiar with them, may seem a mere waste of time. Still, just this familiarity is apt to make us near-sighted, and, by giving up our thoughts entirely to cultural and other particulars, we lose the right viewpoint of the matter as a whole. We may, as professional floriculturists, comprehend and take careful advantage of our opportunities as growers, but we should not at present, under any circumstances, misunderstand the hitherto mainly evolutionary character of the situation. Northern outdoor floriculture, in spite of its great productiveness, would have no future without a mission.

A Business Point of View.

Last fall one of my customers, when leaving orders for spring planting, summed up by saying: "Now, please be sure to see that my little garden and my piazza boxes are again well attended to, for, you know, they help to rent my cottage"—a brief, clear-sighted statement, touching the matter from a sober, businesslike point of view. It pays a city, by the agency of floriculture, to beautify its squares and boulevards, for it helps to bring up the value of adjacent property and in turn increases the tax receipts. It pays house owners along residential city and suburban streets and avenues to call on the floriculturist and brighten up the summer aspect of their small front lawns, for concerted efforts in that direction will aid in giving the locality that air of refinement which attracts cultured people of means. It is a wise policy for the intelligent native population of northern seacoast districts to study and to avail themselves of ornamental shrubs, perennial and annual flowers, because the summer resort calls especially for neatness and beauty of home grounds.

There is, however, another mission of northern floriculture, which, it seems to me, is of a higher order than the one just mentioned. That host of flower lovers, who, as a health-preserving outdoor exercise, take delight in doing things themselves, can find no better opportunity than the invigorating summer climate of the north offers. To our cottage inhabitants there seems hardly a more enjoyable pastime than that of outdoor floriculture. After the large city markets have regaled them during the winter with the floral output of acres under glass, they find in their summer homes, amid the pines and spruces of Maine, conditions altogether reversed. Here the northern-grown perennial and annual are supreme, and Iceland poppies, foxgloves and Canterbury bells have their innings. The change is as radical as it proves agreeable, and amateur flower growing has become a strong feature of northern summer-resort life.

Educating the Public.

As gratifying, however, as the ready popular response is, and as much as the present activity along this line may encourage us, we should not overlook our next task, which is, as much as possible, to educate our patrons on the ways and modes to use our plants with the best effect. Since Bar Harbor from the start has taken a leading part in the development of outdoor floriculture, and its floral garden effects are known to represent the best artistic examples, it is natural that the north will, more and more, look to this locality and this society for competent council.

In my opinion, the time is at hand to give this problem more careful thought than we have done so far. As a north-eastern outpost, situated far away from most of the nation's business centers, it is not likely that we shall see great exploits in elaborate landscape architecture in the near future. Summer residences on Mount Desert, the opposite mainland shore-lines and adjacent islands, as dwellings, are all of a more or less temporary character. The native vegetation and sceneries themselves are extremely attractive and beautiful. These conditions naturally limit extension and outlay on private grounds. The future will see a steady increase of all sorts of flower growing, and attempts at gardening on a small scale, with the local professional in demand for intelligent advice. The excellence of the home-grown hardy plant material alone should prompt us to direct the present private activity, by degrees, into those channels which lead to a higher standard of effect in outdoor arrangements.

We are also face to face with the necessity of giving careful study to color harmony. Furthermore, the infinite variation of ground surface and the ever-changing character of our native vegetation will demand thorough familiarity with the material, and especially with the habit of growth and with singular as well as mass effects of hardy perennials.

Rugged New England Landscapes.

During my whole thirty years' practical career, I have not found a single locality offering by nature so many rare and unique propositions for high-class miniature work in landscaping as does the north, and above all, Mount Desert Island—problems which would inflame ingenuity to enthusiasm and put mediocrity at once out of commission. To the trained eye a mere glance at some of our rugged granite ledges and their picturesque, wild vegetation, discloses ideal natural conditions for the rock garden, and yet, the flower-loving lady is apt to turn a deaf ear to all our suggestions and decide on heliotropes and poppies, or a nasturtium bed may be the final outcome. Occasional disappointments on account of lack of understanding should, however, not in the least discourage us in the patient, tactful pursuits of our aims for the best effects.

To sum up: A careful study of the situation soon convinces us that the home-grown hardy perennials rank first in resistance. They should, in a general way, form the nucleus of northern outdoor planting, with the more tender flowering bulbs, bedding plants and annuals as seconds. Many of the hardy perennials appear in no way out of place when, in a natural, informal style, mixed in among our wooded landscapes. They are equally effective in the formal gardens, and they give our plantings from the start a much desired stability, which at no time should be underestimated.

We find ourselves near the threshold of a new growing season. Soon a large contingent of the wealthy metropolitan population will return to their cottages amid our ever-verdant spruce and pine woods, to enjoy the invigorating northern summer. Let us not forget that the last and highest mission of northern outdoor floriculture is to aid in strengthening the ties of attachment and in binding the bands of love for our home country and her beautiful North.

usually about the first part of April before the ground is in a thawed and dried-out condition fit for their reception in our northern states. It is a good plan to sow a generous batch in 4-inch pots, using three or four seeds in a pot. Stand these in a coldframe, in preference to even a cold greenhouse, and keep them there until the middle or end of April, when they can be planted out, allowing a foot between each pot. Try this plan and note how much stronger stems and finer flowers you get than from outside-sown seed, which comes up thickly and which you never have the courage to thin.

Allamandas.

It is time to start allamandas into growth. The climbers should have had their wood well ripened and be cut back. The boxes, tubs or pots should also receive a generous surface dressing, after the removal of some of the old soil. Spray freely until they break, but apply water sparingly at the roots. An over-plus is liable to kill the plants, particularly if they were retubbed. That useful pot variety, Williamsi, is specially valuable in the hot summer months, and where there is a demand for choice flowering plants at that season, it should be grown, by all means. It likes a tropical temperature to start it, but will thrive beautifully in an ordinary greenhouse from June to September.

Gardenias.

Gardenias will now be giving a heavy spring crop. They sell quite satisfactorily this season, in spite of the competition from large quantities of the artificial article, which, however, are too perfect in form and pure in color to deceive any connoisseur. Mealy bug is beginning to make more rapid headway now, but a judicious use of the spray nozzle will easily keep it in check.

Plants, as they pass out of flower, will furnish a nice lot of propagating wood, and, if an insufficient stock was put in sand earlier in the year, now is the time to make up any deficiency. Some people find gardenias difficult to root. As a matter of fact, there is hardly any plant more easy of propagation. Keep them hot and well shaded, and the sand constantly saturated, and not one per cent will fail to root.

Vegetable Seeds.

As a side-line many country florists find a considerable demand for vegetable plants in spring. These often are put up in small flats, which are sold at so much each. A dozen tomatoes, two dozen lettuces or cabbage plants, which can be easily carried away by the purchaser, will suffice for a flat. Lettuces, cabbages and tomatoes should be sown now, celery a month hence, also peppers and eggplants. Use light and moderately rich soil in the flats to produce good plants.

Hydrangeas.

Less hydrangeas than usual will be flowered for Easter this year. They are not the most popular of Easter plants, selling much better for Memorial day. Unless the flower heads are now showing some color, they are going to be too late. We dislike forcing these plants in the last stages of growth, as they wilt so badly when taken to cool quarters. Few flowering plants take more water than hydrangeas. A drying out means loss of foliage and sometimes of the flower heads also. For any plants showing pale foliage, some soot water or a weak dose

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Antirrhinums.

Keep antirrhinum plants which are flowering carefully disbudded, to throw all possible strength into the flowers themselves. There are probably one or two extra fine varieties which may seem worth perpetuating. Carefully mark these and get a batch of cuttings from each. Feed flowering plants with liquid manure once in ten days and keep strong shoots tied up, for, once twisted, they are quite unsalable. If there are any bare pieces of bench now, it is a good time to set out some seedlings or rooted cuttings of snapdragons to fill up the gaps. They will render a good account of themselves for Memorial day.

Chrysanthemums.

It is yet much too early to propagate any chrysanthemums for single stems, other than for exhibition purposes. The stems attain a height beyond the confines of the old-style commercial house, and present-day prices hardly warrant early planting, as the demand for the largest possible blooms is not what it used to be. It is a good plan, however, to propagate all varieties of which the stock may be limited and which promise to "pay for their board," to use a common phrase. A good way with any of these mums is to take them as soon as rooted nicely, plant rather thinly in flats containing four inches of soil and water sparingly at first. Pinch out the tops and you will get a nice crop of cuttings for propagating just when you need them. It is still a far too common practice to stand pots of mums on the paths, or even under the benches, for the winter. It is impossible to get decent cuttings in this way. Far better throw away your stock plants and buy fresh each year if you cannot take proper care of them.

Sweet Peas.

Extremely rapid now is the growth on the sweet peas and, with the lengthening days and increasing solar heat, the stems are coming of splendid length and the flowers open fast. The early batches, which have done service since October, are now getting poor and it will not pay to carry them any longer. Pull them out and give your Easter stock a better chance, and when that is gone bedding plants or Memorial day stock will call for room.

Answering inquiries as to whether it would be wise to put a little shade on the sweet peas, our answer would be "Don't." The peas will only be injured by it. Manure water occasionally, a top-dressing of fine bone or sheep manure and close attention to strings for holding the vines erect, are now requisites. Do not run up the temperature in order to get a heavy Easter pick. You will only damage the plants, and remember that sweet peas are now salable the year around.

It will soon be time to sow the outdoor crop; in fact, to the south of us they probably are already in the ground. It is of nitrate of soda will color them up. Keep plants intended for Memorial day cool and on the dry side. It is too soon to excite them yet. You cannot spare bench space for them until after Easter, and the intervening space between the two holidays is, fortunately, ample this year.

Pansies.

Where violets are run out, as singles probably will be by this time in some cases, it is a good plan to remove them and fill at least part of the vacant space with pansies from the coldframes. Enrich the soil a little by adding some rotted manure and lift nice balls of earth when moving the plants. They will take hold quickly and will give plenty of flowers in a few weeks. Pansies are always in great demand for spring sales, and if you have a good strain there should be no trouble in disposing of them. In baskets containing six or eight plants each, pansies sell well, as do those other popular spring flowers, forget-me-nots. Both like cool treatment, similar to that given to violets.

Coreopsis Grandiflora.

To secure a good crop of flowers on Coreopsis grandiflora for Memorial day, place the plants in gentle heat now. They are better kept in a house where the night temperature does not exceed 50 degrees. As they can be cut with long stems, they are serviceable for mixed bouquets, although they make a lovely vase arranged by themselves. Stand the pots over a bench so that they can root through, and as the flower stems come up use at least one stout stake per pot to keep the stems from becoming twisted.

THOMAS PEGLER.

Thomas Pegler, one of the executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, is an Englishman by birth and received a thorough training on private and commercial places, both there and since coming to America. He for some time operated greenhouses at Wollaston, Mass., but the increasing calls for him as a flower salesman at Park Street Market necessitated his giving that up a year or so ago. Mr. Pegler handles the products of a number of the best growers for the Boston market and there is no busier or more popular salesman in the Hub. His face never seems clouded, being always overspread by a genial smile, which means much even in the flower business of today. Mr. Pegler is a director of the new Boston Flower Exchange, as he was in the older Boston Coöperative Flower Growers' Association. He has been an active club member and should eventually find an even higher post than he now occupies.

creased ventilation, even though you must fire heavily while the ventilators are up.

Do not expect to see results too quickly from the lime, although they will show more quickly than from most stimulants or fertilizers. If you put on enough to show at once, you may safely expect trouble a little later, and in this way: While the stems will become stiffer, the joints will become more brittle, so that, in case of an overdose, the stems will snap off at the joints so easily that it will be impossible to handle the blooms satisfactorily. We have seen blooms on the exhibition table which had been dosed with lime or wood ashes to such an extent that the weight of the blooms would snap off the stems even while no one was near the vase. You can imagine what a bunch of such blooms would look like after going through the rush of a wholesale house on a busy morning.

In the use of lime, as well as all fertilizers and stimulants, the large, fleshy growing varieties are affected most quickly. All the Eucharist varieties are quick to take it up, while the more wiry growers are slower to show ill effects.

WASHINGTON, PA.—C. C. Philips, florist at the local street car office, corner of Main and Beau streets, and Earl J. Sedam, who for a few months has been in charge of Forrest's Greenhouses, have formed a partnership under the firm name of Philips & Sedam, and have purchased the business with which they have been connected. They will continue the business, with Mr. Philips in charge of the store and Mr. Sedam in charge of the greenhouses and gardens.

LIME FOR THE BENCH SOIL.

How often should air-slaked lime be used on the carnation benches during the blooming season? How many pounds are needed for each 100 square feet, and what should be the length of time between applications? When there is a green scum on the surface of the bench soil, does it need lime? W. R. D.

How much lime to use on your carnation beds and how often to apply it, will depend on several different things. And do not forget that while lime under certain conditions is quite beneficial, yet, like everything else, it is frequently overdone. There is nothing better to sweeten soil, and when the soil is covered with a green scum a light dusting will usually destroy the green. Frequently, under certain conditions, it would be far better to leave off the lime, and simply stir the top of the soil to allow the air to get to it and let it dry out a little.

The most noticeable effect of lime on carnations is a stiffening of the stems. When the stems come weak on account of dark, murky weather, lack of fresh air, etc., a light application of air-slaked lime will help them wonderfully. Usually one dose will prove sufficient, but, if not enough, the second application should not be put on in less than two weeks and should be light. Rather depend on in-

HARDY ROSES.

I have a fine piece of ground which I wish to plant to outdoor summer blooming roses for funeral work in all colors but red. After being planted they are to remain permanent. What varieties are best for this purpose? When should they be planted, how far apart and what treatment should they receive from the beginning until the end of each year? I have a good water supply and good soil. I am a resident of Pennsylvania.

H. J. H.

Secure your plants early, so that they can be got into the ground whenever frost has left it, which with you will be early in April. Plant in nursery rows three feet apart and twenty-four inches between the plants. Grafted plants are preferable to own-root stock, as they possess greater vigor and last longer. With them it is necessary to remove any Manetti or briar shoots which may start from the bottom. You do not state whether you want hybrid tea or hybrid perpetual roses. The first named are the most persistent flowering, and if you have a good water supply, will give you flowers the whole summer. A few reliable sorts are: Killarney, White Killarney, Kaiserin Augusta Victorie, Mme. Abel Chatenay, Caroline Testout, Bessie Brown and Captain Christy. Among tea-scented sorts are: Maman Cochet, pink; Maman Cochet, white; and Clothilde Soupert. The Cochet's will require lifting and burying, or better still placing under coldframe sashes over winter. The hybrid teas should be well buried with earth just before the ground freezes up. Many growers prefer to lift and store them thickly over winter in a coldframe, this being less trouble than earthing them up outdoors.

A few useful and free-flowering hybrid perpetuals are: Mrs. John Laing, Mrs. R. G. Sharman Crawford, Frau Karl Druschki and Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Prune the teas and hybrid teas lightly. Cut down the hybrid perpetuals so as to leave two to four buds of the previous season's growth. Cultivate freely all summer. Use hellebore for the rose slug and spray with whale oil soap for aphids. A mulch of well decayed manure in summer will benefit the hybrid teas.

ROSE CULTURE IN TABLOID.

[A paper by Andrew McKendry read before the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, February 25.]

I propagate my rose cuttings about the first week in January, in good, clean, sharp sand, using two-eyed cuttings, for they make plants quicker than those with only one eye.

If the sand is kept at a uniform temperature of 65 degrees and the overhead temperature at 52 degrees, the cuttings will root in about four to five weeks. They are ready to pot when the roots are about one inch long. If allowed to make any further growth in the sand, it will cause the cutting to become weakened, as the substance is not there to nourish the plant.

For first potting, 2½-inch pots are generally used, with new soil, sifted through a coarse screen. A little leaf-mold added will help keep the soil porous and benefit the young roots.

The young plants should be placed in a rose house temperature, with watering strictly attended to, and syringing every bright day to keep red spider in check.

When the 2½-inch pots are nicely filled with roots, shift into 3-inch, adding a small portion of well rotted cow manure, and a light sprinkle of Clay's fertilizer to the soil; the plants to receive the same treatment as before, keeping the buds nipped off, which will cause the eyes below to break, making good, stocky plants. Give the pots plenty of room on the bench, allowing the air and sunlight to get in through the plants.

If the plants are kept in a good, healthy condition they will require another shift into 4-inch pots before planting in the bench, which will be about the latter part of May. The house will have to undergo its usual cleaning, whitewashing the benches, etc.

The compost to be used should be good fibrous loam, two-thirds soil, and one-third well rotted cow manure, giving a good top-dressing of bone meal after the soil is on the bench, mixing it in well.

For the first week or ten days after planting, water only around the base of the plants. When the roots begin to find their way through the new soil they will need more moisture. The plants will need immediate staking and tying to make well shaped plants, and to hold them in position so they can be syringed properly.

Any cool night should then be taken advantage of to fumigate. When the plants have been benched about six weeks or two months they will require an additional inch or two of soil and manure, equally mixed, as the young roots will begin to appear on the surface looking for more nourishment. During the short days of November and December roses do not seem to relish too much feeding, for the plants are inclined to be somewhat dormant, and the roots not very active. A light sprinkle of Clay's once a week is beneficial. The other chemical fertilizers are also good if properly used. As the days begin to lengthen and the sun gets stronger, you

DISEASED GERANIUM LEAVES.

I am sending you under separate cover some geranium leaves, showing a sort of blight or disease of some kind upon the stem, and wish to know what it is, the cause and the preventive. I run the house 45 to 50 degrees at night and 60 to 75 degrees in the daytime. I bought the plants from 2-inch pots and potted off into 3-inch pots three weeks ago. The plants are doing well, but I cannot understand why the leaf stems are so affected. I thought at first it was sun scald, on account of the plants being made tender wrapped in paper and shut from the light for three days while in transit.

F. E. C.

Your night temperature is all right, but we would prefer to hold it at 58 to 65 degrees in the daytime, the lower figure for cloudy days. Do not use any shade over the plants. Air freely. Pick off all affected foliage. Do not spray overhead at all. When you water, be sure to soak the soil well, and let the pots get fairly dry before watering again. Your stock may have been taken from weak plants under glass. Specialists in geraniums, as in other plants, take about all the cuttings they can get and yours may have possessed some inherent weakness. We think they will grow out of this trouble if you air, water and pick them over carefully. Cleanliness means a great deal in geranium culture, so remove all moldy foliage, etc., and give the plants a fresh stand from time to time.

C. W.

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

I am sending under separate cover some geranium leaves. I have 3,000 geraniums that were doing nicely until about two weeks ago. After my chrysanthemums were off the benches, I set my geraniums on the soil and then I took out the soil and put in fresh cinders, and since then I notice the leaves turn red and some get a yellow ring around them, or become spotted, which makes them look as though they were scalded, and the roots have turned brown. In some pots I notice a small white worm, about one-fourth inch long and about as large as a pin. I should like to know if the cinders caused the trouble and what kind of a worm it is. If it is the worm that is doing the harm, kindly give me a remedy.

C. A. H.

If the cinders were coarse, they may have been partly responsible for the trouble. Fine cinders, however, make a satisfactory covering for the benches on which bedding plants are growing. The redness of the foliage would indicate either root starvation, or too dry conditions of the soil. The spotting of the foliage is not uncommon. Do not let it alarm you. Perhaps you are in the habit of playing the hose over the plants whenever you are watering or damping down. If so, discontinue the practice. Geranium foliage should be kept as dry as possible. Allow your plants to dry out well between waterings. Carefully remove all moldy foliage, weeds and scum from the surface of the pots. Spread them out occasionally so that they can get plenty of sun and air. Run the house 48 to 50 degrees at night and 10 degrees higher in the day, and I think the plants should soon pick up.

In potting avoid using any fresh animal manure. A little well decayed hotbed manure and a 4-inch pot of fine bone to each wheelbarrow-load of soil will be found all right. Use some soot water to color up the foliage. This is also objectionable to worms. Lime water will clean about any worms out of the soil. We doubt if the worms have anything to do with the condition of the plants.

C. W.

FAILURE WITH PHLOX.

I have been growing bedding plants for twenty years and get almost everything satisfactory, but year in and year out I fail with Phlox Drummondii. I have fine, light, airy houses, twenty-five feet wide, with 16x24 glass. I use only the best seed in all cases and sow in 2½-inch flats, making the rows about two inches apart and the seeds one-half inch or more apart in the rows. They are generally slow and straggling in growth and most of them are weak. They do not make compact, bushy plants, like my pansies, asters, petunias, etc. Almost all of them are spindly and weak looking; in fact, they never look right while under glass. They do a little better after putting them outside. They are transplanted into similar flats when large enough to handle. I use the same soil, and space them the same as the other plants. I have seen them in the same kind of a house in the seed flats as thick as they could stick and the picture of sturdy health. At the same place the other plants were not nearly so good as mine. I have often wondered if they needed richer soil than the others to bring them on more quickly and strongly. Can you tell me why I fail only with Phlox Drummondii?

W. C.

Flats two and one-half inches or three inches deep are suitable for sowing Phlox Drummondii and other annuals in. Place the flats in a house where an average night temperature of 60 degrees is maintained. In a cool house they will germinate weakly and irregularly. When transplanting or potting the seedlings, a common mistake is often made in giving them too poor a compost. One-half decayed hotbed manure, or spent mushroom manure, and one-half loam makes a soil they will luxuriate in; or, if you cannot get these manures, use one-fourth well rotted cow or horse manure. In such soil as this they cannot fail to make fine growth.

If sown thickly the plants will soon become spindling and one pinching will improve them. Do this after they are established in pots. Phlox Drummondii should be started somewhat warmer than verbenas, stocks or asters to secure the best results. It is one of the easiest of annuals to grow. Poor soil and lack of heat are probably your causes of failure.

C. W.

ASTERS IN SOD LAND.

We noticed in the REVIEW of February 24 your suggestion to persons asking about asters on sod ground, etc. You tell of manner of preparation, probability of success under the conditions, but make no reference to the danger of cut-worms or grub-worms, etc. We have a rich loam sod we plowed last fall, lying under snow all winter, which we have hesitated to plant in asters for fear of cut-worms, etc. Do you think they would bother much more there than in stubble? We have thought this sod would be better for gladioli or dahlias. What would you advise as the best flower for sod land, as indicated?

S. F. G.

If you are much troubled with either cut-worms or grub-worms (the latter the larvæ of the May beetle), the mere fact that your land was plowed up in the fall and has been allowed to remain rough over winter, will do much towards lessening the numbers of these pests. Give the land a dressing of air-slaked lime before harrowing it in the spring. Also scatter any soot from your boilers on the land. The cut-worms do not like either lime or soot.

There is no reason why asters should not succeed well on your ground, just as well as gladioli or dahlias. Frequent harrowing before the planting time will destroy large quantities of the worms.

OBITUARY.

Lawrence Newell Van Hook.

The death of Lawrence Newell Van Hook, a grower of violets and carnations in Ferguson, Mo., occurred Monday night, March 7, after a brief illness. Mr. Van Hook was, at the time of his death, secretary of the Cotton Exchange. His flower business was attended to by his family. He was a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club and leaves a wife and daughter to mourn his loss. The funeral took place Wednesday, March 9, at Ferguson, and many in the trade attended. The club sent its usual floral wreath, extending their sympathy to the bereaved family.

Francis G. Dwight.

Francis G. Dwight, a veteran seedsman, died recently of paralysis, at his home, 1574 Mineral Spring road, Reading, Pa., on his eighty-second birthday anniversary. He was born in Reading, in a small two-story frame dwelling, which stood on the ground now occupied by a department store, at Sixth and Penn streets.

He was engaged in the seed business in Reading for over thirty years. He started in the small building at 903 Penn street, which is still standing. Later he moved to 518 Penn street, known at that time as the Yellow Front. For several years he was associated with W. A. Shoemaker in the seed and implement business. Following this he moved to 528 Penn street, after which his place of business was located at 843 Penn street, where he remained until five years ago. Failing health compelled him to give up active life at that time.

He resided in Reading most of his life, except for a few years spent on a farm at Exeter. At the close of the Civil war he went south with Raymond Heizmann and settled in Georgia, where they endeavored to raise cotton. Their plantation was burned out by southerners. Giving up the project they returned to Reading.

Mr. Dwight was graduated from the Georgetown College at Washington, D. C. He was well known throughout the country districts for his seeds. He leaves a wide circle of friends.

WHITE MARSH, MD.—R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. reports an excellent business in 2½-inch geraniums, keeping the supply of stock closely sold up.

RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence
him most of the time.

Please discontinue the advertisement of rooted cuttings in the classified columns; sold out.—
William Murphy, Cincinnati, March 8, 1910.

Kindly discontinue my advertisement, as I am cleaned out of stock. Could have sold many more if I had them.—L. H. Klein, Towson, Md.,
March 7, 1910.

Please discontinue our advertisement of Primula obconica, as we have sold out entirely. We are well pleased with the results from the advertisement; had no difficulty at all in disposing of over 2,000 of the plants advertised and could have sold a good many more if we had had them.—Schaefer's, Inc., per G. F. Chadborn,

The Great Central Market.

Last week, with its unseasonably warm weather, brought an extremely large increase in supplies, with the usual effect upon prices. Fortunately, there was an outlet for most of the stock when prices were put at a point where the special sales people were willing to take hold.
With the wholesalers the week showed a fair volume of business, because so large a quantity of stock, even if sold at cheap prices, could not do otherwise than run into a good sum of money. Such conditions, however, never are welcome to wholesalers, because there is too much difference between the prices charged to those who want only a limited quantity of selected stock and the prices it is possible to realize from the buyer who takes what is left, and all of it. With so small a part of the total receipts bringing the higher prices, and so large a part going at bargain rates in the clean-up sales, the averages to the growers have been extremely low. Roses have held their own better than any other flowers, although there has been a drop all along the line of rose prices.

Beauties once more are in good crop with many growers and the supply, now abundant, promises shortly to become exceedingly heavy. The demand has improved somewhat, but is expected to be better after Easter; the Beauty is not a Lenten or Easter flower. Good quality is now in evidence in roses. Killarney is, of course, the leading item, but there are plenty of good Bride and finely colored Maid, while moderate quantities of My Maryland and Mrs. Jardine sell well. Production is steadily increasing and prices are at a point where, compared to quality, every buyer should be satisfied.

The receipts of carnations have been so heavy that after the regular trade had been supplied there was almost no bottom for the surplus. At times white was scarce enough to command pretty fair prices, and the best Enchantress have been selling well, all things considered, but the regular demand has taken only a fraction of the receipts. To get rid of the surplus has been something of a problem, but there are those among the growers and wholesalers who say that there soon will be a change in the market, predicting that the cut shortly will fall off. Some growers say this will occur before Easter. Inquiry is being made for white, for dyeing for St. Patrick's day, with the prospect for a good market for good white March 14 and 15.

Sweet peas are one of the wholesalers' most serious problems. There is an excellent sale for the strictly fancy peas, but there are so many of these grades that the disposition of the ordinary and common run is about as difficult as anything the salesmen have undertaken thus far this season; it is difficult to put the price low enough on this grade to tempt the buyers. Naturally, there is no little disappointment among the shippers of the low grade peas.

Violets have been in extremely large supply the last few days. The Rhinebeck growers are shipping heavily and there is an enormous crop of singles. While a few hundreds of the highest grade stock make pretty fair prices, considering the fate of the balance, $2 to $4 per thousand is the best that can be realized for the surplus when any quantity is moved, and there are plenty of violets that stand around until their condition precludes any sale at all.

The spring days brought a rush of bulbous stock, especially tulips and daffodils, with the result that prices, already low, fell off a third to a half, though some little recovery has been made since the weather turned cooler. Quantities of Dutch hyacinths are coming in, but realize prices which hardly can be profitable to the growers. A few Mississippi narcissi have arrived and advices from the Virginia growers are that shipments will begin the latter part of this week. So long as these continue it means cheap prices for all stock handled by the sidewalk salesmen and department stores, where the surplus finds its outlet in times like these.

Callas and Easter lilies are abundant. Valley is plentiful. Orchids are equal to the demand.

The only department in which there is a really active call is green goods. As-

Letters by Wire.

O. W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., calls attention to the new service inaugurated March 7, by both the Western Union and Postal telegraph companies. This is known as the "night letter service," and enables anyone to send fifty words or less at the same cost of sending ten words at the regular day rate. If more than fifty words are used, the excess is charged at one-fifth of the standard day rate for each additional ten words or less. The understanding is that these night letters will be accepted at any time for transmission during the following night and for delivery the following morning.

This service should be of much value to those who order cut flower shipments. An order can be dispatched regularly each night after the close of business and be in the wholesaler's hands early the following morning, merely at the cost of one ten-word telegram.

Club Dinner.

Instead of its regular meeting, March 3, the Florists' Club gave a dinner at the Union restaurant, to which the ladies were invited. Over 100 participated. The main dining-room was used and the service was at small tables, seating from four to ten, each table having its share of the many flowers donated by the wholesalers. A course dinner was served, with plenty of—ice-water. Later in the evening there was an excellent musical entertainment by semi-professional talent.

The affair was arranged by a committee consisting of Duncan Robertson, A. C. Kohlbrand and H. N. Bruns, working with the club's regular entertainment committee, which consists of Herman Schiller, Frank Pasternick and J. P. Degnan. Their efforts were so successful that everyone said that the club does not have these affairs half often enough.

Before dinner a brief business meeting was held. Joseph Straus, of the A. L. Randall Co., was slated for election to membership. In welcoming the ladies and guests President Asmus said the club is looking forward to the day when it will have a home of its own.

Various Notes.

W. E. Lynch has been out among the lily growers, not only those whose stock is sold at E. H. Hunt's, but many others, getting first hand evidence on the lily situation; and says the stock looks good—some of it is short, but several called on never had better lilies.

E. C. Amling says that the small growers who are making the successes are those who specialize, doing some one thing well and producing a quantity that enables their stock to compete with that of large growers. The buyers turn to the stock that is available in good round lots day after day.

O. P. Bassett and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Washburn are now at Riverside, Cal.

The marriage of Miss Ida Kroeschell, daughter of William L. Kroeschell, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., to Ernest von Ammon, took place March 3 at the family residence at Winnetka.

A. L. Randall says he never has seen single violets so abundant as this year. He thinks a few such warm days as March 4 and 5 will make a lot of difference with the Easter supply.

N. J. Wieter holds up a Bride, taken from a pile that all are equally long, and remarks that White Killarney still has to go some to get the field all to itself. However, Wieter Bros., like nearly all other rose growers, are adding largely to their plantings of White Killarney this season.

August Poehlmann, president of the American Rose Society, goes to New York next week to preside for a second time over a convention of that organization.

O. W. Johnson, for some years with the Foley Mfg. Co., has removed to North Tonawanda, having entered the employ of the King Construction Co.

Schultz Bros., at Park Ridge, had a fire a few days ago, but escaped serious loss.

George Asmus and W. N. Rudd go to Rochester, March 11, to attend the annual meeting of the board of directors of the S. A. F., of which they are members.

The George M. Garland Co. is installing one of its newly patented soil conveyors in the Poehlmann plant at Morton Grove. If the conveyor does what is expected of it, one of the growers' greatest burdens will be lifted.

C. L. Washburn says it always is the unexpected that happens in the flower market, especially at holiday times.

E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, was in town last week. He says that he has found trade good wherever he has been, but that the street car strike has hit all Philadelphia business interests hard.

It is said that Sam Pearce never had a finer lot of lilies than this year.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received its first shipment of narcissi from Booneville, Miss., March 7. Large quantities will be along shortly.

C. W. McKellar says orange blossoms are again in season. The Hubert Bulb Co., in Virginia, advises him that shipments of narcissi will begin this week.

Hoerber Bros. say that their new houses, to be built this year, will be used for Killarney, Richmond, White Killarney, Maid and Bride, all the new space except one house, which is to be used for mums. They already are looking forward to the day when they will put up a range of Beauty houses.

P. Pearson has applied for a patent on a corsage pin, fashioned like a safety-pin, with a hook that holds the flowers.

When Mat Mann wearies of the quiet of the greenhouses, he comes down to the store of Zech & Mann and takes off his coat for an afternoon. Everybody enjoys seeing him work.

E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, who ships to Percy Jones, says carnation crops will hold out till Easter, growers carrying them cool and with plenty of air, but predicts that shortly after Easter the crops will drop off decidedly.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been exceptionally good in all lines, especially funeral work. The first week in March brought a decided change in the weather, spring having come all at once. Owing to the heavy demand, flowers of all kinds have been scarce, Brides, Maids and carnations being cleaned up daily. Bulbous stock is plentiful, but there is no glut on the market as in years gone by. Home grown orchids are off; the only ones to be had are shipped in, which is unsatisfactory. California violets are more than enough to go around, but sweet peas and valley are not a drug on the market. Quantities of Easter lilies and callas are coming in and the outlook for lilies for Easter is fine, as there are quantities of good ones to be seen.

Various Notes.

Alfred Pahud, Jr., junior member of the Pahud Floral Co., has severed his connection with that firm and will go into the wholesale jewelry business with his father-in-law, Mr. Lauer. Mr. Pahud should have a bright future, as this is an old established firm and enjoys a good business. Mr. Pahud has the best wishes of his brother florists.

Henry Rhodenbeck is sending in some fine California violets and Easter lilies.

John Bertermann is lying awake nights now, figuring how to get the road improved to Cumberland. Mr. Bertermann has purchased a new automobile.

S. T. Hitz & Co. have their place in excellent condition. This firm does not confine its efforts entirely to flowers, as they have about six houses devoted to lettuce, parsley and radishes, which are in a flourishing condition. Mr. Hitz has the inside track on the vegetable business, as he owns an interest in a large commission house here and makes it a point to see that his goods move. In flowers they have several houses of carnations, one of California violets, and one of peas, all of which are in crop now. S. T. Hitz has been in the florists' business only three years, but he says give him two or three years more and he will grow flowers as good as any of them. From the looks of his place, I believe he is right.

A test car belonging to the Marion Motor Car Co. collided with E. A. Nelson's wagon last week, and Mr. Nelson came out second best. Theo. Millenger, the driver, was skinned up more or less, the horse slightly injured and the back end of the wagon demolished. The wagon was taken to the repair shop by the auto people, and Mr. Nelson thought they were going to settle, but when he sent for it, it was charged to him. I think Mr. Nelson has a good case for damages, as his wagon was on the right side of the street and the driver of the auto ran into it from the rear, evidently not seeing it.

Geo. Wiegand is traveling east. It is the Scottish Rite this time.

The meeting of the State Florists' Association was well attended last week, quite a number of out-of-town florists being present. Matters pertaining to the state fair and fall show were discussed, as was also the question of how to increase the attendance at the monthly meetings. B. F. Hensley, of Knights-

DETROIT.

The Market.

The market is still flooded with stock of almost every variety. This is not so much due to a lack of business, for trade is quite brisk; it is the usual spring glut, when a spell of summer comes ahead of schedule time and opens up the carnation buds, which, for a long time, were at a standstill. The last three days were especially warm, Sunday being near 60 degrees, but Monday, March 7, there was a decided drop in the temperature, which came just in time, as the grass was already beginning to sprout.

Roses are getting more plentiful. For the first time in many months, the price on the shorts went down to 4 cents. Some of the finest La Detroit ever seen are coming in from Mt. Clemens.

Various Notes.

A fire, which at first looked disastrous, broke out in the building adjoining the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange Saturday afternoon, March 5. Considerable damage was done in the rear of the Exchange's building. Albert Sylvester, who lives on the top floor, received a scare when the flames came through his kitchen window.

Wm. Berridge, of the Kenneth-Anderson Co., has been confined to his bed for some time with a severe attack of pneumonia. He now is resting nicely and every indication points for the best.

The 200,000 feet of glass in Mt. Clemens which has been Breitmeyer's main source of supply for many years, will, commencing March 7, be conducted as an entirely independent business. The whole Mt. Clemens place is now completely in charge of Fred Breitmeyer, and owned by him. All the stock grown on the place will be consigned to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

Breitmeyer's chauffeur returned to his post March 7, after a long illness. During his absence Harry Breitmeyer took a hand at delivering, being the only one able to run the large auto.

Breitmeyer's have charge of the elaborate decorations for the opening of Hudson's store in Toledo.

On a warm spring day like March 5 the street fakers spring up like mushrooms. One, in particular, attempted to run in competition to Sullivan's regular Saturday sale, but not having the necessary permit, the police soon made him move off the street.

There was a fair attendance at the club meeting, March 7. Christ Winterich, of Defiance, was elected a member. The club voted to afford the Home and School Gardening Committee of the Twentieth Century Club the same support as in former years. Fall flower show plans were discussed. H. S.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Charles Mitchell, whose business is the erection of greenhouses, is making arrangements to remove from 8 Winnikee avenue to the end of the same street, at the proposed Cottage street extension, where he has purchased a lot 300x400 feet. The new shop, which will be erected as soon as weather will permit, will be much larger and better equipped than the present one and more men will be employed.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The extreme depression prevailing in the cut flower market during the week ending Wednesday, March 2, continued at the opening of the present week. Fortunately, by March 4 and 5 the market had adjusted itself to the lower level of prices, new buyers coming forward who could use flowers at the tempting prices offered. The result was a most satisfactory sweep by Saturday night, nearly all, even of the poorer flowers, being sold at some price.

Business opened fairly well on Monday, March 7, the market being so bare of stock that the rather moderate demand was sufficient to insure a healthy tone. Tuesday was not quite so good, the shipping being the backbone of the market. Under these conditions listed quotations, though made up with great care, are misleading. A limited number of the best flowers bring the top prices, but by far the larger number are jobbed off to the quantity buyers at special thousand rates. This covers general conditions, thought there are some exceptions.

Beauties continue scarce, holding their own under active buying in and out of town in small lots, an order of 100 or 200 Beauties requiring ability to fill. Cattleyas are also in demand. Trianae has given place to Schröderiana. Greens are selling well and white roses have not yet felt the effect of Kaiserin competition. The forerunners of the southern crop of daffodils have arrived, but not even the greatest croaker in the market can charge them with the downfall of the price on home-grown product this year. Acacia pubescens and forget-me-not have made their final bow and exit.

Violets suffered badly during the warm weather of the early days in March, the singles faring worse. Growers and wholesalers are about equally divided in their opinion regarding violets for Easter. It is probable there will be a fair supply of high grade, and a large supply of medium grade stock if the cooler weather prevailing now continues. Easter lilies have improved in the demand, but nobody seems interested in callas. The flood of carnations has passed, with a decidedly healthier tone in the market than for some weeks. There is no especial advance in the price of carnations, but the clean-up figures of $4 to $5 per thousand are a thing of the past until after Easter, the street men gladly buying at $1 to $1.50 per hundred when possible.

Unfair to Philadelphia.

Business men of this city are incensed at the sensational reports published in the papers of other cities regarding the condition in our streets owing to the strike. The Public Ledger of March 7 in an editorial reprints extracts from the New York Sun and the New York World of the preceding day that draw a picture of conditions here that would terrify the stoutest heart. These pictures do credit to the descriptive powers of the writers, but not to their truthfulness. There is a strike in Philadelphia among a portion of the employees of the trolley lines. There have been outrages, chiefly smashing of windows, and there have been at least two fatalities, with a number of injuries and arrests. The disturbances are so limited in number that a large majority of the people of Philadelphia have seen nothing of these disturbances beyond what they read in the papers. Business in the banks, in the wholesale centers, and in the shops goes on exactly as it has done before. The streets are quiet and orderly, with few exceptions, and then for a brief time. Most of the disturbers are boys.

This statement is due to the business men of Philadelphia. Its earnestness will be best understood when I add that two New York men with business appointments in this city for March 7 wired canceling because they feared it was not safe to walk three squares from Broad Street Station.

Two-thirds of the trolley cars are run-

Club Exhibits.

The advantages of telegraphing, whereby belated news of interest can be brought before the REVIEW readers as certainly as though the event had not occurred after the eleventh hour, are too well known to need comment. The disadvantages are not so well known. Punctuation is not used in telegraphy. The effect is sometimes startling. Despite the greatest care mistakes occur. Two exhibits at the carnation meeting of the Florists' Club, March 1, were thus confused. One should have read: "Edward C. Marshall, Kennett, Pa., exhibited Beacon, Winsor and his own white seedling, known for several years in commerce as Marshall's White." The other should have read: "The Millbrook-Lee Greenhouses, Maull & Howell, John Stanley, grower, Whitford, Pa., exhibited the white carnation, Georgia."

The Rose Meeting.

The annual meeting of the American Rose Society will be held in New York city on Wednesday, March 16, and two following days at the Museum of Natural History. An unusually attractive schedule of prizes has been arranged. The growers from this city who have signified their intentions of attending and exhibiting include John R. André, Adolph Farenwald, Victor Groshens, Joseph Heacock, Frank P. Meyers, Martin Samtman and Edward Towill. They will take the 7 a. m. train from the Reading Terminal to New York on the morning of March 16, some of them boarding that train at Wayne Junction and others at Jenkintown. Arrangements have been made with the United States Express Company to forward their exhibits promptly from this train. All florists desiring to join the party will be heartily welcomed.

Various Notes.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will open in Horticultural hall, Broad street below Locust, Tuesday, March 15, continuing throughout the two following days. The National Association of Gardeners will hold its annual convention in connection with the show. There will be a banquet on Tuesday evening. All growers having plants or flowers of merit that they wish to exhibit are cordially invited to communicate with David Rust, secretary.

Ernest Wienhoeber, the well known retailer of Chicago, and his son, William, were visitors in this city a few days ago.

T. Malbranc, of Johnstown, Pa., has been here. Mr. Malbranc's visits are always eagerly welcomed by the wall-flowers.

Harry Bayersdorfer, the merchant prince of this city, finding that his Porto Rican mats might not arrive in ample time for Easter, had them transferred from a slow to a fast steamer, insuring their arrival March 17. Between 500 and 600 cases came in this week.

William Lafferty, chauffeur for the Pennock-Meehan Co., was stopped by the strikers at Broad and Arch streets Monday, March 7, and asked to join their ranks. Mr. Lafferty declined, stating that he knew where to find the "siller" when he wanted it.

Mrs. Mary Johnston, of Baltimore, Md., was here March 7. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston have many friends in this city.

There will be many shamrocks about this season in honor of St. Patrick.

Robert Craig has returned from Florida with Mrs. Craig.

L. R. Hancock, of Burlington, N. J., has been sending freesia to the Leo Nielsen Co. that required no pushing.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Everything seems to promise an early spring. There is no frost in the ground, the robins and crocuses have appeared; the weather has been warm and sunny for a week. The shipments of all kinds of flowers must be large, therefore, from now on, but a shortage around Easter may result, and better prices seem inevitable.

Beauties have maintained their price when everything else has fallen. Apart from this, there is little to add to the report of a week ago. Roses, violets and carnations all had a lower average last week. Of bulbous stock there is no limit. Southern daffodils are arriving. Lilies show no sign, in price, of the approach of Easter, now little more than two weeks away. Valley is in great oversupply. There was a grand clean-up Saturday morning, March 5, when the department store and other bargain sale buyers took whole van loads out of the market. The street salesmen are everywhere; no subway entrance is without them. Every street corner has its walking floral advertisement. On Forty-second street and Fifth avenue they have conducted themselves so that several have been arrested. Necessary as they are to the wholesale market, their importunity sometimes becomes unbearable and if carried too far the end may be their suppression altogether and then the surplus will go to the ash barrels and the river.

Violets at times last week fell to 35 cents per hundred for the best. The leading stores bought them at this for the fresh selected stock. Imagine the price the speculator paid for 100,000 twenty-four hours old! The best gardenias hold up fairly well, as do orchids, while Easter promises a large shipping demand for cattleyas.

Various Notes.

Next week is rose week. With proper publicity there should be record crowds at the exhibition of the American Rose Society and the Horticultural Society of New York. The aggregation of prizes is formidable. There is no charge to the public for admission. The great building where the show is to be held is the finest for the purpose in the country. Good weather alone is required to make this convention and exhibition the greatest of its kind ever given in this country. The banquet, Thursday evening, St. Patrick's day, will be a notable affair, with the visitors from afar, the returning gardeners from Philadelphia, the New York Florists' Club, the host of the evening, and the members of the American Rose Society. Mr. Sheridan says the applications for tables are numerous and that those desiring them reserved should send their acceptance at once, the allotment being made in the order of "first come, first served."

As a suitable opener for rose week the Florists' Club will hold its March meeting Monday, March 14. This will be rose and sweet pea night. Exhibits may be sent to Walter Sheridan, at 39 West Twenty-eighth street. Many early visitors to the rose convention are expected, and one of the modest members of the club will give an address on "Sweet Peas," and an account of his recent trip to California. Secretary Bunyard, of the Sweet Pea Society, will also have some interesting news of the young and prosperous organization.

Tuesday, March 15, the first auction of the year will be held by William Elliott & Sons. The early spring and the

S. Jacobs & Sons say the greenhouse building season has opened encouragingly. Their orders are far in advance of last year, and some come from as far away as Texas.

The Yonkers Horticultural Society will have its first annual dinner Thursday evening, March 10, at the Park Hill Inn, Yonkers.

Myer, of Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, has taken a 10-year lease of his store and will add much space to it after Easter, bringing the windows six feet further out and adding the next store to the one he occupies. Mr. Peterson, formerly with the Fleischman Floral Co. and Mr. Warendorff, has been added to his force. He will have his usual branch store for Easter. Last week he had the yellow decoration for the fiftieth anniversary of George A. Hearn, the veteran millionaire dry goods merchant of New York city.

George J. Allen, son of J. K. Allen, has opened a retail store at One Hundred and Sixty-third street and Forest avenue, in the Bronx, where he has fine window display space and a good neighborhood to grow in. He has been with his father for five years, and is a young man of fine ability and reputation.

stony ground. New York is the only city of any consequence in the United States that has not a regular plant market.

"The New York Market Florists' Association rents from the city 5,000 square feet of ground at the corner of Canal and West streets, paying $1,000 for the use of it for the three spring months. On this ground they erect a tent, which gives some protection from rain but does not keep out the cold. This is the nearest approach to a plant market in New York. Strenuous efforts have been made by the above mentioned association to provide a market. Committees have appeared before every mayor and city administration from Grant to McClellan, but they got no recognition until Comptroller Grout became interested. That gentleman, after convincing himself that a market would at least be self-supporting, took up the project in a very energetic and businesslike manner and had plans and estimates made for a building adequately heated and ventilated, suitable in every way for plant market purposes. He 'put it up' to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, which promptly rejected his proposal. Unfortunately, Mr. Grout went out of office about that time, and no further efforts have been made to get a market building.

"This may not be the kind of a plant market that the correspondent had in mind, but the fact remains that a plant market in New York is a crying need. Plants and flowers should not be luxuries; there should be some method whereby they could reach the people at a reasonable price. Evidently the School Garden Association and the Florists' Association have the same object in view, namely, to get the people interested in gardening. Obviously the first step should be to agitate for a good market building from which plants could be distributed at the least possible expense. Will the School Garden Association make an effort in this direction? J. B.

Business is poorer than it has been for a long time. With exceptionally warm weather during the whole of last week, the production of flowers was greatly increased, far beyond the needs of the market, and prices all around had to decline. Roses have so far held up well, but are now sagging with the rest. Beauties are rather more plentiful, but the call for them is rather light. Killarney and White Killarney remain the leaders. Bride and Maid are both hard to move. Richmond is good. Some nice Rhea Reid is seen, while Mrs. Aaron Ward is quite popular. There are altogether too many carnations. Enchantress is coming paler, but Pink Delight holds its color well. White Perfection and White Enchantress are leaders in their respective colors.

Violets are arriving in immense quantities. The singles are remarkably fine, but a continuation of warm weather will finish many of them, as foliage is now coming up heavily. Bulbous flowers are in heavy supply, too many for the market's needs. Spanish iris, Murillo and Couronne d'Or tulips, ixias, sparaxis and Gladiolus The Bride are all now to be seen. Lilies are plentiful, but sales are slow. The same is the case with callas. There is a good sale for English primroses and pansies. Wallflowers, forget-me-nots, calendulas, annual lupines and other spring flowers are selling fairly well. Sweet peas are in heavy supply; long-stemmed flowers are bringing a good price, but many are only cleared at unprofitable rates. Lily of the valley moves rather slowly, as do gardenias, which latter are now much more abundant. Cattleyas are not overplentiful, and neither are cyripediums, but there is an abundant supply of dendrobiums and ceclogynes. Good adiantum is not overplentiful, and neither is smilax, but Asparagus plumosus and Sprengerii are in better supply and selling fairly well.

Trade in pot plants is much better. Average prices on lilies are 12½ cents per bud. In addition to longiflorum giganteum, quite a few Formosa are being grown. The last named seem practically immune from disease. Rambler roses, acacias, genistas, astilbes, metrosideros and other plants are seen in quantities in the stores and advance sales indicate a heavier Easter plant market than ever.

Various Notes.

Miss Laura Dawson, daughter of Jackson Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum, read a splendid paper on "Horticulture as a Vocation for Women" at Horticultural hall, March 5. Miss Dawson considered that in the realms of landscape gardening, commercial floriculture and in positions as head gardeners there was a good field for women, but thought their future in the west would be better than in the east. In the discussion following the paper Duncan Finlayson, Robert Cameron and W. N. Craig had their say on behalf of the stern sex. W. P. Rich thought health considerations should induce more women to cultivate flowers unable to attend to business. Frank Murray, one of the leading salesmen, has just recovered from a rheumatic attack. Thomas H. Meade, who is continuously on the road for the firm, has only lost one day in four years, and it being a wet day he felt he could take a day off.

R. C. Bridgham, of the Newtonville Greenhouses, has just recovered from a severe case of Primula obconica poisoning. His hands were for some days badly inflamed.

J. Newman & Sons, on Tremont Row, always have a neat window. At present prettily arranged baskets of bulbous flowers and pussy willows are a feature.

They carry a splendid line of all flowers and plants in season.

The fine spring-like weather of last week cheered up some of the large lily growers who were afraid their plants would not be in on time. Now most of them are tolerably certain that they will flower nearly their entire batches. A. Leuthy's stock of giganteums is even and just right, and so are those of W. W. Edgar, T. Roland, William Walke and Peirce Bros.

W. W. Rawson & Co. say that they have never had such a wonderful advance season as the present. They have booked heavier seed orders for late delivery than they ever had the pleasure of booking before. Their biggest increase is in the dahlia department, where orders for single customers for the coming spring run as high as $500 each. For the new and fancy varieties of gladioli they are also experiencing a heavy demand.

Pink Delight is proving a popular light pink carnation and promises to be heavily grown here another season. May Day is also selling well. Enchantress is having to take a temporary back seat. S. J. Goddard's Pink Delight is of an unusually warm color.

March 7 gave us a severe thunderstorm and torrential rain, which according to weather prognosticators means that winter's reign is over. With snow and ice nearly all away and little frost left in the ground, a few more mild days will see plows and spades at work.

N. F. Comley's decorations for the big auto show in Mechanics' building, opening March 5, were in excellent taste. Hedges of lilacs in bloom, large quantities of apples, Spiraea Thunbergii, Dutch bulbs, etc., were used to good effect. The show much exceeds in magnitude the Madison Square and Chicago shows.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

March came in like a lamb and we enjoyed beautiful spring-like weather for about a week. February was a heavy month for coal bills, as the severe weather lasted all through the month. Stock has been none too plentiful in any line, except carnations. Prices dropped a little in bulb stock, which has kept it fairly well cleaned up. Many sales were in evidence as soon as the weather brightened up and more people walked the streets. Sweet peas have been equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

The event of the year was the banquet held by the club at the Iroquois. It was a combination meeting and banquet and met with a marked success. The attendance was large, including several out-of-town members and friends. The election of officers was the chief event of the meeting and after a most spirited contest Joe Streit was elected president and Al Keitsch, vice-president. The banquet then took place and following a few speeches the crowd was entertained by President Slattery with a reading of a paper, the subject of which was "Color Harmony." To make the evening most enjoyable the committee arranged for pictures on the canvas. These pictures were all cartoons of the many members of the club, cleverly gotten up and drawn by Mark Palmer. The pictures brought forth much laughter and put the finish to a pleasant evening.

cality is rapidly building up and should be a good place for business.

Shamrocks and green carnations appeared at some of the smaller store about the first of the month and are still with us.

George Gard is bringing in some fine cinerarias and astilbe plants. He is also doing a nice trade in rooted cuttings and small plants.

George Hollis, the chrysanthemum specialist, has a few new varieties which he expects to introduce next fall.

A. Martin is pushing the work on his new addition. He has a nice stock of small plants that will be in nice shape for spring sales.

EARLY GLADIOLI.

Is there a way to get earlier flowers of gladioli in the open field. Would it pay to pot them up and plant the rooted plants? What is a safe time to plant the roots?

F. F. S.

Gladioli can be planted outdoors just as soon as frost has left the ground and it has become well dried out. Successive batches can be planted until the early part of June. If you put some bulbs singly in 4-inch pots and grow along in a cool greenhouse or coldframe and plant outdoors about the middle of May, you will get the flowers quite a little earlier.

Another plan, where you want early flowers, is to plant the bulbs in boxes six to eight inches deep and of any convenient length and width. Keep under glass until the end of May. Then stand outdoors to flower. These will give you splendid spikes much earlier than the outdoor planted bulbs.

HINSDALE, MASS.—H. J. Smith says that there is a large demand for hardy cut ferns this season and that all the dealers seem to be shipping many good orders. There is a considerable quantity of stock on hand, but the ferns are beginning to spoil and there may be a scarcity before the season is over.

will notice that your benches begin to dry out oftener, and at the same time your plants are making a more vigorous growth, which is a sure sign that the soil is filling with roots, and will need more nourishment.

A good watering of liquid manure once a week is as good as anything, using the other fertilizers in between. A top dressing of bone meal will also be beneficial.

As a preventive of mildew, I keep my hot water pipes well painted with sulphur, frequently closing all the pipes but one run, which is well painted with sulphur, allowing the same to get extra hot, and the fumes of the sulphur will cause a regular vapor in the house.

I think when plants are large enough for 4-inch pots, it is advisable to grow them a little on the dry side, giving them all the air possible, without injuring them, to encourage a good, strong, hardy growth, which will help in keeping out the mildew during the hot summer weather before the fall firing begins.

Ventilating also is an important factor in rose growing, not allowing the temperature to run up to 80 or 85 degrees in the morning before giving air, and then opening the ventilators a foot or more, causing a sudden drop of 10 or 15 degrees, but ventilating gradually, an inch or two at a time, the same method to be followed when closing the houses for the night, as the rose seems to enjoy an even temperature.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—An addition, to be used as a palm room, will be erected in the rear of the flower store owned by Charles Munro, at 974 Chapel street. The addition will be of glass and brick and will have a stone foundation.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The prospect is for the usual increase in violet production next season. There are reports of quite a few new houses going up all through the district, here, at Rhinebeck, Red Bank, Milan and other towns.

MARY TOLMAN

CONQUEST

FOR DETAILED INFORMATION SEE REVERSE SIDE OF THIS SHEET

Conquest is one of the best varieties of this type since the days of Prosperity. It possesses all the good points of this grand variety, together with the exceptional free blooming qualities, stiff stem and beautiful color that makes it a most valuable variety. The color is a light pink, overlaid with a deep rose pink, which extends from the center almost to the edge, and does not fade. It has a habit somewhat on the order of Lawson, but the stems are much longer and very stiff, and the flowers are large and well formed. We have been growing the variety four years, and every one who sees the variety admires it. The retail florist finds ready sales for it. Although we have a large stock of it this year, we will grow considerable more another season in order to supply the heavy demand. Winner of first prize wherever shown.

Sangamo, brilliant, glistening pink, brighter than Winsor or Winona, very popular shades (impossible to get a colored print of the exact shade). The most prolific carnation of any variety we have ever seen growing. It is surprising to every one at the rapid growth it makes. It comes into crop exceptionally early, and as the season advances the crop becomes heavier, and at no time of the season does the crop show any weakening. It makes breaks very easily from the base of the plant, which grows very rapidly, and produces fine flowers on long stiff stems in an exceptional short time. The flowers are 3-3½ inches, nicely fringed and well rounded out in the center, making it an ideal flower on the exhibition table. The calyx will never split. Although it makes an exceptional fast growth, the stem is never weak. On account of its many strong points and being perfect in every way, easy for any florist to grow, it is the best "money maker" for you.

Mary Tolman is an exceptionally beautiful color, being that of a deep flesh pink with just a little trace of salmon, which keeps it from fading in the brightest light. We have allowed the flowers to remain on the plants for two weeks after they were developed and they did not show any signs of fading. This is a very strong feature, and should be well considered. The plants make a very clean upright growth, and give you large and nicely formed flowers on rigid stems 24-30 inches long. The variety has been grown and carefully tested for a number of years, and we find it is proving to be all there was ever claimed for it, and are sure it will find a warm welcome among the florists, who have not been able to grow Enchantress or other varieties in this class successfully. This variety comes into crop early and is continuous throughout the season, giving you fine large flowers on stiff stems 12-18 inches long from the beginning.

We are filling orders for these now with the best cuttings money can buy, and guarantee them to be strong, well rooted and satisfactory in every respect.

Our Guarantee. We have so much faith in these varieties that we guarantee them to be exactly as represented in every way, and will gladly replace any orders where these varieties prove a failure after giving them a thorough trial and common sense treatment.

The Market.

The supply of cut flowers every morning last week was so large that anyone who just happened to drop in would come to the conclusion that there was a glut on, but with summer-like weather since Tuesday morning and a good demand, there was no stock left to speak of at the closing hour.

Good stock was cleaned up at a fair price, considering the quantity, but the poorer grades had to go begging most of the time; in fact, it's always the way, the inferior grades only have a chance when stock is scarce and the demand large. Local grown violets are selling better than for some time, owing to the fragrance, which is stronger than that of those shipped from more distant points.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly club meeting, held March 3, was not any too well attended. The following were unanimously elected to membership: James A. Fox, Roy Currie, Walter Maas and Herman Welke.

Various Notes.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is getting in some fine Beauties of exquisite color, and is also receiving big quantities of fine lily of the valley.

Mrs. Baumgarten, of the Baumgarten Floral Co., Grand avenue, who, owing to sickness, was absent for the last week, is again able to be around.

Heir number two, a little boy, arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Koegler March 3. Mr. Koegler and Martin Christiansen constitute the East Side Floral Co., which conducts a retail store at 468 Farwell avenue.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. says that they already have a number of pleasing advance orders in cut flowers for Easter. A visit to their Humboldt avenue greenhouses at this time is a rare treat; azaleas, spiræas, rhododendrons, roses, lilies and numerous other plants are in A-1 shape and present a grand sight.

At the C. C. Pollworth Co.'s greenhouses the roses are just coming into crop, and with a good supply of carnations and pot plants they expect to please all comers for Easter.

A morning paper, March 4, reported that John I. Beggs, president and manager of the Milwaukee Electric Light & Railway Co., bought the Thomas Weaver & Son greenhouses and fruit farm in Waukesha. It is said he in-

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

SEED sellers in Philadelphia, New York and Boston are on the jump. Mail orders are at the flood tide and counter trade is beginning.

THE death of Francis G. Dwight, for thirty years a seedsman in Reading, Pa., is reported in this week's obituary column.

JOHN MICHIE reports that the force of Reichardt & Schulte Co., Houston, Tex., is working every night and Sundays to keep up with orders, the business having more than doubled this season.

GROWERS of peas and beans, and indeed other seed crops grown under the same system, are beginning to be anxious to get their contracts placed for 1910 acreage. Conditions thus far have been unfavorable for placing contracts, though the farmers are offered considerably better money than in recent years.

It is said that J. J. H. Gregory, whose death occurred February 20, leaves one of the largest estates thus far accumulated as a result of the pursuit of the seed business. Mr. Gregory was born, and lived 83 years, in Marblehead, Mass. He retired from business in 1907, the business going to an adopted son, Edgar Gregory.

IN a decision handed down by the Superior Court of Santa Barbara county February 21 Dr. Franceschi was enjoined from selling any of the plants at Montarioso, and ordered to give an accounting of those already sold, and also to deliver the seeds, plants and correspondence he received while president of the Southern California Acclimatizing Association.

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—The statements that have appeared in the daily press of other cities during the street car men's strike have been grossly exaggerated. There have not been any delays in the mail, or any loss of mail matter, nor is there danger of disturbance on business thoroughfares. The seed trade is not greatly handicapped by the strike.

E. S. DE LANCY, manager of the Northern Seed Co., Valley City, says that they intend to put out this year greatly increased contracts for growing peas and beans in Barnes county, North Dakota. Last year the farmers who grew seed crops did better than their neighbors who grew grain, so they expect little difficulty in placing contracts with the better class of farmers. The contracts offered include garden peas, wax beans, field peas, hullless barley, beardless barley, Siberian millet, broom corn millet, Early Fortune millet and potatoes.

RADISH has sold well, but there is still good stock for those whose needs are not yet satisfied.

THEY say the weather in England's seed growing districts never was so bad as in the last year.

THE growers are able to supply such sugar corns as Crosby's and Country Gentleman in moderate surplus.

ONE of the Nebraska seed growers has issued a surplus list of March date, offering, among other things, over 7,000 pounds of watermelon seeds.

It is said that Federico C. Varela, the grower of Bermuda onion seeds, is the author of the first book on general agriculture published in the Canary Islands.

THERE appears to be no shortage of muskmelon, such sorts as Netted Gem, Rocky Ford and Burrell's Gem being offered in good lots at first hand at from 25 to 30 cents.

OF course there are a number of varieties that it is impossible to purchase in quantity, but it looks as though there would be "something just as good" for all the seed buyers this season.

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20 x 50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

THE SITUATION IN SEEDS.

Writing from Milford, Conn., March 7, Arthur B. Clark, president of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., had the following to say of conditions in Connecticut and in the Wisconsin and Michigan sections where his firm operates:

"Conditions in the seed trade at the present time are wholesome; by which we mean that there is a fair supply of our principal items, so that values are not exorbitant, and yet there is sufficient demand to keep prices at a remunerative level, and apparently sufficient demand to thoroughly clean out our stocks at satisfactory values.

"We have been disappointed somewhat in our crop of Connecticut grown seed corn. You know when the crop that we produce here in Connecticut gives out, we are out of the business for the season, because we deal only in Connecticut grown seed in the items of sweet corn, onion, beet, turnip, parsnip, etc., and as we have said, our sweet corn has been disappointing this season in that we have much less merchantable seed after sorting our crops than we supposed we had when we put them on the racks. The corn did not cure as well as last fall, and we have therefore had to throw out into the waste quite a percentage of the crop. What we have been able to save, however—that is, what did cure—seems to have cured quite well, as the vitality is showing up so far quite satisfactorily on the whole.

"We know of nothing of particular interest to the trade in the growing end of the business at just this time. We presume the seed trade realizes pretty well what the growers are up against in Michigan and Wisconsin this season to get their seed stocks planted, as the difficulty in getting acreage, particularly in beans, is even greater than it was a year ago, although the prices that are being offered the farmers are at a great advance from last year's prices. Of course, weather conditions have interfered materially with the placing of con-

Aster, Vick's New Early

Branching. (Novelty '09.) H. A. The Early Branching come into bloom about two weeks earlier than the Late Branching. The plants have but few branches and are free from side buds, the whole strength of the plant being given to the development of the very few large and perfect flowers, which are borne on extra-long stems. We offer two colors only. Early Branching White, Early Branching Rose. Each, trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Aster, Branching Rosy Carmine.

The color is hard to describe, but we think rosy carmine about right. As a cut-flower variety this Aster catches the eye every time. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Aster, Improved Early Branching Semple.

(Novelty, '09.) H. A. A seedling from that grand old variety Semple's Pink, which on account of its earliness will certainly become equally and we predict more popular than its parent. The color is of the same shade of bright pink and the habit of the plant and form of flowers are identical, being of the same strong robust growth and branching habit. Its greatest value is in its earliness, blooming as it does ten days earlier than Semple's Pink. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Aster, Early Wonder. White.

(Novelty, '08.) H. A. This is the earliest Aster in cultivation, blooming several days before Queen of the market, with pure white flowers double the size; nice shape and stands well. It is after the style of the Giant Comet, and is destined to become the leading early variety, and will prove a great acquisition to growers requiring large, early blooms. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 5 pkts. for $1, 1/8 oz. 40 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Early Wonder Pink.

Trade pkt. 25 cts., 5 pkts. $1, 1/8 oz. 40 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.25, oz. $2.

Asters, Crego.

(Novelty, '09.) H. A. The Crego Asters are of American origin, and are very strong growers, attaining a height of from 2 to 3 feet, with long, strong stems. The flowers are of a mammoth Comet type, measuring from 4 to 5 inches in diameter and resembling large chrysanthemums

HERCULES ASTER, ROSY LILAC

We offer the Crego Asters in the following delightful colors: White, Rose, Light Pink, Purple, Lavender, Crimson, Mixed. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/8 oz. 40 cts., 1/4 oz. 70 cts., 1/2 oz. $1.30, oz. 2.50.

Aster, Hercules (Rosy Lilac).

(Novelty, '10). This grand novelty is the first break from the Grand White Hercules Aster which we introduced some years ago. The color is a splendid delicate rosy lilac. The plants are compact and semi-dwarf, not exceeding 15 to 20 inches in height. In addition to the enormous flower of the main stem, this Aster produces five to six long-petaled lateral flowers, measuring 5 1/2 to 6 1/2 inches across, of the most perfect form. The Hercules Aster is one of the grandest varieties of the Giant Hohenzollern type ever introduced, and we are sure that this variety will find favor with all lovers of good Asters. Trade pkt., 25 cts., 5 for $1.

Hercules.

Of imposing aspect, the plants throw up a very strong stem, 15 to 20 inches high, which begins to branch about 4 inches from the ground. Flowers are borne on remarkably strong stalks, are all the purest white, of the genuine Hohenzollern form, with very long petals, and attain the enormous diameter of 6, or, with good culture, as much as 7 inches. Trade pkt. 35 cts., 3 for $1.

Other Good Asters

Daybreak. Flowers are very large and double, of a beautiful shell-pink color. This is a grand Aster for cutting purposes, growing two feet high. The best late market Aster of its color to date. Trade pkt. 35 cts., oz. $1.75.

The Favorite. An aristocrat among the Comet Asters. Color beautiful blush, changing to rich deep pink as the flower becomes older; the petals wavyly reflexed. The plants grow 18 inches high, bearing large-sized blooms of beautiful form; invaluable for cutting. Trade pkt. 25 cts., 1/4 oz. 60 cts., oz. $2.00.

Purity. One of the most beautiful of the Branching Asters. Double flowers of glistening pure white; similar to Daybreak in form and habit of growth. Trade pkt. 35 cts., oz. $1.75.

Vick's Violet King. The peer of the grandest Chrysanthemums. The habit is similar to the popular Vick's Branching, vigorous in growth, long, stiff stems; petals somewhat resemble the quilled varieties, but much larger and broader, completely covering the crown. In shape and size the bloom is round, full and large, many of the flowers 4 to 5 inches. Its color is a soft violet-lilac. Trade pkt. 30 cts., oz. $1.50.

Lavender Gem. A beautiful variety of Aster, of the Comet type, with large, loosely arranged flowers, which are perfectly double, and of a beautiful, delicate shade of lavender; flowers are borne on long stems, and are excellent for cutting. Trade pkt. 35 cts., 1/4 oz. 75 cts.

tracts, as a great deal of growing territory has been snowbound and now for some time to come the roads will be impassable on account of the mud; but we presume that when these obstacles are removed, the farmers will be found willing to plant about the usual acreage of beans and we shall all, by planting time, be able to get our seed stocks into the ground, although at the present time there is some little anxiety on this score.

"The conditions in the growing territory have, of course, necessitated considerable advance in the prices to the seed trade, particularly on beans, and we cannot see how beans can but be worth good money next year. Unquestionably, the 1910 crop has been contracted with the seed trade too low. The conditions that the growers had to face were not properly reckoned with when the growing prices to the seed trade were named, and when a great many of the contracts were booked; and as a result a great many of the contract beans of 1910 crop are sure to be handled by the growers at little or no profit; at least, handling them the way we do, we cannot figure out much profit at contract prices that prevailed, say, sixty days ago.

"As to stocks of peas and beans at the present time, we presume everybody is agreed that they are well reduced, and next year we shall have to depend solely upon the new crop, which, by the way, is about as satisfactory a condition as we could ask for."

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending February 26 were as follows:

THE REVIEW is like one of the firm. We cannot get along without it. It works while we sleep.—RONEY BROS., West Grove, Pa.

WE were pleased to receive some good orders the first week our advertisement appeared in the REVIEW.—W. G. MOULTON & SON, York Village, Maine.

THE tritomas advertised are all sold and many orders had to be turned down. They came all the way from Massachusetts to Salt Lake City and Texas.—C. S. RIDGWAY, Lumberton, N. J.

PLEASE discontinue our advertisement, as we are completely sold out. This has convinced my proprietor that nobody else can sell as quick as the REVIEW does.—H. J. POTOMKIN, Mgr., Forest City, Ia.

ENCLOSED find $1 for the REVIEW for the coming year. We do not see how we can afford to be without your paper, for even one issue.—ELKLAWN NURSERIES, James E. Weir, proprietor, Jamesport, Long Island, N. Y.

Business conditions for the last fortnight have remained about the same as in former reports. The Lenten season seems to have little effect on the flower-buying public here. With the approach of spring, flowers are becoming more plentiful and of better quality. Carnations seem to lead in demand, being suitable for all occasions. Roses are showing better color and better wood, with a daily clean-up.

Spring flowers are here in profusion, both as cut flowers and in pans, and are used considerably in table decorations. Some choice azalea plants are displayed in the show windows, with stunning results. Callas and longiflorums are more in evidence and are always cleaned up with a fair margin of profit.

Preparations for Easter are noticeable on all sides. The indications are that lilies will be plentiful and all other flowers in proportion.

Various Notes.

February 22 was designated as the Portland rose planting day, but, under unfavorable climatic conditions, the ceremonies were carried on with difficulty. Roses from many foreign lands were presented by their representatives; 170 varieties were presented by the Japanese government.

H. F. Richards sustained a severe loss last week from fire, which originated from an overheated flue and partly destroyed a carnation house and its stock.

Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., dropped in unexpectedly. He reports business highly satisfactory.

The Chas. H. Lilly Co. reports spring business as most satisfactory, with a substantial increase over former years.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

The threatened avalanche of flowers is here and we are almost swamped by them. Never in the history of the local market have they been in greater profusion or in better quality. This is noticeably true in the case of carnations and all kinds of bulbous stock. With roses the excess is not so apparent, although it is only a question of a few days before they will become a drug also. It is hardly worth the time to attempt to give prices, as each grower is a law unto himself and the first amount asked is usually much below the rate the retailer has to produce to secure the stock. We are in the midst of Lent and everyone is hoping that with the arrival of Easter we will be treated to a resumption of business. The long, cold winter, during which time inside and outside stock made little growth, closely followed by an unusually warm spell, is to blame for the profusion of flowers at this time.

Daffodils can be bought as low as 25 cents per hundred for first quality stock and the double varieties do not move at even those prices. Easter lilies, from present indications, are going to be plentiful and the present quotations are from $2 to $3 per dozen stems. Nothing except a spell of sharp, heavy frost can change the conditions in the neighborhood of San Francisco, and as there is little likelihood of anything of that kind so late in our season we are strictly against it.

Violets are commencing to show the results of the warm weather and a few more days will make them much scarcer. Fruit blossoms, especially the double Japanese plums and peaches, are displayed everywhere and are one of the best selling articles handled. Tulips

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.

A decision handed down by the Superior Court of Santa Barbara county, California, February 21, is in favor of the Southern California Acclimatizing Association. Dr. Franceschi, a well known botanist, incorporated the Southern California Acclimatizing Association and, partly in consideration of his agreement to do business only on account of the new firm, received a number of shares and was elected president. By the terms of the agreement the association was to sell all of Dr. Franceschi's plants for him on commission. When he was not reelected to his office, Dr. Franceschi, it was alleged, attempted to abrogate the agreement made, disposed of his shares and conveyed his assets to his daughter, who then started and advertised the Montarioso Nursery. Suit was brought by the association and in a decision handed down by the court, the agreement was held to be void as to the clause forbidding Dr. Franceschi to do business on his own account, this being held to be in restraint of trade. All other contentions were upheld and Dr. Franceschi was enjoined from selling the plants at Montarioso for his own account.

APHIS ON LETTUCE.

How can I get rid of the green lice and little black flies in my greenhouse? I had some lettuce that was covered with the green lice. F. G.

It is generally possible to control the aphis on lettuce by burning tobacco stems in the houses. Another way is to spray the plants with some of the commercial nicotine preparations. In this case, as in most others, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. These insects are readily controlled if the treatment is used occasionally, so as to prevent the insects from getting a start, while they are difficult to control if allowed to become numerous.

ONIONS IN THE GARDEN.

Kindly inform me whether the yellow onion sets for sale by the various seedsmen will produce good, large, marketable onions if allowed to ripen in this Michigan climate. Would they be ripe in time to permit the growing of a crop of Swede turnips on the land they came off? If not, can you suggest a crop to follow them?

If one has plenty of hardwood ashes, would it be necessary or advisable to use lime also, on land that is rather heavy and sour? H. H. G.

The common yellow and white onion sets for sale everywhere in the spring are principally for green onions for bunching. They will make large onions for cooking or slicing with cucumbers, etc., if left until later, but a large percentage of them go to seed immediately and do not make any bottom. That is the reason they are not considered suitable for making large onions.

Top sets can, however, be purchased for that purpose and that is the method used to get the earliest slicing onions in the summer.

I think, though, that the Prizetaker onions grown from seed are far more profitable and satisfactory. The Prizetaker is the immense, light brown onion which, when well grown, can hardly be distinguished from the imported Spanish and Bermuda varieties. The Prizetaker can be grown just the same as the red onion, from seed planted in the fields, but to attain its full size and get best results, they should be transplanted like cabbage plants. The seed is planted quite thickly in rows in coldframes or mild hotbeds, about March 1 or later. These are well cared for until ready to set out in the field; then they are transplanted to the fields much as you would head lettuce or early cabbage. They yield much more heavily than crops from seed sown in the garden.

The onions grown from sets, if pulled as soon as salable, will be out of the way in time to plant late turnips, but the Prizetaker requires a longer season and it would be difficult to find any crop that could be used to follow them in your latitude.

Hardwood ashes can be used liberally on your soil, and lime would also be beneficial. You should also use some fertilizer that is heavy in nitrogen, such as nitrate of soda. Ashes contain no nitrogen, but considerable potash, and both of these are necessary. Heavy, sour land is not best for onions. Light, soft, well drained, rich soil is what they like best. H. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THERE will be many Deutzia Lemoinei sold this spring, several leading nurseries having worked up large stocks.

It appears that the quantity of apple seedlings grown in 1909 was, after all, as great as the needs of the trade.

A LEADING retail nurseryman, most of whose business is done within a radius of twenty miles from the nursery, has for a long time guaranteed all stocks he has planted to thrive for two seasons. During the summer he sends a man in an automobile to make principal inspections of all stock still under guaranty. If neglect or abuse is found, the inspector not only speaks to the customer but a letter is written from the office. Therefore, little stock has to be replaced and the business thrives, as well as the stock.

THE JUNE CONVENTION.

There is every indication that this year's gathering of the American Association of Nurserymen at Denver, June 8 to 10, will be both large and enthusiastic. The new secretary, John Hall, of Rochester, is busy looking after details, and expects shortly to issue a circular letter to members announcing the arrangements made for hotel accommodation and the terms, as well as information concerning railroad rates and special offers. The Brown Palace hotel has been selected as headquarters. It is a thoroughly modern, fireproof building, all outside rooms, and under excellent management. Those who know anything about "The Queen City of the Plains" are aware that it is a popular convention city, because of the beauty of its location, and it will be an ideal place for the assembling of the American Association of Nurserymen in "the month of roses."

The entertainment committee has already been busy. Chairman Frank A. Weber, Peter Youngers and A. M. Ferguson recently met in Denver, and arranged for the following entertainment to be given by the western nurserymen to the national association:

Afternoon of June 8, the ladies will be given a sightseeing trip through Denver and vicinity.

Afternoon of June 9, the ladies will be entertained at a matinee in one of the theaters.

Friday, June 10, the committee has arranged for a sightseeing trip over the Moffat Route to Corona, for the members and their ladies. This is said to be the finest scenic route out of Denver, and has been styled by eminent civil engineers the greatest piece of engineering in the world. This trip will be complimentary to members and their ladies, and it is hoped that the nurserymen will take advantage of this splendid display of hospitality on the part of their western brethren. Luncheon will be served on the trip. A special train will leave Denver at a convenient hour in the morning, returning in the late afternoon.

Other features have been arranged, and will be announced later. The western nurserymen hope that the members from the east will be well represented. Besides those already mentioned, the members of the entertainment committee are F. H. Stannard, ex-officio; J. W. Hill, C. G. Ferguson and George B. Fravert.

ground? How deep should they be put in the ground? W. B. D.

You can use quite stout stakes and drive them well into the ground if desired. Let them go into the ground at least a foot. You should not leave either these or the younger shoots untrimmed. Head them back quite low after growth starts, to insure a thick bottom growth. Do not leave the stout stakes, or posts, as high as five feet. Better cut them down within eighteen inches of the ground. On the drier ground, if you could set out strong plants with good roots they would make a quicker growth, but the posts will grow satisfactorily.

PROVIDENCE.The Market.

Two or three days of sunshiny, spring weather last week greatly accelerated business and Saturday kept everybody on the jump and resulted in a general cleaning up of the stock on hand. Everywhere the same answer was received, "Good business." All the growers hereabouts are optimistic as to the Easter supply and all report good results to date. It looks as though there would be plenty of everything and the opinion is expressed that price may not range quite so high this year as on former occasions.

There has been a good supply and an equally good demand all the week and for the lenten season it exceeds all previous years in this city. Funeral work still continues heavy and many of the florists are making from six to twenty or twenty-five pieces daily. At one funeral, of a well known lady on the east side a few days ago, there were nearly a hundred large designs, baskets and bouquets.

The proposal to establish a market here is slowly but most certainly gaining ground. Many who were formerly opposed to the idea are now among its advocates. I am assured that already a sufficient number of growers have become interested in the matter to make it a success, and that the preliminary steps will be taken immediately after the Easter clean-up.

Various Notes.

The report of Secretary John J. Dunn of the State Board of Agriculture recommends, among other things, the enactment of laws providing for the inspection of all seeds sold to planters in this state and also the passage of a law providing for the inspection of all nursery stocks brought here from foreign countries or from any of the other states.

WASHINGTON.

Business has been quiet during Lent, following the lively season, although compared with previous years Lent is satisfactory.

The Washington retailers prefer Killarney to My Maryland during the winter.

Z. D. Blackistone believes that the Saturday sales have done much for the popularity of the carnation here. The buyers take kindly to them at the special prices.

George H. Cook, who has a keen eye for plants, has made a hit with cut sprays of forsythia for table decoration, forced into bloom last month.

George C. Shaffer finds his hands full with decorations and design work.

The automobile delivery, and especially motorcycle delivery, are proving a great success here.

David Grillbortzer has a fine lot of lilies, but he is doubtful whether he can get them in for Easter. His Killarneys are exceptionally good. He proposes increasing his planting of both this season.

Gude Bros. Co. has a splendid lot of Beauties that will be in before long. Their sweet peas have been the wonder of Washington. M. E. C.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The last meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held on Wednesday evening, March 2, with fifty members present, and with President Bennet in the chair. Several new members were admitted, and a number of applications were received. The committee on the dinner reported progress, stating that the arrangements were nearly completed and the tickets selling well.

The competition in roses for the prize offered by President Bennet was keen, and a number of fine blooms were shown. The judges were Messrs. Macdonald, Stanton and Burns. The first prize went to J. Lamb, the second to H. Scott, and the third to R. Cummings.

Secretary Waite read an able and instructive paper on "Gardeners and the Gardening Profession," plainly showing it to be one of the oldest and most noble professions in existence.

Secretary Waite offered a box of cigars as first prize for the most meritorious exhibit of anything, to be competed for at our next meeting. S. A. Woodrow offered a two-years' subscription to any of the trade publications as second prize, and a one-year's subscription as third prize.

Vice-President Cochrane will read a paper on "The Culture of Mushrooms" at our next meeting. LEE WHITMAN.

delivery—which, from past experience, however, won't last long.

You still have ONE opportunity to get a stock of rooted cuttings of our splendid new Carnation, Dorothy Gordon, for fall and winter trade. Early orders took our entire stock during February and March, but we offer a limited quantity of fine rooted cuttings for April.

Carnation Dorothy Gordon

Has added to its laurels: At the Toronto show, just closed, a gold medal was awarded this Carnation when exhibited in competition with others. Carnation Dorothy Gordon IS a winner—a winner of prizes and a winner of profits, as our customers are learning.

Some of its merits are: Strong constitution absolutely free from diseases; wonderful productiveness—50 per cent more flowers than Enchantress; good color—clear, uniform pink; splendid form and keeping qualities—flowers last four and six days after cutting; and enormous size—averaging three inches in diameter.

We know of no variety possessing all these strong qualities.

Order NOW some of the splendid stock we offer for April. Prices remain the same—$10 per 100; $75 per 1000—and you'll find, long before the season is over, that it was the best investment you made this year. If you want to investigate first, come to see us, or write for particulars—but don't delay, for the stock won't last.

KANSAS CITY.

The decorations for the automobile show, held here February 28 to March 5, were the best and most elaborate ever arranged in this city. The show was held in Convention hall, one of the largest auditoriums in America, and the plan conceived was to represent a pleasure park.

The decoration on the main floor carried out the idea of a sunken garden. The walks were laid out through the green lawns and were bordered with trees in full bloom. The trees on this floor numbered sixty-five, and averaged twenty-five feet in height. The branches were twined with wild smilax and literally covered with artificial apple-blossoms. There were 3,000 gross of apple-blossoms used.

Painted scenery was placed in such a way as to produce a good imitation of a terrace around the sunken garden, and scenery representing park drives, trees, etc., was used to surround the driveway on top of the terrace. On this terrace drive, blooming trees, plants, palms, wild smilax, etc., were used effectively in combination with the rest, making the whole scene strikingly realistic.

Overhead was hung a blue cloth dome, which at night twinkled with electric-light stars, and electric lights were also strung through the trees.

At one end of the hall was suspended a full-sized working model of a flying machine, with the motor running. At the other end of the hall was also suspended a huge automobile, made of white flowers and drawn by a flock of doves.

The contract was let to the American Decorating Co., and the floral part of the decorations was carried out by the Alpha Floral Co., of this city.

MARYSVILLE, KAN.—H. R. Fisher, formerly with Simanton & Pence, of Falls City, Neb., now in partnership with D. Von Reisen, has purchased the greenhouses of P. A. Hammett, in this city. Messrs. Fisher and Von Reisen expect to considerably enlarge the greenhouses in the near future.

WEST SALEM, ILL.—During the coming summer T. E. Hallbeck will build a greenhouse for the purpose of growing a general line of flowers, as well as lettuce. By means of the Illinois Central railroad, West Salem is directly connected with the city of Evansville, Ind., which will be a good point to ship to. Mr. Hallbeck not only expects to grow for the wholesale market, but will retail cut flowers and make funeral designs also. The soil in this part of the state is quite suitable for the culture of roses, as well as most of the other plants he will grow.

DES MOINES, IA.

The Market.

All the florists here report business for February as better than last year, notwithstanding the fact that Lent began earlier this year. Flowers were scarce all last month, but are now becoming more plentiful and lots of fine carnations and roses are to be had, with plenty of tulips, daffodils, lilies, hyacinths and sweet peas.

Various Notes.

Wm. Trillow is fortunate in having his Easter lilies just right for that day, and in addition a fine lot of cinerarias, primroses and bulbous stock.

The Iowa Seed Co. has a fine lot of lilies, which will be in for Easter.

The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. has a good assortment of azaleas in all colors, besides pans of hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, etc. We also noted a fine lot of genistas and Queen Alexandra marguerites, all nicely budded and which will make fine Easter plants. Last week this company decorated the Yonker Bros. department store for their spring opening and used 300 large palms, bay trees, box trees and ferns and twenty-five hanging baskets of Boston ferns and Sprenger for the work. They expect to start work on a new greenhouse next month, to be 18x200 feet.

The Guthrie-Lorenz Co. moved to a large corner store at Seventh and Grand avenues last fall and now find that business is increasing so rapidly that they have rented the store next door, torn down the partition and made it into one large store, with an entrance and show windows on each street. Miss L. E. McMillen, the genial secretary and treasurer of the company, handles the cut flower part of the business, while the other departments are looked after by Mr. Guthrie and Mr. Lorenz.

Another new flower store has been started here, under the name of the American Floral Co. George Macrees, who formerly owned the Rush Floral Co., which he sold to Frank Stevens, is the proprietor of the new store.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There is little change in the condition of the flower market. Prices are about as low as they can go, so there is no cause for alarm on that score. There have been intermittent periods when the market had the appearance of life, but a close investigation proved that there was but little to it. There is considerable activity about some of the leading retail stores, but with the great volume of good stock pouring in, it is not nearly what it should be. The weather has been exceedingly warm, with a great deal of foggy weather, the temperature for the week being around 60 degrees.

Carnations are a glut this week and can be had for $10 per thousand and are retailed on the streets for 17 cents per dozen. Violets are selling for 20 cents to 30 cents per hundred and thousands were sold Saturday at 10 cents per bunch of twenty-five, and roses at 1 cent each.

Bulbous stock is coming in fine shape and sells well, especially tulips in pans, but only a short supply will be available for Easter, as few were grown this year.

Various Notes.

Halliday Bros. have one of the finest houses of Formosum and giganteum lilies to be seen anywhere and they will be just right for Easter; all of it is the true stock, which came from Michell's, of Philadelphia.

John Cook is booking heavy orders for his new rose, Radiance, which is the finest seedling which Mr. Cook has sent out. Q.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

All things considered, trade was not so bad last week. Prices suffered somewhat, but it helped to move goods and a good day Saturday cleaned up everything nicely, so the wholesalers were in a good humor.

Among the retailers, funeral trade has been heavy, and the number of small social affairs has increased and these, together with several bright days, helped their trade all around, so one does not hear much complaint from them.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club met Tuesday, March 1, at the Fort Pitt hotel, with about forty members present, and after the business of the evening was concluded, Edward Blind, who had been married since our last meeting, took charge of affairs, and closed the session with lunch and other refreshments, which were much appreciated.

James Moore, foreman of the Phipps Conservatory, North Side park, has the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his father.

George A. McWilliams, of the McWilliams Floral Co., Tarentum, Pa., lost his only sister March 7, leaving Mr. McWilliams as the last of his family.

The Homewood cemetery has under construction four houses intended for show and bedding stock. They are all U-Bar construction.

Nick Harris, of Harris Bros., who had been visiting his old home in Greece, arrived unexpectedly March 7.

Hoo-Hoo.

WALDEN, N. Y.—The secretary of state, at Albany, has issued a certificate of incorporation to the C. W. Brownell Co., of this place; capital stock, $20,000. The corporation is to take over the business heretofore conducted as a partnership. A specialty has been the shipping of osmunda root, in which a large business has been done, but the corporation is authorized to grow and deal in ferns, flowers, plants, etc. The incorporators are C. W. Brownell, R. C. Brownell and J. D. Brownell.

Headquarters for Easter Plants Prepare for Easter!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see, Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me. Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow. The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day. Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way. The Araucarias, matchless are, so are the ferns all green. With bulbs, and plumed Spiraea, the best you've ever seen. And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear, For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear. If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring, Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

THIS IS OUR CATALOGUE.

Remember! Azalea Indica is Our Specialty

Don't be fooled. Be careful what and from whom you buy. Remember we are the people who can offer you bargains in azaleas. We have the real stock. Why? Because we make a specialty of importing azaleas and having sufficient capital to buy for cash we get the cream of Belgium's production—full of buds, with plenty of foliage and perfect pictures of health.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, planted in the fall as soon as they arrive from Belgium into 6-in., 7 and 8 in. pots, placed in greenhouses and kept cool in the winter and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. Please bear in mind the fact (mostly unknown to some azalea consumers) that fully 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the newly imported azaleas in dormant state will lose their buds and leaves during sea voyage and during winter up to February 1, and have to be kept over for another year. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers, and, therefore, you can't expect an azalea at this time as big and as cheap as if you would buy them in dormant state in the fall.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. All sizes in the following prices: 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Azalea Indica

In large plants we have the following, full of buds: Bernard Andre (pure white), Niobe (pure white), Helene Thelemann (rose, light pink), Memoire de L. Van Houtte (large flowers (double pink), Empress of India (large flowering (double variegated), Dr. Moore (double pink), Mme. Van der Cruyssen (best of all the pink), Apollo (red), De Schryveriana (double variegated), $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00. In smaller sizes we have the following varieties, full of buds: Deutsche Perle (double white), Vervaekeana (double variegated), a well known standard variety, Apollo (red), Simon Mardner (double pink), De Schryveriana (double variegated), Empress of India (double variegated), all well budded, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. Professeur Wolters $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. This is a well known, bright, variegated variety. Mme. Van der Cruyssen (pink), 60c, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25. In Niobe (double white), have only the $1.00 and $1.25 sizes to offer, the smaller plants having dropped their buds. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10 in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please. No references. Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

GODFREY ASCHMANN, 1012 West Ontario Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.
IMPORTER, WHOLESALE GROWER AND SHIPPER OF POT PLANTS

greenhouses you must all admit they are "crack-erjacks." We sell them cheap too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6 in. pots.

The 9 to 10 Japanese lily bulbs were nearly a failure last fall, owing to the bad weather. While other florists and some dealers only received 20 to 30 per cent of their orders, we were one of the fortunate, receiving the full amount of our order (5000) from one grower in Japan. No joke when I tell you our lilies were never so nice and perfect as this year. Orders on lilies only positively will not be filled; if you want the lilies it will be necessary for your order to call for other stock also.

Begonia, new improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per doz. Flambeau, 5 in., $2.00 per doz.

Primula Obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida grandiflora, Henry F. Michell Co., a new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. We have a house full in very fine condition, in bud now, just right for Easter, large plants, full of buds. Remember Gladstone is scarce this year, owing to the dry weather in Holland last year, but we were fortunate to have received enough to supply all of our customers; price, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moon-flower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½ in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, 4 in. pots, $12.00 per 100.

Touresol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a 4 in. pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $4.00 per 100.

Greenhouse Heating.

TWO TEXAS ROSE HOUSES.

I am building two houses, 30 by 100 each, and intend to grow roses. I should like to ask if ventilation on one side of each house would be sufficient, and whether it is better to hang the ventilators from the header or the ridge? Can smilax and Asparagus plumosus be grown with roses? I intend to use steam heat. How many runs of 1-inch pipe would be necessary to maintain the temperature for roses, where the thermometer seldom, if ever, goes to zero? Which would you prefer—side heat or under the benches? C. N.

There should be ventilation in one side wall and on one side of the ridge in each house. It is generally best to hang the ventilators from the ridge. It is not desirable to grow smilax in the same house with roses, although it is sometimes done. A temperature of 60 degrees can be maintained with fifteen 1-inch pipes. It will be well to have two under each bench and the remainder on the walls.

POORLY PLACED, FLOW PIPES.

I have a hot water system that does not heat my place properly, and I should be thankful if you would tell me the cause of the trouble. I have two houses, each 21x76, running east and west, with a three-quarter span to the south. The walls are of brick, cemented on the inside. There is no wall between the two houses. There are six benches, and under each bench there are two 1½-inch flow pipes and one 1½-inch return. The boiler is six feet below the ground level, and the 1½-inch flows are supplied by a 4-inch main pipe, four or six inches under the ground—that is, a cross-header. The 1½-inch flows lead out from this header to the highest point in the system. Then they fall two and one-half inches in the seventy feet and connect with one return of the same size, which extends to the boiler with a fall of two and one-half inches in the seventy feet.

I have no trouble in getting my boiler to circulate, but have to watch it to keep it from boiling. The houses are new—built last summer, with 16x24 glass. Yet when the temperature is 22 to 28 degrees outside I have trouble in keeping it up as high as 50 degrees inside. My belief is that the pipes under the benches are not large enough to maintain the needed temperature. I am located in Mississippi. J. W. M.

There is nothing in the data given which affords any idea of the trouble.

Certainly it is not due to any deficiency in the radiating surface, as it would be ample to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. Unless the lowest part of the system is two feet above the heater, a rather slow circulation might be expected in pipes as small as those mentioned. It is possible that, with the slight fall mentioned, there are one or more high points in which the air has pocketed, thus interfering with the circulation. In that case, the difficulty might be corrected by raising the boiler end of the flow pipes.

If the flows had been run overhead, a temperature of 50 degrees could be maintained with two-thirds of the present piping.

HIGHEST POINT OF SYSTEM.

Please tell me where the highest point ought to be in my heating plant. The water has to be heated to about 128 degrees to make it circulate on a run of forty-five feet. My house runs east and west, with the boiler at the west end. The flow, which is a 3-inch pipe, runs uphill all the way to the east end of the house, where it is connected to a coil of five 2-inch pipes in the center, a coil of six 1½-inch pipes on the north side, and a coil of six 1-inch pipes on the south side.

F. G.

I am not able to determine the trouble with the heating system from the description given. When the houses are on a level tract and an overhead system is used, the highest point of the system is generally near the heater, but if on a side hill it is generally necessary to have the highest point at the part of the system farthest from the heater.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business is still good in all its branches, judging from reports of the leading retailers, who say they have had an exceptional run of funeral work, and transient trade has also been excellent. The weather is fine and March was ushered in like a lamb, and if we can keep the lion away the planting season will open early this year. Stock of all kinds is rather plentiful; in fact, there is more than one wholesaler can dispose of. Everything in season is to be had, and all the stock seems to be of the best quality.

In roses the market has plenty just now. All white stock is cleaning up fairly well. All varieties are coming in more freely than for some time back. Carnations are plentiful; in fact, there are more than can be sold. Prices are easy on the fancies in big lots; they go for $1.50 per hundred. California violets have been a glut for the last two weeks and a great many of them had to be dumped. Callas and Harrisii sell well when good. Paper Whites and Romans are more plentiful than in the week previous. Von Sions and jonquils are plentiful, also Dutch hyacinths and freesias. Sweet peas, also, have been coming in too freely to sell clean.

Asparagus and smilax sold well, also other greens.

Various Notes.

E. W. Weisman, of the Drumm Seed & Floral Co., Fort Worth, Texas, spent a few days in the city last week, calling on friends. Mr. Weisman has returned home after a pleasant visit.

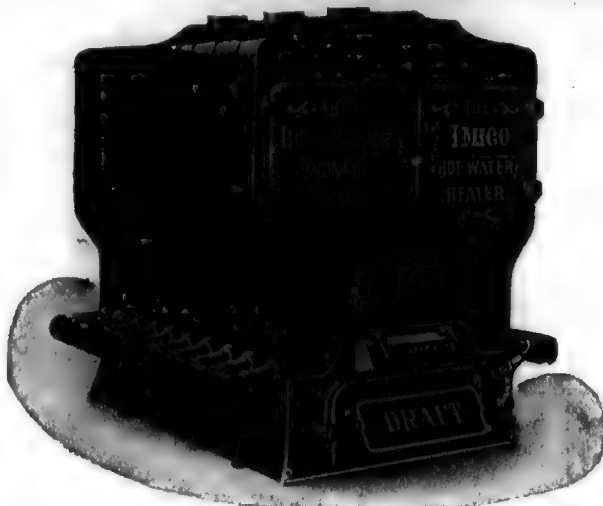

Mrs. C. Smith, mother of W. C. Smith, and mother-in-law of H. V. Hunkel, of Milwaukee, left last week for an extended trip to California. During her absence W. C. Smith will give another one of those stags to his many friends.

It has been reported that some of our Kirkwood growers will take up rose growing this year. Should this go into effect it would be a move in the right direction, as rose growers are scarce in this section.

Rufus J. Lockland, who for the last twenty years was president of the board of trustees of the Henry Shaw estate, died last week at the age of 90 years. William Trelease, director of the garden; James Gurney, superintendent of Tower Grove Park, and A. C. Cunningham, secretary of the board, were among the honorary pall-bearers. Many beautiful floral designs were seen at the house.

Otto Sander, who has a pretty store under the Maryland hotel, is more than pleased with the business done since Lent began. Mr. Sander attracts many with artistic window displays.

Charles Dauerenheim, Jr., a carnation grower in Kimmswick, Mo., who consigns to this market, reports that he is going into the chicken business this summer.

The Kirkwood growers last week filled up the wholesale market completely with California violets, sweet peas and carnations, all of the best quality. Plenty of them went to waste even at the cheap prices. The weather of a few days last week was more like midsummer, and this would soon put a stop to violets.

Jule Koenig, Charles Stocke, A. Y. Ellison and W. E. Jordan, of the city forestry department, are having plenty of work these spring-like days, and are out daily with a big force of men, directing the work among the city trees.

A special bowling match has been arranged for Sunday afternoon, March 13, between Eddie Gerlach and George Schriefer, of C. A. Kuehn's force, and Oscar Huettemann and J. J. Beneke, to take place at the new alleys at Grand and Arsenal. The trade is invited to attend.

The call made by several of the west end florists for a meeting at the Washington hotel, Wednesday, March 2, to organize a retail florists' protective association, was responded to by some twenty invited retailers. The organization was perfected by electing C. C. Sanders president, Charles Young secretary and Fred H. Weber treasurer. J. J. B.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The trade last week was fair, and funeral work is good. We had regular spring weather the last four or five days of last week, which opened up the flowers quickly. Carnations are coming in great quantities and of good quality, and retail at 50 cents per dozen, with roses at $1.50 per dozen. Violets are still holding out in good shape and sell at 75 cents to $1 per hundred. Sweep peas retail at 75 cents to $1 per hundred blooms. Bulbous stock is coming in fine, with a fairly good call, and retails at 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen. Easter lilies sell at $2.50 per dozen and callas at $2 per dozen. Freesias are almost all gone, but there is some good mignonette to be seen. We are now having our street fakers, who are cutting prices right and left, and still the wholesale grower expects the retail dealer to buy from him.

Things are looking fine for Easter. There will be a good supply of bulbous stock and a fairly good lot of lilies. Carnations will be in good supply, but indoor violets will be about all over. The weather is grand just now, good, clear, sunshiny days, full of life and vigor.

Napoleon Lemay has thousands of small plants coming along for the spring trade, both vegetables and flowering plants.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting February 25. The subject of the meeting, "Roses," was introduced by Andrew McKendry. An interesting and instructive discussion followed. The monthly prize was won by Jas. Stuart, with a splendid vase of Killarney. Mr. McKendry showed a grand vase of mixed varieties, which was only a few points behind the first prize lot. A number of other vases were shown, the general quality of which was remarkably good.

The subject for next meeting is "Forced Vegetables" and the prize will be given for the best three kinds.

SALT LAKE CITY.

The Market.

The spring flowers and Easter plants are now coming into full swing and tulips, hyacinths, lilies, daffodils, stocks and freesias, to say nothing of the potted plants, are in full bloom in all the local greenhouses. Cut flowers, such as roses, carnations and violets, are in goodly number and the outlook for the flower business this spring is that it will be the best experienced in many seasons.

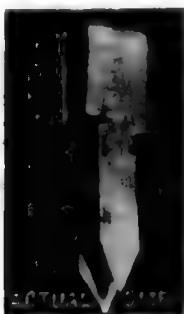

Prevailing prices are about normal. Tea roses retail at from $2 to $3 per dozen, while Beauties bring from $4 to $10. Carnations are selling between $1 and $1.25 per dozen and prices on other flowers are about as usual.

Various Notes.

C. Kramer & Sons, proprietors of fifteen greenhouses at Third East and Fifteenth South streets and who conduct one of the largest retail stores in the city at 39 South Main street, say that business has been splendid, the retail branch of it being particularly good. They will have a big supply of flowers for Easter. They now have over 1,000 pots of Easter lilies, which will give about 4,000 to 5,000 blooms, besides a large and satisfactory plant stock. Roses, carnations and violets, with this firm, are good all the year around, but they expect an especially heavy demand for this season.

E. A. Child, proprietor of Child's Floral Art Shop at 11 South Main street, says, "Spring flowers are coming in nicely." He reports that on account of the scarcity of roses the price has advanced somewhat, but conditions are improving and they expect a nice supply.

At the store of the B. C. Morris Floral Co., 52 East First South street, there is an unusually fine lot of cut flowers and plants displayed. They say that there will be no difficulty with them in supplying the local trade.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING
AND

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

THE MASTIN AUTOMATIC WHITEWASH AND SPRAYING MACHINE IS RELIABLE, PRACTICAL AND DURABLE

The tank is made of galvanized sheet steel, and in brass.
The pump is of brass throughout, simple and powerful.
The mixing device keeps the contents of the tank well stirred up from start to finish.

When the machine is filled to within six inches of the top, a few strokes of the pump will compress enough air in the tank to produce a continuous mist-like spray for 15 minutes.

All parts are made to gauge and may be had for repairs.
Ask your dealer about our Extension Hose, Extension Rods, and the Mastin Whitewash Nozzle for Bordeaux mixture.

Sold through seedsmen, dealers in florists' and poultry supplies.

MONTREAL.

The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club is holding a series of unusually successful meetings this season, on the first and third Mondays of each month, at the Royal Guardians building, 211 Sherbrooke street, west. The officers for 1910 are: Ex-president, J. Pidduck; president, J. Luck; first vice-president, J. E. West; second vice-president, W. R. Whiting; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Horobin; assistant secretary, Alex. Wilkie; executive committee, A. Ferguson, J. Petty, W. S. Watts, J. H. Schoning, A. C. Wilshire and S. Viel.

The committee arranged a program of interesting talks for the season, the first, given at a February meeting, being by F. Allen on "Cultural Methods, Past and Present." At the meeting of March 7 there were two talks scheduled: "Heating of Glass Structures," by Mr. Hughes, and "The Forcing of Bulbs," by Alex. Wilkie. The program for the balance of the season is as follows:

April 4—"Mushroom Culture," by Alex. Wilkie. "Hotbeds and Their Use in Raising Stock," by S. Viel.

May 2—"Life History of Some of Our Common Insects," by J. M. Swafne, Macdonald College.

June 6—"Pruning," by Prof. W. S. Blair, Macdonald College.

July 4—"Time Required at Different Seasons for the Maturing of Various Crops Under Glass," by A. H. Walker, Macdonald College.

August 1—"The Arrangement of Cut Flowers," by Alf. C. Wilshire. "Picking and Storing Fruit," by J. E. West.

September 4—"The Propagation and Cultivation of Bulbs in Holland," by J. H. Schoning.

October 8—Address by Professor Lochhead, Macdonald College.

November 7—"Citrus Fruit Growing," by J. F. Munroe, Macdonald College.

December 5—Annual meeting.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business for the first three weeks of Lent has been as good as could be expected. Stock of all kinds has been plentiful and quality good. Jonquils were in good supply and several of the stores made special displays of them, with a result that was quite satisfactory. All kinds of bulbous stock are coming in and are somewhat better than formerly.

Carnations are plentiful, likewise roses, and violets are in full crop, with the result that prices took a tumble to where they sold from 50 cents to $1 per hundred. Valley, orchids and other stock are about equal to the demand.

Stock for Easter is in good shape and some fine plants and flowers will be on hand.

THE Kroeschell Boiler

Was installed to heat over 9,000,000 square feet of glass during the past four years.

THE Kroeschell Boiler

Replaced over 1500 cast iron boilers in the short period of six years.

Expressions From The Men Who Know

We are very much pleased to inform you of the wonderful results of the Kroeschell Threaded Boiler Tube Piping and Generator System, which we have just finished and tested. We were able to raise the heat fully as quick as steam and far more satisfactorily. It is certainly a great improvement over other piping systems.

Please accept our many thanks for the use of the tools and for the many favors shown us. Your system of doing business is certainly the squarest and fairest of any out of the many whom we have dealt with.

W. J. MILLER & SON, Pontiac, Ill.

Our heating system works to perfection. To our surprise the new No. 8 Boiler mastered the whole plant, consisting of five houses 20x150. We only deemed it necessary to start our second boiler when the temperature went down to 8 degrees below zero.

We had expected to use both boilers in cold weather, but the one boiler did such excellent work that we did not run the two boilers until December 5, when the very cold weather set in.

It was a very easy matter to keep the temperature up in the very coldest weather and stormiest nights.

The five houses have 20,500 square feet of glass; the No. 8 Boiler is rated at 16,500 square feet of glass.

MUELLER & SCHROEDER CO.,
926 9th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Your Boiler and Boiler Tube Piping System is making summer heat up here, although we had 24 degrees below zero. Am well satisfied; made a good job.

JOHN AHLSTROM, Spicer, Minn.

I am so well pleased with my No. 5 Kroeschell Boiler and the excellent work it is doing for me, that I am showing it to everyone. If I can be of any assistance to you in placing a boiler at any time, I shall be glad to do so.

Yours truly,
C. A. NOKES, Sac City Greenhouses,
Sac City, Iowa.

Expressions From The Men Who Know

We purchased of you this spring a No. 6 Kroeschell Boiler, which you guaranteed would take the place of three cast iron boilers. Well, the whole thing in a nut shell is this—your word is as good as gold. Night before last we had a severe storm of snow and sleet, and a very high wind; we had not the least bit of trouble. We fired the last at 10:00 p. m., Nov. 24th, and the next morning at 7:00 o'clock we looked at the houses and found it only 1 degree less than when we fired the last coal, 9 hours earlier. If this isn't magnificent work and a good test we would be pleased to hear from any one else that could furnish a better boiler.

We know if parties wishing a boiler would get one from you they never would try any other.

We think in 5 years' running of this boiler we will have the price saved in the difference in our coal bill.

Wishing you the best of success, we remain,

Very truly yours,

ADAM LAUB & SON, Hughsonville, N. Y.

We now have your No. 2 Boiler and Generator in operation. We use soft or bituminous coal and it works like a charm. We are very much pleased with it indeed.

Very truly,
J. T. LOVETT, Little Silver, N. J.

THE KROESCHELL GENERATOR

Cures sluggish circulation.

Water travels three to five times faster.

Saves fuel.

Prevents boiling over.

Water can be heated to 240 degrees without boiling, making it possible to have steam temperatures in your piping if wanted.

Greatly improves systems having long mains and coils.

Can be connected to any hot water system, no matter what kind of boiler or piping is used.

Easy to install—simply attach to your present expansion pipe.

The Kroeschell Piping System

Circulation is perfect.

Cheaper and better than 1, 1 $\frac{1}{4}$, 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ or 2-inch threaded pipe.

Overcomes all the disadvantages of 4-inch cast-iron pipe.

No deep boiler pits required.

THE FLOWERS OF EASTER.

Here is a letter received just after Easter, 1909. As a beautiful sentiment, beautifully expressed, it is a gem. As an indication that there is more to the Easter flower business than so many lilies, etc., at so much per, it has great significance. No matter how calloused we growers may become, we cannot get away from the fact that it is because our products are able to arouse sentiments such as these that we are in the business.—C. H. Green.

Speaking of beautiful flowers reminds me of Easter day. I wish you could have seen our church on that day of all days, because of the glorious inspiration and good cheer that came into our hearts as we knelt there amid those fragrant blossoms. Never have we had so many flowers in the church, and never more effectively arranged. It was a sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving.

I think that one must have been sordid, indeed, not to be touched by the holy influence of those beautiful flowers. And I do not believe that such a one knelt in the church that morning. In fact, as one looked out over the congregation it seemed that all the grace and beauty of the Easter flowers were reflected in the happy, smiling, sunshiny faces of the people.

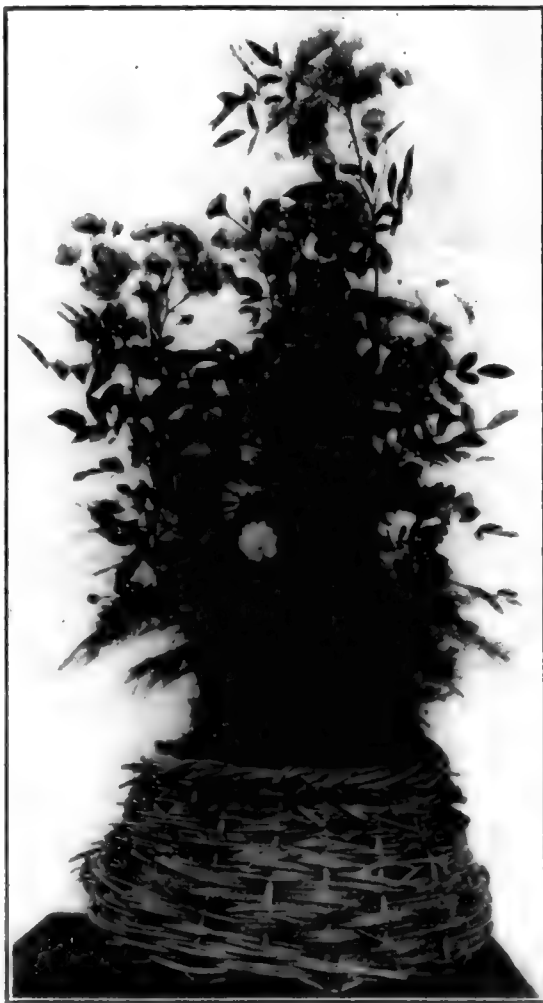

But, of all the congregation that crowded the church on that Easter morning, one face stands out vividly in my memory, and do what I will I cannot quite forget him. For days that phantom figure has journeyed with me, and whichever way I turn, whatever I try to do, there before me stands that lonely old man—aged, but not with years!

A strange figure he, in that throng of richly dressed ladies and carefully groomed men; he, with his torn and soiled clothing, his shifty eyes, disheveled hair, and that deeply lined face—furrowed by many a year of dissipation and hard living.

A stranger, he had just strayed in because—well, something drew him this way and he could not quite resist. But were not all the people going to church this beautiful morning, and why not he? And, besides, did he not remember today that sweet story of the old church catechism about being a "member of Christ, a child of God, and an inheritor of the kingdom of heaven?"

And as he stood there that morning at the foot of the center aisle, in a halfhesitating manner, listening to the great organ and the singing of the marching choir, his eyes fell upon that mass of beautiful flowers which our altar guild had arranged with exquisite taste in choir and sanctuary and about the high altar. As he looked, on his wizened visage there was spread a light that seemed to be a reflection of heaven's sweetest joys. Slowly he wiped the perspiration from his brow, and by that act seemed to brush away cobwebs from the darkened chambers of his mind, and again, as in boyhood's days, he looked upon a vision of the holy and beautiful.

I cannot say too often that the flowers were beautiful. But they were helpful, too, for where can we find a more tender ministry than that which we get from their lines of heavenly beauty, their entrancing perfume that seems like a breath of Paradise, and their suggestion of a life of spotless purity?

Why, no preacher, nor poet, nor musician, nor artist, can speak into our hearts as did those flowers of matchless beauty. They told us the story of life, and of joy, and of hope, and of love divine, and of immortality—thoughts which stir in all our hearts, but which we cannot adequately express without their aid.

Yes, the gentle, nodding flowers, with which the Great Gardener has decked this sad old earth to bring us joy when clouds hang low—these buds and blossoms will carry a message of love and consolation from heart to heart when human words are futile and when our lips are dumb.

And on Easter day they speak with a potency possessed at no other time, for their very nature is attuned to the thought which then is uppermost in all our minds. It is right and natural that the faithful should gather those wondrously beautiful flowers in great numbers to deck and adorn the church on the glad day of the resurrection, because they tell the story of the day—the story of hope and immortality—better than can be told by any other earthly means. Earthly means, did I say? I cannot say that, for these flowers are not of earth. They are only points of light marking where heaven touches earth, and their voice is the voice of God.

"On the happy Easter morning
All the world breaks forth in song,
Bells ring out from every steeple,
Children's voices carol long;
But beneath the happy music,
I can hear, so soft and low,
The sweet chiming of the lilies
As their bells swing to and fro.

"On the happy Easter morning
Earth puts on her robe of light,
Sunshine turns the gloom to gladness,
Makes the darkest places bright;
Violets bloom in all their sweetness,
Crocus-cups the sunbeams hold,
But we find the brightest glory
In the lilies' hearts of gold.

"Christ is risen! Christ is risen!
O'er the earth the message flies,
And the sad have found a comfort,
And the weary raise their eyes;
For the gladdest, sweetest story
That the world will ever know,
Greet us in the Easter blossoms,
In the lilies' cups of snow."

ROSE MRS. CUTBUSH.

That pretty rose, Mrs. William H. Cutbush, is a comparatively little known Easter subject. Those who have experience of it describe it as one of the finest types of the Baby Rambler roses. It is of dwarf growth, producing a profusion of flowers of a pleasing shade of pale pink. These are borne in large trusses and the variety is useful not only for flowering under glass to meet the demand for blooming plants for holiday sales, but it is an excellent bedder, the trusses being produced, under favorable conditions, throughout the whole summer and autumn.

The plant illustrated was photographed in a Rochester flower store last Easter. The basket is one of those odd willow shapes of which so many are now offered for the choice of the discriminating retail florists. In preparing the plant for sale some asparagus was planted around the base of the rose and the soil in the pot was covered with live sphagnum moss.

HANDLING THE RUSH.

Be Wise and Be Ready.

When holidays come around, either Christmas or Easter, the retail florist sympathizes with the banker—the man of money says elastic currency is a crying need, and the florist would give much to put elasticity into his own facilities. What the retailer wants for three days is twice as much space as he ordinarily needs, and about three times as much help.

Fortunate, indeed, is the man who has a conservatory attached to his store, from which the palms can be removed for a few days and in which the holiday plant arrangements can be handled. Next lucky is the florist who finds a vacant store next door available for a holiday rush. The man who has neither of these resources must do the best he can and make no protest when he finds his store so full of stock there is no room for customers—anyway, the telephone nowadays produces a big part of the business.

Extra Help.

The retailer whose business for three days at Easter is five or six times as large as in an ordinary three days always has to get in extra help. Fortunately, no great amount of store experience is required to make a good clerk for the holiday rush. People come to the flower store intent upon buying, and about all you have to do is to take their orders—it isn't half as hard as ordinary selling. A great many retailers get their extra holiday help from the greenhouses—either their own or other people's. By the time the rush is on in the retail stores, it is pretty well over under the glass where stock is grown for wholesaling. These greenhouse hands make first-class store assistants. If they are not good for salesmen, they are sure to be experienced plant handlers and packers. They can plant up the baskets and hampers, or they can wrap and pack for delivery. If this class of help is to be had it will permit all the store's regular force to turn in for selling.

Where a retailer must get along with help that has no experience in the business, he will be wise to employ some of the young women of the neighborhood, so that he can get them holiday after holiday. Thus they gradually acquire experience, and experience in that retailer's special methods and peculiarities, so that in time they become almost as good as his regular employees.

Price Marks.

With so much extra help in the place it is necessary to have everything carefully marked as to price. This is easy enough with the plant arrangements. Some retailers make up their stock and sell from the display. In that case every piece should be marked with its selling price as soon as finished and before it is taken into the store. Other stores merely show samples of plant arrangements, taking orders from these, and after business hours planting up the stock to fill orders. In one way this is easier, because it permits everybody to take a hand at the selling, but it means long hours of overtime getting out the orders, and selling from sample is neither so easy nor so satisfactory as where the actual article purchased is picked out, tagged, and set away at the moment the customer makes selection.

Having every article priced in plain figures not only helps the green clerks to acquit themselves creditably, but it helps the selling, because the customers while waiting for attention can look around and, reading the prices, make their own selections, thereby saving the time of the clerks.

It is just as important to have everyone know the price of the cut flowers as to have them know the prices of plants, but in the high class stores they do not like to tag their stock the way it is done in the cheap-sales establishments. To get around this difficulty one leading city retailer has a blackboard of quite large size on the wall in his workroom, out of sight of the customers but where it is quickly got at. On this blackboard he chalks up the holiday prices of every item of cut flowers in his stock. Then it is not necessary for any clerk to ask another about prices. Every plant arrangement has an inconspicuous wood label stuck in the soil, marked with the selling price, and if there is any doubt as to the price of cut flowers a glance at the blackboard shows what it is.

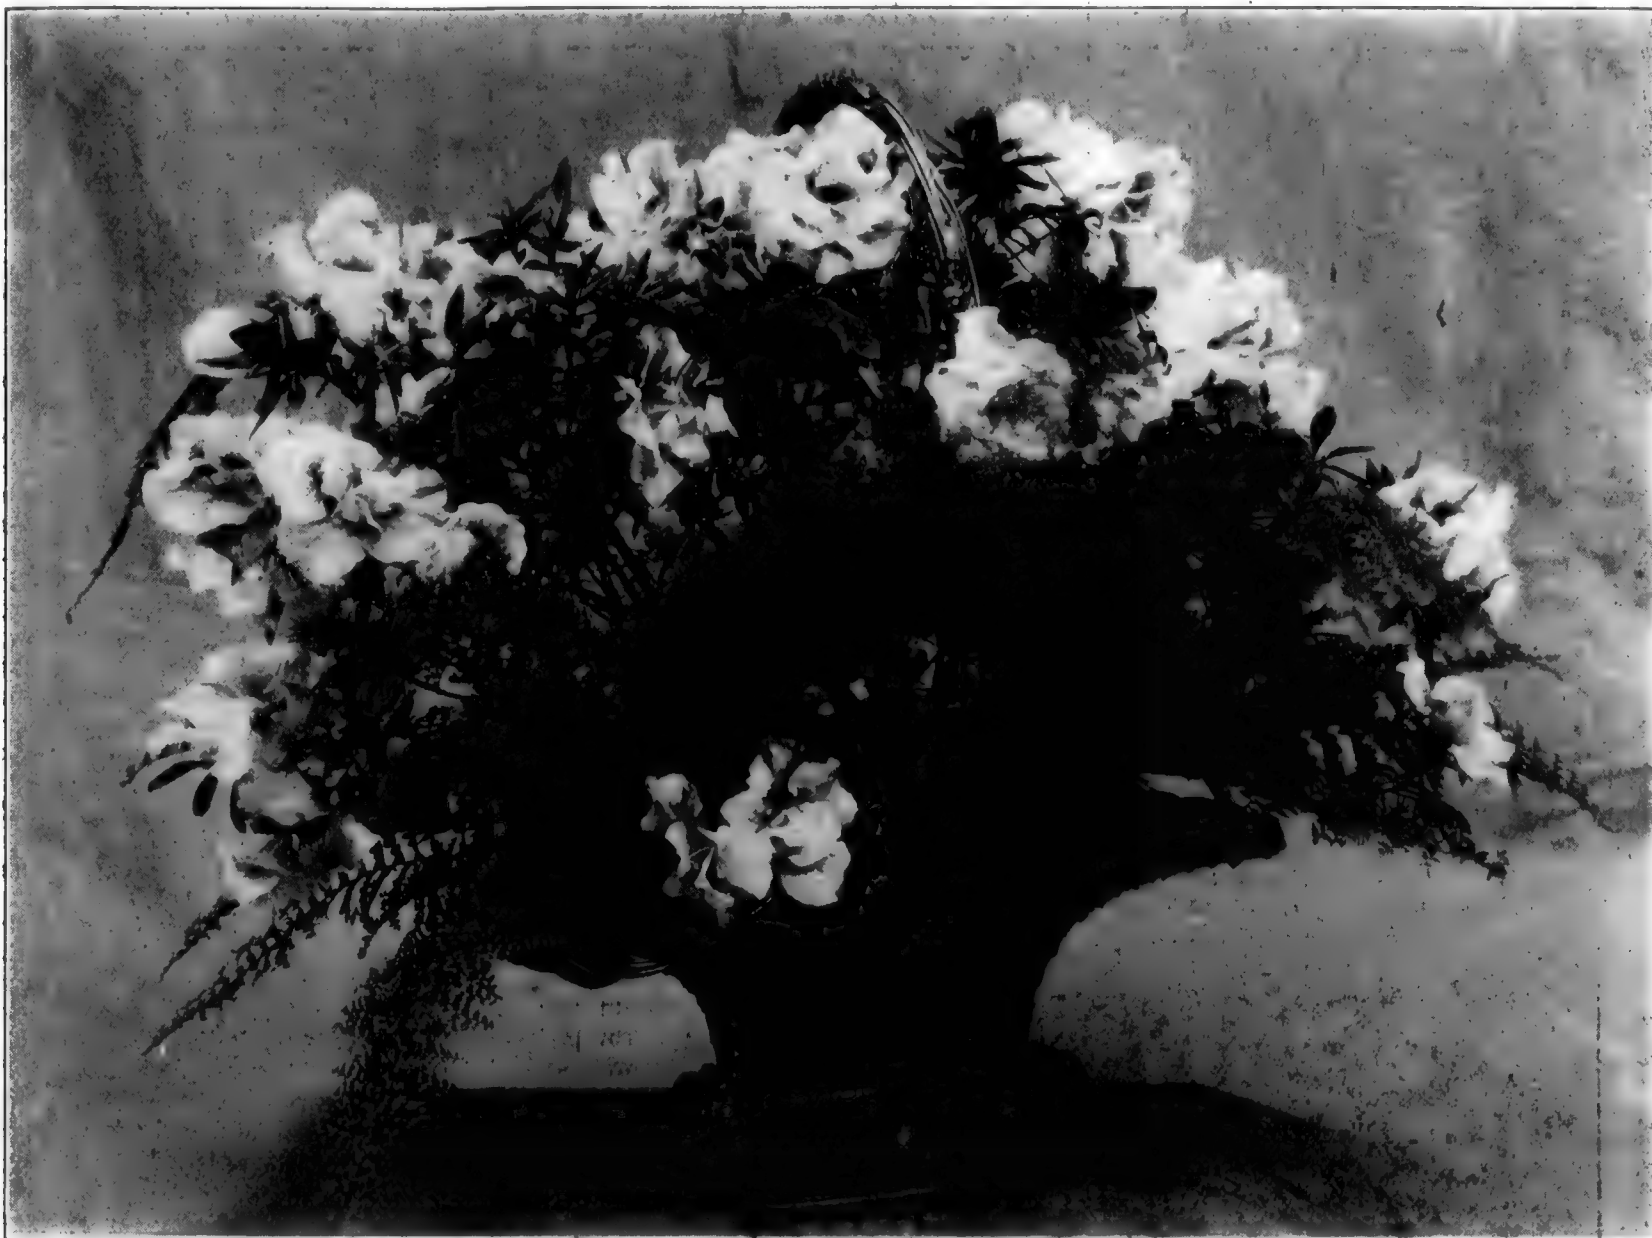

This blackboard also comes in handy at other seasons. If there is a change of prices during the regular season, it goes on the board, so every employee will know it. Or the nights on for the clerks are bulletined there; or the summer vacation schedule; indeed, the blackboard is so constantly in use and the things it tells are of so much interest and importance that every employee has learned to watch it, and watch it closely.

Delivery is Important

After you have made all arrangements for stock, for supplies and for the taking and filling of orders, there yet remains the vital matter of delivery. Where a week's business is to be delivered in one morning, it does not pay to leave anything to chance. Better plan the delivery just a little more carefully than you plan anything else.

There is no time where room is so valuable as at a holiday season, and there is no time during a holiday rush when room is so useful as when the hour for delivery is approaching. Set aside a space for the orders which can be delivered Saturday afternoon, and another for those which must be delivered Easter morning. Then subdivide these spaces into routes.

Did you ever go into the shipping department of a big express office? If you have, you may have noted that partitions have been built, like stalls, or the floor has been marked off in squares, or some other arrangement has been made for a special place to put the packages to go on each train. When train-time comes everybody about the place knows just what there is to go on it. If you adopt some similar scheme, each wagon will have everything that it should take, and nothing that some other wagon should have.

If you have an empty greenhouse, you can divide up the bench space for this purpose. Put a sign on one bench "South," and on another, "North." Make as many such divisions of your territory as is necessary to handle your business. Then, as each order is put up, it is placed at once in the space set apart for that route, and when all the orders are up there is no danger of any wagon starting out and leaving something behind that will then have to be sent by expensive special delivery.

Incidentally, see to it now that you have enough tags and also envelopes for customers' cards. Your order sheet ought to show who takes the order, who puts it up, whose card is to be attached, and who delivers, and there ought to be enough spirit in your employees so that each one will see that his own part is done correctly. All the time and effort spent in preparing to do business is wasted unless the orders are carefully filled and promptly delivered.

Plant orders are bulky and you will doubtless need extra delivery facilities. Arrange for them now. Get enough wagons so that you can get everything delivered by Sunday noon.

There is more individuality in the flower business than in a department store, but the florist will do a whole lot toward avoiding the annoyances if he will adopt the department stores' system for conducting the filling and delivery of orders.

AZALEAS FOR EASTER.

Basket Arrangements.

This year, of all years, the azaleas should be in perfect condition for Easter. So early a date leaves the growers no excuse for stock past its prime. While the great part of the azaleas still are of the close-cropped, round-headed style with which everyone, florist or customer, is so familiar, the days of the enormous specimen plants have pretty well passed, and in their stead there is a growing use for small and more irregularly grown plants which find their best use when made up in the popular baskets and plant hampers. There is nothing more serviceable or salable than the azalea when grown and handled in this way.

The illustration on this page shows how well the azalea is adapted to use in baskets. The receptacle in this case is one of the Florentine gold baskets, which last season were so expensive that only the leading stores could handle them. It was necessary for the retailer to ask $7.50 for this basket, while his price for the two azaleas which were in it was only $1.25 each! To a good many that would look as though the plants were embellishing the basket, rather than the receptacle, adding to the attractiveness of the product of nature, as all florists like to think should be the case. But it is not necessary to use a seven-dollar basket for an azalea. There are innumerable styles of chip and other baskets that the florist can buy for half a dollar, or even less, and which will enable him to make up his plant arrangements at prices which will make them sell like hot cakes.

Pottery and Pot Covers.

Some of the leading stores of late have used more pottery than baskets and have found the azalea one of the best of plants for sale planted in a great variety of unique receptacles. On page 33 two such combinations are illustrated. Some skill is required to choose the azalea, the receptacle and the ribbon for harmonious color combinations. In both the arrangements shown the planter combined in one case adiantum and in the other case small ferns to fill out the base of the azalea and conceal the bare stem. The stores that have had the greatest success with the use of these pottery affairs have acquired their stock a few pieces at a time, buying whenever they ran across a unique shape. By this means it has been possible to add much variety to the holiday display.

The Firefly azalea, and also Dr. Charles Enke, are among the handiest plants of which the average florist can have stock at Easter. With these small subjects an immense variety of arrangements can be made. The planter can use them in making up large baskets and hampers of mixed stock, or he can use them in such trifles as the neat little arrangement shown in the halftone printed on page 32. Here, we have a little braided basket with a handle made of red-barked twigs. In it there is one Firefly azalea, with some adiantum. The pussy willows add to the spring-like effect. If a little more money is to be asked, a ribbon may be added.

The most common way of showing the azalea is with the pot covered with crepe paper, Porto Rican or the newer and better soft "chiffon" mats. No store that makes any pretense of being in step with the times shows its Easter plants with bare pots. Of course, some of the store that does not carry a good stock of crepe papers, Porto Rican and chiffon mats, with ribbons and chiffons to go with them, is a long way behind the times.

THE READY SELLERS.

Moderate Priced Plant Arrangements.

Here and there, in the principal cities of the country, there is a retail flower store that is able to roll up a large volume of holiday business, offering to its customers nothing of popular price. But in the great majority of even the best metropolitan stores, the bulk of the sales are made on articles that sell at from $5 down. In the stores which cater to the middle classes of the big cities, and the stores of the smaller cities, these latter being so numerous that they handle by far the largest part of all the stock used at Easter, $5 is somewhere near the limit of price which can be obtained; anything valued above that figure is more for purposes of display than anything else. The articles which sell at from $2 to $3 are the ones that are sold in great often is asserted that there is little novelty, or too much sameness, in the stock that flower stores offer from season to season. If this is the case it shows a lack of versatility on the part of the florist. The variety of plant arrangements made possible by the ingenuity of the supply houses borders upon the infinite.

Order the Requisites at Once.

In case the retail florist has not yet provided for his Easter stock, he should lose no time in consulting the supply house from which he ordinarily purchases his requisites. The leading supply dealers have based a large part of their success upon their ability to comprehend the individual needs of their customers; in many cases the supply man is better able than the florist himself to tell what the florist can sell, and an extremely large mail order business now is done in baskets, plant boxes and dishes of one kind and another. The days have passed when a dealer in supplies would overstock his customer. The supply man recognizes that if the stock he passes on to the retailer does not go any farther, that is the end of that retailer's patronage. Load a retailer's shelves with unsalable baskets, and that is the end of that customer. On the other hand, send him only the things which he can sell readily and he will reorder time after time and leave the selection of the articles largely to the supply man. It is a case of inspiring confidence, and the leading supply houses have inspired confidence in the highest degree.

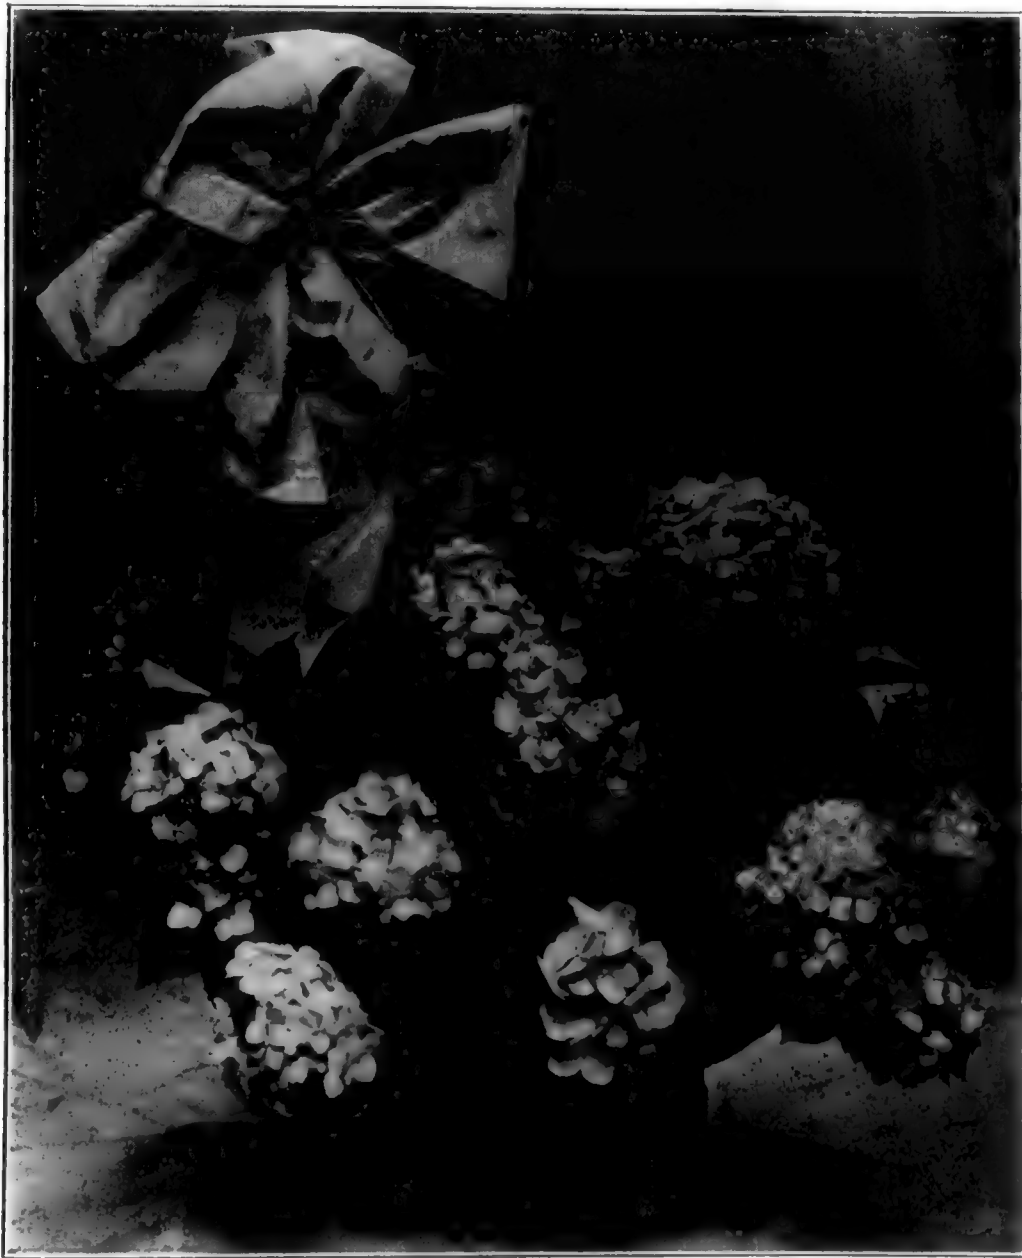

The buyer should make it plain that he wants a large variety of plant receptacles rather than a considerable number of a few patterns or styles. It is by buying only a few pieces of each style, more than by anything else, that variety is given to the Easter stock. Order three or six each of a dozen different styles, rather than a dozen of three or six styles. Then it is an unimaginative filler of baskets who cannot devise something for every taste.

A Table of Good Sellers.

The illustration on page 29 shows a counter of moderate priced plant arrangements that last Easter stood along one side of a leading Chicago store. This is a store in which many plant arrangements are sold at from $10 to $15, but the display of cheaper articles is nevertheless one of the most important features of the holiday arrangements. There was nothing on this table that was priced above $5 and most of the articles were around $3. No matter what the customer came to buy, hardly one left the store without having selected something from this display. In addition to the baskets, no two alike, there were a large number of small brass and china receptacles, each one planted with a single small plant. Some of these sold as low as $1 each and large numbers were disposed of. Several fern dishes, filled, for table use were included in the display and sold well.

Sales were made direct from the stock on display, the articles selected being tagged and set away for delivery when wanted, the working force replenishing the stock as fast as the salesmen could use it.

In the arrangement of these inexpensive, salable articles good taste is as important as it is in making up the more valuable baskets. Simply because a thing is designed to sell at a popular price is no reason to slight the work. The aver-decorators overdo the dressing and obscure rather than enhance the beauty of their plants, but, happily, their number is not great. Just as people of cultivated taste stay away from the places where the plants are shown in bare pots, so do they pass by the store that looks as though its main object is the sale of mats and ribbon. Too much of a good thing is as bad as none at all, but the est numbers, and where these are tastefully made up there seems little limit to the business which can be done.

While it pays to have in the window, and in the store, a few arrangements of the better class, just as the department store puts its best goods in the window, special attention should be paid to providing a large and varied stock of the moderate priced plant arrangements. It age florist wants it understood that he is charging for his artistic ability as well as for the stock used. If anything, do just a little better work on your popular priced articles than you do on the high-priced ones; your customers will appreciate your services and as appreciation grows patronage will increase.

The Use of Ribbon.

No matter what the line of endeavor, the tendency always is to go to extremes. This has been the case in the use of ribbon on plant arrangements. Recognizing it as a good thing, some of the retailers who set the fashion have so beribboned their productions that recently there has appeared a tendency to go to the extreme in the other direction, and use almost no ribbon at all.

But those who have decried the too lavish use of the product of the looms, have found by experience that the judicious use of ribbon does more than almost anything else to add to the attractiveness of any otherwise well conceived plant arrangement. Take, for instance, the illustration on page 28. Here is an exquisite basket, simple of outline, of a quality which would seem to require the minimum of embellishment. In it are pink tinted hydrangeas arranged by the hand of a man who knew how to fill a basket for the best effect. But it would be almost nothing at all without the big bow of pink ribbon on the handle; just that touch is needed to make the basket sell.

There is hardly any part of the work of the retail florist which, better than his use of ribbon, shows his perception of color. Those who themselves have little of the artistic taste in matters of color recognize at a glance the work of the one who is master of this art. Not only does color count, but the size and style of knot and its location are important factors in achieving the right result. Every man to his trade, but don't let the man who knows the use of ribbon spend his time waiting on customers when the plant arrangements are being made up. There is more than money in his work; there is reputation for your store.

PRIMULAS AT EASTER.

Primulas are so commonly used at Christmas that some stores try to get along without them at Easter, but the primula is so useful a subject that it is difficult to find any substitute for it. Note, for instance, how well it looks in the illustration on page 26. The grass-covered box on the right, it seems, hardly could be so well filled with anything else. Then there is the basket-like piece of dark green pottery at the left. What better could there be for it than the primulas and the Dutch hyacinths? Nothing taller would fill the bill, and nothing less well flowered would look half so well.

The primula might well be known as the florists' friend. Easy to grow and easy to sell, there is no plant flowering under glass which could less readily be spared from the greenhouses of the country florist who grows for his own retail trade.

DISPLAY PIECES.

The illustration on page 35 is from a photograph of an Easter basket arranged by the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago. Not every store has the class of trade which calls for such arrangements, but every store should have in its Easter display some few pieces that are of the best quality it knows how to produce. While the Wienhoeber store caters to the wealthiest trade in Chicago, even there it is found that the bulk of the sales at a holiday are made on the popular priced articles. The large basket shown in this illustration was intended as a display piece, one of several used in the decoration of the store. This is one of the verdigris green, or copper green baskets, the coloring of which is one of the best things the supply makers have yet done. The gray-green combines beautifully with almost any Easter plant. For this combination azaleas, roses, lilies and adiantum were used, with a ribbon to add a finishing touch.

HYDRANGEAS IN BASKETS.

The illustration on page 34 shows a simple little plant arrangement which proved an extremely good seller last Easter. It is a hydrangea in a pale pink chip basket, with a big bow of pink chiffon on the handle of the basket. The hydrangeas used were quite small, but they each carried a couple of good heads of flowers. Those that were on the pinkish order combined best with the baskets. It is a touch that is worth while to take out a little of the soil from the pot, if the pot is put in the basket, or to finish off if the plant is transferred to the tin pan in the basket, with a little live sphagnum. The covering of the soil is worth more than the time it takes to do it.

RECEPTACLES FOR BULB STOCK.

There is an endless variety of receptacles in which the Easter tulips may be planted at a profit to the seller. On page 31 there is an illustration showing the tulips planted in a green-stained box which is obtainable in many sizes and which goes well with tulips of almost any color. Then there is the line of boxes, square or oblong, that apparently are made of the same material as picture frames; these are extremely useful for use with tulips. In addition, any collection of odd pieces of pottery would show many low, round shapes that will be useful for this purpose.

At the left in the illustration on page 31 is a basket filled with adiantum and Dutch hyacinths. Peeping through the foliage you can see the cover of the basket. A good many retailers would tie a bow of ribbon on the handle, but the cover adds to the ease of filling, for the arrangement is therefore naturally one-sided; it is intended to be viewed from one direction only.

The bulb stock always should be in low receptacles, and the boxes or baskets should stand where your customers will look down upon them—there's a whole lot in the point of view. Don't put your stock too high if you want your customers to see the most favorable aspect of it.

LILIES LIKE LADIES.

Did it ever occur to you how like women are flowers, and especially the lilies? Beautiful as nature made them, the better you dress them the finer they are.

Take the lily in the clay pot it flowered in and one's customers must needs "look worth? Well, there are ten open flowers and ten buds. They're good lilies, all right, but at a quarter apiece for flowers and buds $5 would be the price—and 25 cents per flower is all you can get so long as you sell by the flower. It's when you dress your plants in the latest mode that you get away from the "per piece" way of selling and begin to charge for your skill as well as for your stock and your work.

As a matter of fact, these twenty lilies in the gold basket and with the big bow of ribbon were sold last Easter for $12. It was in one of the leading stores in a big city, and the retailer said he only made his usual margin, counting everything, but just the same he made at least twice as much money on the sale as he would have made if he had sold the lilies alone, in their red clay pot. And he sold them easier—quicker, and more of them.

A plain woman well gowned gets more attention than a pretty one, plainly dressed. And it's so with plants. Fix them up and they look as though they must be right, all right, cost included. Step into one of those stores where they

WEATHER POSSIBILITIES.

The weather, always a prime factor in the holiday business, is of more importance this Easter than usual, because of the unusually early date of the flower festival. It would naturally be supposed that because of the early date stock would be late, and bright, warm weather a necessity. But such is not always the case. While some growers of lilies undoubtedly will be late, a great many have, in their anxiety to be in time with their crops, got them along to a point where bright, warm spring days mean more trouble than cool or even wintry weather would cause. Carnation crops in some localities will be past their heaviest if the weather is too warm the next few days, and roses will be soft with too much heat.

The weather bureau at Washington now makes prognostications for a week in advance and those growers who are well along with their crops will be glad to know that the government thinks a cool wave will pass over the country the latter part of the present week, beginning about the middle of the week in the extreme west and advancing thence to the Atlantic coast, reaching there by the early part of next week. After a day or two of cold weather the government looks for spring, which will bring a good cut just right for Easter.

BANKRUPTS MUST TALK.

In a United States court in New York a decision has just been handed down that will be of much interest to all those who have had the common experience of seeing debtors go into bankruptcy and suffer an almost total loss of memory. Times without number it has happened that a debtor failed while his creditors knew positively that his assets had been sequestered, but were unable to prove it save by the debtor's own admissions, and when cornered under examination he would not be able to remember what became of goods or money. Now it is established that such a forgetful one can be jailed for contempt of court. He must answer.

This decision was rendered in the case of Schulmans & Goldstein, bankrupts. They failed July 18, 1908, owing about $38,000. Samuel Schulmans, one of the bankrupts, was called upon to testify before the referee to explain an enormous shrinkage in his assets. Schulmans refused to make any explanation, but admitted that upon the filing of the bankruptcy petition he went to Norfolk, Va., and sold a considerable portion of assets which were there, and professed himself unable to account for the proceeds.

The referee, upon the application of counsel for the Merchants' Protective Association, made a certificate to the effect that Schulmans was committing perjury in deliberately withholding facts from his creditors which must have been within his knowledge. Upon this certificate Judge Holt ordered Schulmans' arrest and committed him to jail for six months for contempt of court. Schulmans took an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals and Judge Coxe has just rendered an opinion, concurred in by Judges Lcomb and Noyes, that the commitment for contempt was proper.

The importance of this decision is that it holds that a bankrupt who commits perjury in withholding facts from his creditors as to the disposition of his assets is guilty not only of perjury, a up, not down" if they are to admire; the effect is something that of a really pretty face on an unkempt girl. All that is missing is clothes, and the ability to get them on right.

As "the apparel oft bespeaks the man," so does the dressing up bespeak the selling value of the plant. Take a look at the lily on this page. What's it sell just flowers. Then drop in at one where they sell arrangement as well as flowers. It won't take you long to see which gets the money—and the satisfaction without which business is mere drudgery.

Yes. By all means dress your lilies as well as you know how—and give your wife her share of the profits.

Give Novelty to the Easter Stock by Planting the Flowering Bulbs in Different Ways.

crime which requires indictment and trial, but that such a bankrupt is guilty also of contempt of court, for which he can be summarily and immediately punished without being entitled to a jury trial.

The testimony of the bankrupt upon which this decision was rendered consisted mainly of answers of, "I don't remember" and "I don't understand," to all questions as to his assets and liabilities and as to the disposition of his property.

The effect of this decision is to enforce effective administration of the bankruptcy law, to put bankrupts in the position of being obliged to disclose to their creditors the true cause of their bankruptcy, and in default of such discovery it is acknowledged and settled that bankrupts can be summarily committed to jail for contempt of court.

FERTILIZER FOR REX BEGONIA.

What is the best fertilizer to use for the Rex begonia, and what quantity should be used? S. N. C.

The best and safest fertilizer for Begonia Rex is liquid cow or sheep manure, applied once every week or ten days. Soot water is an excellent food also. It will be safer for you to use liquid animal manures than chemical fertilizers. C.

WHITE FLY.

Having noticed frequent inquiries in the REVIEW as to treatment for white fly, I think the following will be of interest: Persistent fumigating with tobacco for a week or ten days and then regularly once a week will, I think, do away with the white fly. It did for me. For years they were a nuisance to me, making their home on pelargoniums, but did not seem to settle on anything else. I got out of tobacco stems during mum growing time and before I could get any, the mums were a sight with black fly. It takes about two weeks of almost constant smoking to clean them out. That was three or four years ago. No white fly since till this winter. The house was not smoked since last fall, except what leaked through from the carnation house. WM. CHISHOLM.

SEASONABLE ADVICE.

Preparing for Easter.

How easy it is at this time of the year to allow the temperature of the violet houses to run up too high, either at some time during the day or at night! This is brought forcibly to mind by a recent inquiry. Keep the houses cool, clean, airy, and watered with fresh water, and of this much more can be used from now on.

The near approach of Easter makes one think of what he can do to increase his trade. Well, one good way is always to keep just a little ahead of your customers. Of course, if you have a large city trade, you can adopt any or all of the latest fads or frills in accessories, but in the smaller towns and villages one must closely study his patrons, their likes and dislikes, their pocketbooks and about how much they will stand that is new and novel—at least to them. That is why I say, always keep a little ahead of them. Lead them to expect always to find you up-to-date and reasonable. You can get people upstairs a step at a time easily enough, but if you try to have them get up with one or two steps, you will find few that are able. As a result, they refuse to try, but will go up somebody else's stairs. Therefore, while you undoubtedly ought to get a better price for your flowers than you do, educate your customers to appreciate quality and lead them to advance gradually from year to year.

Remember that there is no flower grown that cannot be improved and have its beauty enhanced by a proper setting; so I say, study all the accessories that the wholesale house offers, selecting those that you are sure will please your trade, and then use them to their best advantage, remembering that if the right ones are used it will be the violets that will get the credit, as you will find few people that will realize that half of the superior looks of the flowers comes from this proper setting. Of course, I am not expecting that you will use poor flowers and get good results, but you can make good ones look twice as good. Take care, however, not to overdo this, or the attention will be drawn from the flowers themselves.

Packing and Delivering.

As to packing for delivery, if your trade will not take the fancy boxes—although I doubt this—be sure that whatever you use is neat and perfectly odorless. Never allow a violet box to stand where it can absorb an odor of any kind, not even the odor of roses or carnations. Remember that people buy violets, first and last, for the odor, and anything foreign, even though not bad of itself, is bad when out of place, as it surely is in a bunch of violets.

There is another thing that the dealer in a small place may thoughtlessly overlook, and that is the looks of his delivery boy. True, you cannot afford to keep him in livery, like your city brothers, but you can see to it that he is always neat and trim, a credit both to himself and your establishment, and one that your customer is not ashamed to see coming to her front door. This is a bit of good advertising, too, for if Mrs. A. sees him frequently delivering flowers on Mrs. B.'s doorstep, she naturally wants to have Mrs. C. see him at her own door, and so it goes.

What a winter this has been! And yet it has not been without its advantages, as so much and long-continued cold weather has made it possible for everyone who has violets here, in Florida, to have them in large quantities and of superior quality. In fact, I have never seen them so good before, during the ten years in which I have been spending the winters here. They have bloomed so freely, and of such good color, that they have been a real satisfaction, and I think, from their behavior, that probably we could have had good sweet peas also, if we had started them. Ordinarily, however, the sweet peas are a dismal failure here, and who could tell that we were going to have so cold a winter?

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Plants.

But a comparatively few days now remain until Easter. Any backward flowering plants must be hurried. So far March has been a pleasant month, but the latter half may prove different from the first half. Every day with sunshine counts. We can use fire heat all we want, but it fails to send things along like a clear, sunshiny day. Laggard lilies should be given a night temperature of 70 to 75 degrees and frequent sprayings overhead. It will be unwise to force roses, azaleas and other flowering plants in this way. We hope you have started them sufficiently early so that late hard forcing can be dispensed with and a gradual lowering of temperatures given instead. If the weather is bright, be sure to keep Dutch bulbous plants cool and well shaded, especially tulips. The same applies to the general run of flowering plants, if they have been properly hardened.

We are liable to have cold, frosty winds for Easter, and plants will require careful wrapping. Should we, perchance, get balmy weather, it will mean a big saving, but it is well to be fully prepared for cold weather. It is disagreeable to have complaints from your customers of frozen plants, and for this there is no necessity whatever. Be sure that all pots, tubs and boxes are perfectly clean and never send plants away which are dry at the root. In the case of ericas, acacias, ramblers, astilbes, or in fact almost any Easter plants, a good drying out while in bloom is practically their finish. Always tell your customers to water their purchases regularly and there is then less likelihood of your becoming the target of censorious critics.

Outdoor Sweet Peas.

Just as soon as frost leaves the ground and it has dried out sufficiently to be plowed or spaded without being pasty, the sweet peas should be sown. The earlier you sow them, the better flowers you will have. Never mind what pessimists may say about the necessity of waiting until the soil becomes warm. The sweet peas will be making splendid root growth in the cool, moist earth before any tops appear. A month later the shoots will appear while the plants have yet made hardly any roots, and common sense will tell which sowing will give you the best returns. One generous sowing of sweet peas should suffice for the season. When planted later they lack the vigor of the early sowing, and if properly cared for there is no earthly reason why they should not bloom satisfactorily through the whole season.

Well manured and deep soil, in which sweet peas can root deeply, is the best for continuous flowering, but in sandy soil, liberally enriched and mulched with old manure, seaweed or some similar material, they will bloom surprisingly well. Sow thinly. Nine-tenths of the sweet pea growers use a pound of seed where an ounce would suffice. Have the courage to thin severely if your seedlings come up thickly. Cover the seeds two to two and one-half inches deep and do not earth them up as they grow, as often advised, unless you want to lose many of your plants from stem-rot. Persistent cultivation, watering in dry weather, a suitable mulch, keeping seed pods carefully removed and a hosing on warm summer evenings will all help to make sweet pea culture a success.

It is unwise to grow mixed sweet peas. These are not wanted in the markets, nor does it pay to handle more than a small number of varieties. Seedsmen's lists are bewildering and should be well boiled down. The following will be found strictly first-class and among the best of their respective colors: Dorothy Eckford, white, still the best of its color; White Spencer; Mrs. Routzahn Spencer or Lady M. Ormsby Gore, blush; Countess of Spencer and Prima Donna, pink; Miss Willmott or Helen Lewis, orange pink; Helen Pierce, blue and white; King Edward VII, scarlet; Navy Blue or Captain of the Blues, Spencer, dark blue; Lady Grisell Hamilton or Frank Dolby, lavender. If restricted to half a dozen varieties, try Dorothy Eckford, Frank Dolby, Countess of Spencer, Miss Willmott, Helen Pierce and King Edward VII. If you may wish to try a few of the kinds of more recent introduction, here are a few of the best: Asta Ohn Spencer, Miriam Beaver, Evelyn Hemus, W. T. Hutchins and Marie Corelli.

Hotbeds.

Greenhouses are now full to overflowing. Easter will give us some much needed bench space, but it is possible to utilize some of the vacant coldframe sashes to good advantage now. It is too early to move many plants into frames, but if a foot of warm manure is firmly tramped in these frames and a layer of fine ashes spread on the top, you can place your flats of carnations here and they will grow just as well as in the houses, and probably better. You can root your violet stock also in them, while for any of the hardier annuals, to say nothing of vegetable plants, these frames present many advantages. See that all sashes are well glazed. Cover with mats on cold nights. Leave on a chink of air at the back, to prevent steaminess, and water carefully during sunless spells of weather. To some, hotbeds are back numbers, but try a few sashes and note how much better the plants thrive in them than in the houses. In early April the geraniums can be placed in frames, and with a gentle bottom heat and the pots partly plunged, they will grow in a manner to amaze you.

Marguerites.

Well flowered marguerite plants, both of the yellow and white varieties, are always popular at Easter. Be sure they never suffer for want of water. They are thirsty subjects and the pots need filling almost every time you use the hose. This is a good time to take a batch of cuttings to grow along through the summer, for flowering early next winter. These plants will, of course, show a tendency to flower all the time, but pinch out all buds as they appear. Their first really satisfactory growth will not come until the cool autumn nights arrive. There is a big demand for marguerite flowers in April, May and even June. If you want flowers then, your plants should either be in quite large pots or planted in some vacant bench. If in the latter, you are bound to get fine stems. Boxes six inches deep and shallow benches produce the finest marguerites we have ever seen.

Azaleas Planted in Oddly Shaped Pieces of Pottery Are Good Sellers at Easter.

Annual Climbers.

Country florists always have a call for climbing plants at bedding-out time and, if these are not yet sown, there is still ample time to do so and work up a nice stock by the middle of May. A few desirable plants to grow are: Cobaea scandens, Ipomoea grandiflora alba (moonflower) and the Heavenly Blue variety, Kenilworth Ivy (Linaria Cymbalaria); Tropaeolum Canariense, Humulus Japonicus (Japanese hop), tall nasturtiums in variety; Cypress vine (Ipomoea Quamoclit) and Thunbergia alata and aurantiaca.

Brief Reminders.

If you have not yet put in any cuttings of rambler roses, take some half ripened wood and insert in sand, two eyes to a cutting. These will make nice plants before fall.

Keep the propagating benches full. Cuttings are now being freely produced on bedding plants. Keep them well watered and do not allow them to remain too long in the sand.

Do not prune hardy roses with the arrival of the first bluebirds and robins, except in the southern states. It is too early to do any pruning yet. April is sufficiently early in the north.

Keep the young cyclamens well up to the light and scratch over the flats and pots frequently.

Make a successful sowing of asters and prick out the early ones in flats as soon as sufficiently large.

Longiflorums for Memorial day will be all right if three to six inches high now and will not require any forcing.

Look over hydrangeas for Memorial day and June trade. As soon as Easter trade is over they will need bench space vacated.

A batch of gladioli can be planted outdoors as soon as frost is out of the ground. Any montbretias carried over winter in sheds or cellars can also be planted.

Uncover outdoor plants cautiously. We are likely to have some cold, frosty days yet, which will work havoc on many plants too hastily exposed.

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

What would be the latest date to pot into 4-inch pots several thousand Doyle geraniums from 2-inch pots? I will have to purchase these plants after Easter, owing to crowded houses at the present time. I want these geraniums for Memorial day.

H. J. H.

If the plants, when you receive them, are well rooted in 2-inch pots, you can pot them at once into 3-inch pots. If they are not well supplied with roots, let them remain in the smaller pots for ten days or so. Your plants should be well rooted in 3-inch pots by April 10 or 15, when you can give them a shift into 4-inch pots. The forty days or so remaining before Memorial day should suffice to establish them well in these pots.

REDDISH GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

We are expressing to you a geranium that is typical of the greater part of our stock, which seems to be badly affected in some way. These geraniums are in a house which is run at a temperature of 54 to 56 degrees at night and they are set on good, clean cinders from soft coal. The house receives plenty of ventilation whenever possible.

H. S. W.

There was little or nothing wrong with the geranium plant forwarded. It had the appearance of having been grown in a rather cool temperature, causing the leaves to take on that reddish appearance. As the weather gets warmer and the sun brighter, they will lose this color, and their growth will be more rapid. Rub out the young tips, to induce more bushy growth, but do not cut back too hard after this date, or they may come into bloom too late for spring trade. Your soil seems a trifle light. A heavy soil will induce more bloom. A. F. J. B.

PLANT FOR NAME.

I am sending under separate cover blossoms and foliage of a geranium. Please tell me if I have something new. If not, can you tell me the name of my geranium? This plant has had little attention paid to it. It is growing in the same soil it was potted in last fall, and has never had any fertilizer of any kind. P. M. F.

The flowers arrived crushed and withered, entirely beyond recognition. Send another specimen truss, with foliage, in a light wood or tin box. Wrap the bot-

Harrison geraniums advertised, I must have some of the same color if I can.

H. E. Y.

The old J. J. Harrison is not much grown nowadays. Alphonse Ricard, bright scarlet; John Doyle, rich scarlet; S. A. Nutt, deep scarlet with maroon shading, and General Grant, vermilion scarlet, are one and all excellent bedders, also making fine pot plants. C.

STEVIA'S AFTERMATH.

I enclose a sample of some flowers from a stevia plant that has been continuously in bloom since December. The stems are not as long as they were at first, but there are more blooms than there were and it is making a fine growth. Is this anything out of the ordinary, or did you ever know of this as a continuous bloomer? Heretofore I never was able to get but one crop from stevia. E. F.

Stevia serrata will flower over quite a long period, but after the main crop of spikes are cut any flowers coming are

S. A. F. BOARD MEETS.

Midlenten Session Held at Rochester.

In anticipation of the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held in the city of Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910, the executive board met in the Hotel Seneca, Rochester, on Saturday, March 12.

The following officers and directors were present: President F. R. Pierson, Vice-President F. W. Vick, Secretary H. B. Dorner, Treasurer W. F. Kasting; John Young, Eugene Dailedouze, W. J. Vesey, George Asmus, W. N. Rudd, Robert Craig and J. A. Valentine, directors.

The meeting was called to order by President Pierson and immediately went into executive session. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were submitted and approved.

In the afternoon the committee inspected Convention Hall, where many of the sessions of the annual convention will be held and where all the exhibits will be staged.

Monday's sessions were devoted to the appointing of committees, discussing various features of the program, investigation of hotel accommodations and facilities for headquarters.

In addition to the regular routine business, the following committees were appointed:

Superintendent of Trade Exhibit, C. H. Vick.

Advisory Committee, F. W. Vick, A. H. Salter, W. C. Barry.

Press and Music Committee, F. W. Vick, W. F. Kasting, George B. Hart.

Convention Sports, John Westcott, A. F. Vick, R. G. Salter, J. M. Keller.

The last session of the committee was held on Tuesday morning, and at its close President Pierson stated that he was much pleased with the work accomplished, and believed that the Rochester convention would surpass those of previous years in attendance, in interesting discussions, and in the beauty and value of the exhibits.

The following resolution was adopted:

The Executive Board of the Society of American Florists desires to place on record their appreciation of all the courtesies which have been shown them by the Florists' Association of Rochester, and to recognize the spirit of cooperation shown by the members thereof. We can confidently look forward to an unusually successful convention next August. We recognize the liberality of the Chamber of Commerce in placing at the disposal of the society, free of charge, the finest hall we have ever had for our meetings and exhibitions.

We have enjoyed a most pleasant time at the banquet and have been delighted with the cordial expressions of the various local speakers and will leave for our homes with the conviction that the earnest workers of Rochester will do their full share in making the convention of 1910 a complete success.

The Banquet.

Monday evening, March 14, the second annual banquet of the Rochester Florists' Association was held at the Powers hotel, the officers and directors of the S. A. F. being the guests of honor. Nearly 150 members of the association, DOUBLE RED GERANIUMS.

Will you please let me know the name of a geranium that has the same color as J. J. Harrison? As I do not see any comparatively small and short-stemmed and would not pay to bunch for market. After its regular blooming season people want other flowers for a change.

accompanied by their wives and friends, gathered at 7 o'clock and enjoyed a social hour, after which the large banquet hall was made to ring with popular songs and local hits. The postprandial program was as follows:

Toastmaster.....E. S. Osborne
"My fairy lord, this must be done with haste,
For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast."

TOASTS.

The S. of A. F.....F. R. Pierson
"A man of sovereign parts he is esteemed."
The Convention.....W. N. Rudd
"This gentleman is happily arrived,
My mind presumes, for his own good and ours."
The Flower City.....W. C. Barry
"There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple."
"Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded, Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs."
The Ladies.....Hon. W. J. Vesey
"Most lovelie was she to behold:
Her hair was like to sunn litt golde;
As blue as heaven her eye."
The Flower Show.....Charles H. Vick
"We number nothing that we spend for you:
Our duty is so rich, so infinite,
That we may do it still without account."
The Man that Holds the Bag.....Wm. F. Kasting
"Thy charge Exactly is performed."
The Retailer.....J. A. Valentine
"Be merry and employ your chiefest thoughts."
The Carnation.....H. B. Dorner
"Who can paint like nature?"
The Rose.....George Asmus
"..... the dainty rose,
The queen of every one."

Mr. Osborne, of the Charlton Nursery Co., filled the position of toastmaster most acceptably. The Fifty-fourth Regiment Orchestra furnished music during the evening. The committee in charge of the banquet included George B. Hart, E. P. Wilson and E. S. Osborne.

THE MARKET FOR GLASS.

One of the largest dealers in window glass in the United States says that jobbers recently have advanced their prices five per cent in anticipation of a like increase to be made by the manufacturers April 1 and that those well informed in the business look for another advance of a similar amount to be made about April 15. The price of greenhouse glass now is at least fifty per cent higher than it was during the days of the depression in the industry and predictions freely are made that the price will advance steadily as the time approaches for the annual summer shut-down in the hand factories.

BIRCH FOR BENCH POSTS.

On page 27 of the REVIEW for March 3, I noticed an inquiry about the durability of white birch wood for bench posts and I thought the following information might be useful:

Although birch is one of the handiest and best of woods, it is, perhaps, the quickest to decay in unfavorable conditions, such as it would have to contend with in greenhouse construction. A birch tree cut down or blown down in the woods will decay quicker than any other wood. Spruce or hemlock would be much more satisfactory and easier to work with.

WM. CHISHOLM.

A FINE VARIEGATED FERN.

A correspondent in the REVIEW of March 3 incorrectly refers to Blechnum speciosum as being one of the favorite ferns in the collection of J. F. Huss, gardener for J. J. Goodwin, at Hartford, Conn. Mr. Huss is quoted as saying that this species of fern becomes prettily variegated with age and that he has a large assortment of the plants. In pointing out this error, Mr. Huss writes:

"The variety I did refer to was Asplenium Goringianum Japonicum pictum, which is one of the most beautiful of the hardy, variegated ferns. Another fine Japanese sort is Lastrea aristata variegata, but it is not quite so hardy as the asplenium. Still, this lastrea has passed through the last two winters unharmed with me. I wish to state that this particular asplenium, if raised from spores, will not become variegated the first year, but will do so the second year and will present a fine appearance, the beautiful rosy center blending charmingly with the silvery gray of the rest. The lastrea shows its yellow variation in the second and third leaflets."

DELPHINIUM BELLADONNA

J. D. Eisele, vice-president of the Henry A. Dreer Co., of Philadelphia, is justly proud of his success in the propagation of Delphinium Belladonna. It has been the habit of the growers in this country to depend on Europe for their stock of this beautiful variety of larkspur, with the result of much annoyance and loss from winter-killed stock. Last spring Mr. Eisele decided to propagate his own Delphinium Belladonna. In the early fall, Mr. Strohlein pointed out a splendid patch of this delphinium at Locust Farm. They have survived the winter in splendid shape, promising better stock than could be obtained from the European product.

Speaking of this delphinium, Mr. Eisele said that when planted early it would bloom continuously throughout the summer, giving a turquoise blue flower on long stems, invaluable to the florist for cutting.

Delphinium Belladonna has been prized for its lawn decorative effect, but its possibilities as a cut flower are not generally known.

A READER'S COMMENTS.

Replying to the question asked in a recent REVIEW, white birch lumber if used in greenhouse construction will last just one year; this wood must be kept perfectly dry, and you can't do it in our business.

About growing Sprengeri from seed: I picked the seeds and washed them free from pulp, then sowed at once and had a quick come-up; not one failed to germinate; it was just as simple as possible.

I have sprinkled crude oil on my greenhouse benches for some fifteen years, with no after-effects on the stock; the benches are still good, though the headers are not.

THE AMERICAN

ROSE SOCIETY

The New York Convention.

The eleventh annual meeting of the American Rose Society is in progress this week at New York. The Rose Society always has been fortunate in its places of meeting, but never has had a finer location than this year. The American Museum of Natural History is one of the monumental structures of the metropolis and affords a setting in a measure similar to that which the exhibition had when it met in the Art Institute at Chicago, except that much more room is available. No admission fee is charged at the Museum, and the public is admitted to the rose show without cost, resulting in a much larger attendance than usual.

The exhibition was staged Wednesday afternoon, March 16, and everything was in perfect readiness at the hour set for the formal opening to the public. The heavily supplied condition of all cut flower markets has operated to the advantage of the society in that exhibits are more numerous than they otherwise would be. It goes without saying that the stock shown is of superlative quality—no rose grower who ever has attended one of the national rose exhibitions would think of putting up anything that fell short of the very highest quality. As last year, White Killarney is the feature of the show, the pink variety being the only rose in any way comparing with it in finish or in the interest of the trade and the public.

To F. R. Pierson fell the major portion of the work of preparation for the show and convention. When it is said that he threw his undivided interest into the work, nothing need be added as to the results—he always gets them. Joseph A. Manda, manager of the exhibition, also has worked tirelessly and handled everything in the most satisfactory manner. Held at the same time and place, the Horticultural Society of New York has a successful spring show, classes being provided for all seasonable lines of plants and cut flowers, and the classes well filled.

Business Sessions.

The annual business meeting of the Rose Society was scheduled for Wednesday evening, March 16, at the American Museum of Natural History, but was postponed to 10 a. m. next day, when it was called to order by President Poehlmann, of Chicago. While the attendance was not extremely large, it was rather better than has usually been the case at meetings of the society. All the regulars were there and many rose growers from the great producing section around New York who have not been present since the society last met in that city. After brief introductory remarks, President Poehlmann presented his annual address, which was as follows:

President Poehlmann's Address.

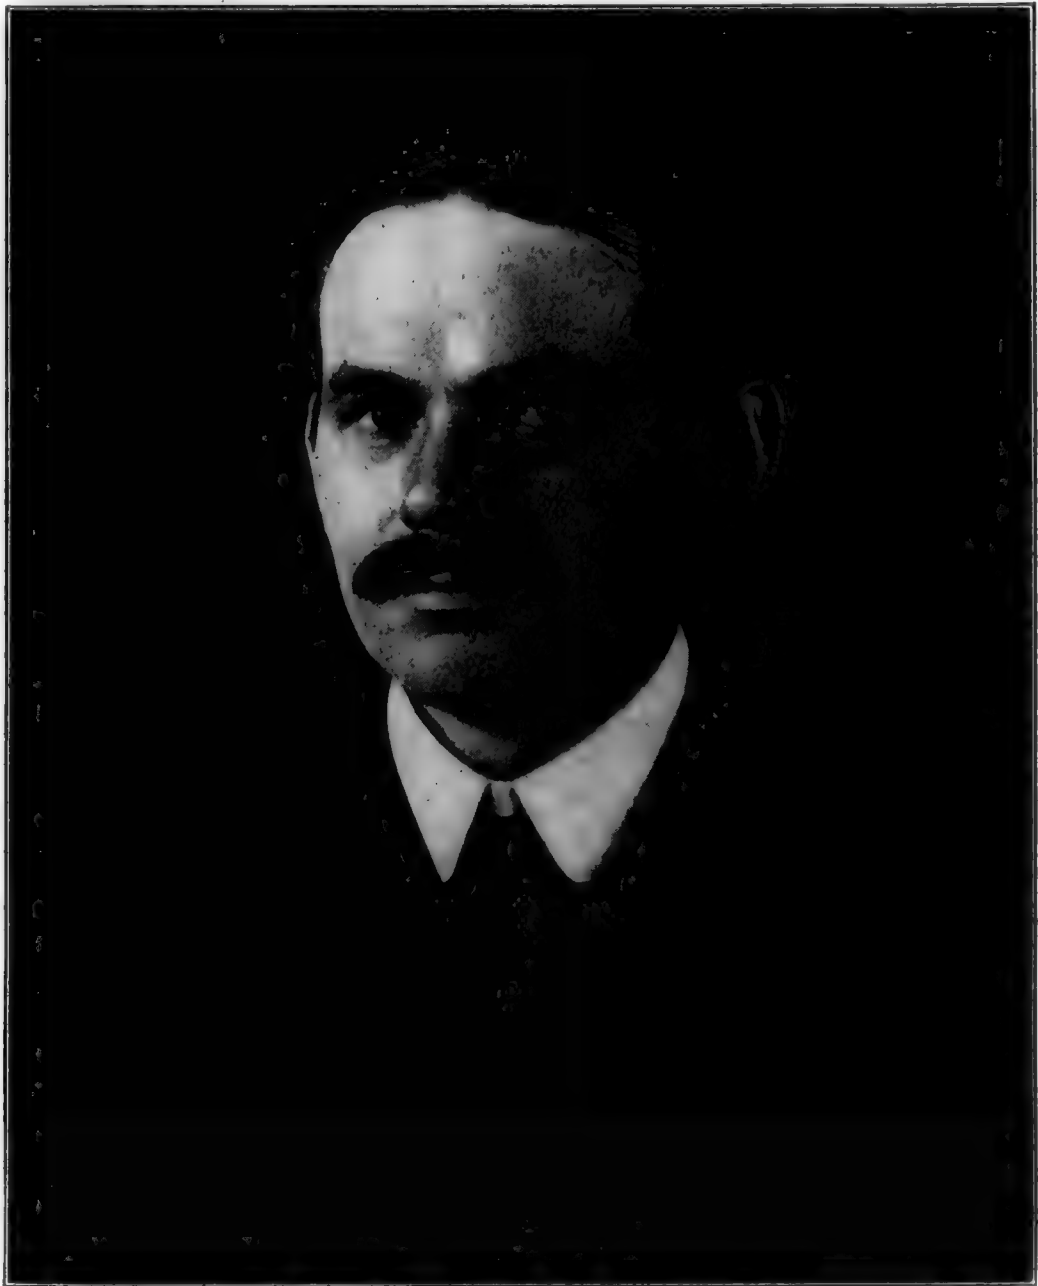

It affords me great pleasure to address this large gathering, which may be safely considered the backbone of our society; also those members of the Horticultural Society of New York who are willing and anxious to assist us, as is attested by their presence.

Through the courtesy of the trustees of the American Museum of Natural History, we meet here in eleventh annual convention. With the hearty cooperation of the Horticultural Society of this city, we have made it a success.

Necessarily much of the preliminary work devolved upon a few members of the executive staff living within easy distance, headed by that able leader, Frank R. Pierson; our untiring secretary, Benjamin Hammond, and Joseph Manda, manager of the show. Many absentees would gladly be present, but for various reasons, principally lack of time, must forego the pleasure and be contented to wait for the reports as transmitted through the trade papers. These have all been largely instrumental in spreading the news, have made faithful reports of whatever has occurred, and deserve the thanks of this society.

It has been suggested that greater interest in our society would manifest itself if it were possible to hold our annual meetings and exhibitions in conjunction with the American Carnation Society. This would undoubtedly be true. One could not possibly detract from the other. The scheme ought to be carried through, as it will unquestionably lead to good results and show a large saving of time and money. Cooperation would certainly make for a much larger exhibit and better attendance. The idea is not to incorporate the two bodies into one, but for each to remain individually itself. It is not to the number of societies that many florists object, but they find it impracticable to attend so many different meetings and exhibitions. This is a question requiring further consideration.

Today's exhibition speaks for itself. Nine days less than a year ago we thought that we had the best display of roses at Buffalo. How does our show today compare with it? The spirit of the times must be with us. It permits of no backsliding, but is ever for advancement. Credit is due to those who constantly strive to outdo their previous efforts and who have brought forth their product for your inspection and judgment.

Joseph Manda.

(Manager of the Rose and Spring Exhibition at New York this week.)

Rose culture is increasing rapidly in all sections of the country. The demand from the south and west is fast increasing. New roses of merit are eagerly sought. The field is constantly widening. Millions of blooms are produced where ten years ago there were so many thousands. It is indeed a growing business without a limit.

It is not necessary to dwell at length on the aims of the society. Preeminently it stands for the advancement and distribution of the rose, as expressed in its desire to place "A Rose in Every Home and a Bush in Every Garden." How well this is being accomplished can be told by figures showing the annual sales of rose plants running well into millions.

New insecticides have greatly lessened the evils of insect pests. Chemical fertilizers, as they are becoming better understood, are being more generally used, while the good cattle manure is becoming scarcer and each year harder to obtain. Bulletins issued by the nitrate agencies contain valuable information to florists regarding the use of chemical fertilizer.

Our program provides for a number of essays which I am sure will be of high merit, and hold your attention.

We gladly welcome new members to our ranks. The secretary will be glad to furnish information as to terms of membership.

I want to take this opportunity to thank everyone who has been instrumental in furthering the work of this exhibition on behalf of the American Rose Society.

I have made my address brief because so much matter of value has already been published that little remains to be added.

Secretary's Report.

Secretary Benjamin Hammond presented a report which showed increasing interest in the society, both in the trade and among the amateurs. Part of the increased interest he credited to the society's medals. Last year the permanent fund passed $3,000. "The income of the society has been above its regular outgo, but that is not saying much, because the prizes offered regularly each year run up to quite a sum and a year ago a number of gentlemen made up this amount separate from other support.

"The society owes much, especially to ex-President Simpson, Harry O. May, F. R. Pierson and the executive committee, for detail work in doing the many things required for such an exhibition. The American Rose Society is especially favored with many workers who freely serve for the general success.

"The Florists' Society of Indiana has filed a request for the annual exhibition to go to Indianapolis in 1912, following the great National Flower Show to be held in Boston in 1911."

Treasurer's Report.

Treasurer Harry O. May reported the financial transactions of the past year, the totals being as follows:

Receipts	$4,524.32
Disbursements	3,902.13
Balance	$ 622.19
Permanent Fund	$3,050.00
Hubbard Medal Fund.....	250.00

Boston Next.

F. R. Pierson, who is chairman of the National Flower Show committee of the S. A. F., told of the preparation being made for a great exhibition at Boston a year hence and extended to the Rose Society an invitation to do as the Carnation Society has voted to do, hold the 1911 meeting and exhibition at Boston in March. The invitation was accepted unanimously.

Papers.

The following were the formal papers prepared for the convention:

"Roses, the Brightest of Flowers," by Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.
 "North Pacific Coast Roses," by W. S. Sibson, Portland, Ore.
 "Ideals of Horticulture," by James Wood, president of the Horticultural Society of New York.
 "The Rose and Its History," by George V. Nash, secretary of the Horticultural Society of New York.

The Banquet.

The annual banquet of the New York Florists' Club was set for Thursday evening, March 17, for the purpose of securing the attendance of the Rose Society visitors. Leading retailers undertook the decoration of the table at the Fifth Avenue restaurant. An elaborate menu had been prepared. The committee selected Patrick O'Mara as toastmaster, and arranged the following program of talks mixed in with music to follow the repast:

"Our Guests," President A. L. Miller.
 "Floriculture from the Standpoint of the Experimental Station," Prof. John Craig.
 "Horticulture as an Educative Force," by George V. Nash.
 "Our Night," W. A. Manda.
 "National Horticulture," F. R. Pierson.
 "The American Rose Society," August F. Poehlmann.
 "The Ladies," Richard Connel.

THE BRIGHTEST OF FLOWERS.

[A paper by Adolph Farenwald, of Roslyn, Pa., read at the annual convention of the American Rose Society, in New York city, March 16, 1910.]

When I received word to write a paper on this subject, I felt that it was sent to the wrong man. I am a rose grower, not a poet, so I tried to wriggle out of it; but the powers that be wanted me to stick to the gun, and as I am an enthusiastic member of this society, and a lover of roses as well as a grower, I consented.

I shall now do my best to honor the queen of flowers. If I fall short, you must remember that I am only a rose grower, not a poet. Of course, there are other flowers in the race, such as orchids, carnations and violets, and a host of others also run. They are all beautiful; they all fill their places, but what one has sufficient popularity to fill the place of queen? With its exquisite form, its graceful carriage, its thousands of different hues, coupled with the grandest foliage imaginable, we see in the rose the embodiment of all that is beautiful in the kingdom of flowers. For ages the poets have sung their praise of its charms. The composer has put to music what stirred his soul when face to face with its matchless beauty. Innumerable times the painter has tried to copy its wonderful forms and colors.

Suitable For All Occasions.

Our queen is the symbol of our fondest affections, as well as of our deepest sympathy. Her mission is varied, fitting all occasions and all lives. Her bright coloring and delicate perfume are silent messengers of comfort and cheer to the sick in body and soul. She also brings to the memory of most of us thoughts of the long ago, the days of love and roses. No human being can resist the charms of our queen, no matter how lowly his station or how crude his ideas of beauty.

Truly, fellow members, no nobler profession exists than ours, as rose growers, whose everlasting patience and skill tries to improve on Mother Nature. To think that we send every day to thousands and thousands of homes these messages of love and cheer! No, we need not be afraid of any other flower taking the place of our beloved queen, as long as we keep on producing and improving in the future as we have done in the past, to which fact the present exhibition testifies. All growers of roses are rose lovers. Whether they produce the flowers for commercial purposes or simply for pleasure, the aim is one—perfection. A few weeks ago I said publicly in Philadelphia that the carnation was pushing hard for first place. Of course, we know the carnation has its charms, but the rose is its superior and always will be. It is simply the fact that its producers, as a class, are putting forth their best efforts. But, if all rose growers should strive as hard, what marvelous results might be obtained!

Fulfilling the Society's Motto.

The Rose Society has a motto: "A bush for every garden, a rose for every home." Our aim, as implied in that motto, is to educate the masses of our people to the point of appreciating the value of the rose as a means of culture, so that in the future men will discuss with each other the merits of their several rose gardens, and compare notes on the different varieties. In the spring-time, before leaving in the morning for their places of business in the dark and dusty cities, they will take a run into their gardens and receive an inspiration from the bedewed beauties, such as will enable them to wrestle more effectively with the problems of the day. Furthermore, they will enjoy talking to their neighbors and friends on these beauties of nature, instead of simply filling each other's minds, as they do now, with exchanges of opinion on the various sports of the day, stocks and bonds, etc. That education no other flower can bring, as no creation of nature has attained, as I said before, such beauty, and won such universal love as our queen, when once thoroughly understood by the great amateur public.

"The Rose, the Brightest of the Flowers." When I started on this subject, I felt that I could not do it proper justice. But I caught the inspiration as I thought upon it, as everyone must be inspired when once thoroughly aroused to the charms of the queen of flowers. I have tried to convey some of my innermost thoughts on our glorious queen, and doing it has brought back to my memory dreams of long, long ago. I hope that for some, or all of you, it will also call up memories of the "days of love and roses."

NORTH PACIFIC COAST ROSES.

[A paper by William S. Sibson, of Portland, Ore., read at the annual convention of the American Rose Society, in New York city, March 16, 1910.]

You will appreciate the vastness of the subject upon which I have been requested to speak, when I remind you of the extent of territory, and the diversity of conditions in regard to climate and soil, that exist within the two states of Oregon and Washington, which I am to discuss. Combined, they aggregate 165,000 square miles, or approximately 61,500,000 acres, of land so diversified in character that in a brief address it is possible only to select a limited area and to refer generally to the balance of this wonderful empire, which in development is only in its infancy. Having a coast line on the Pacific ocean of about 500 miles, these states are divided about 150 miles from the coast, by the Cascade range of mountains, into two great sections, namely: Eastern Oregon and Washington, and western Oregon and Washington. It is of conditions in the western division that I will endeavor to say a few words that may interest those of you who are strangers to our country.

The Climate.

The climate of western Oregon and Washington is remarkably mild and even. Occasionally, of course, we have "hard winters." The one from which we are now emerging has been, all told, the worst I have seen during a residence of nearly forty years. As a rule, however, the winters are mild, rainy and pleasant, with a mean temperature in a series of years, for the five months between October and May, of about 46 degrees. In the summer months, from May to October, the average temperature during a like period has been about 63 degrees. These temperatures, you will note, are averages for a series of years. Cold snaps, which seldom record lower than 10 to 15 degrees of frost, occasionally occur in winter, and the hot spells of summer, which range from 85 to 90 degrees and sometimes a few degrees higher, have been, of course, included in arriving at the averages I have quoted.

The Rainfall.

Western Oregon and Washington are frequently credited with an excessive rainfall; in fact, I have heard strangers claim that "in Oregon it rains thirteen months in the year." As a matter of fact, the precipitation at Portland does not exceed forty-six inches per annum, and in a series of years it has not reached this average. Perhaps, to people who visit us in winter, it may appear to rain excessively, because the bulk of our rainfall takes place during the six months from October to March. I have noticed that when we have an unusually long, rainy winter, generous crops of grain, fruit and all the products of the ground result, and, while I have never seen an analysis of our Oregon winter rain water, I believe it is one of the best natural fertilizers and laden with plant food by beneficent nature.

With such a climate as I have briefly outlined, with soil unexcelled and with a people who are enthusiastic lovers of the rose, is it surprising that our country should have become celebrated for its roses? The following motto of the American Rose Society is with us a condition and not a theory:

A rose for every home,
A bush for every garden.

This sentiment is good, but in my opinion far too modest, and I hereby beg to make a motion to amend and substitute:

Roses for every home,
Roses for every garden.

The motto of the Portland Rose Festival Association is:

Roses fragrant, roses rare,
Roses, roses, everywhere.

Caroline Testout Roses at Portland Ore.

and this is consistent with the feelings, opinions and practice of our people.

Wild Roses.

Wild roses of many species are indigenous and flourish in luxuriant foliage and wealth of bloom. The fragrant sweet briars, vigorous and strong, in many places line our country roads. In some inated that variety never had any such on his place." The foliage on the trees and shrubs in the cemetery and the vivid green of the grass Mr. Hill considered perfectly wonderful.

I think it was Oregon, and perhaps Portland, that first realized all the good characteristics of that fine variety, Mme. Caroline Testout, which is now perhaps successful grower of carnations and sweet peas. The accompanying illustration shows Mr. Hostetter from a snapshot which caught him admiring a house of Enchantress from which he has been cutting 4-inch blooms all season.

WINTERICH'S HOUSE.

Christ. Winterich, Defiance, O., is well known as a specialist in the growing of cyclamens, but that he also is successful with other crops is shown by the accompanying illustration. While Mr. Winterich grows cyclamens in quantity, so that they occupy several houses to the exclusion of all else, the accompanying picture shows one of his houses of general stock, in which there also are a few cyclamens.

HOME GROWN HARRISII BULBS.

The Hopeful Outlook.

That the growing of Harrisii bulbs in America is still in the experimental stage must, of course, be admitted, but the latest experiments have been accompanied with enough of success to give a reasonable prospect of establishing the industry on a commercial footing. Not only the seed and bulb men, but members of the florists' trade in general, all are keenly, personally interested in the subject, and recent reports have been hopeful enough in their character to keep the interest from flagging. The national government's experiments in bulb growing, though not entirely satisfactory in their results, have been sufficiently encouraging to act as an incentive to private enterprise and lead to the investment of private capital. Various attempts are being made, therefore, to grow the bulbs on a commercial basis, especially in California.

In May of last year a Chicago wholesale firm placed on sale a quantity of Easter lilies flowered from bulbs which had been grown by the Santa Ana Easter Lily Co., of Santa Ana, Cal. Of course the arrival of these lilies in the market aroused a considerable flurry of interest among those who were aware of their districts of deep alluvial soil, the swamp brier attains a height of twenty feet or more. High up some mountain slope, we find wild roses rioting amid the huckleberry, salal and other native shrubs.

The late Dean Hole, a great rosarian and one of the originators of the National Rose Society of England, in his invaluable "Book About Roses," says in effect that wherever wild roses grow, rose culture may successfully be carried on. Without a doubt there are in our soil, climate and surroundings, qualities peculiarly conducive to rose growing. Eastern people are often surprised at the size, perfection and beauty of roses in this country. To emphasize this assertion, I will quote the opinion of an expert, well known to many of you, who visited Oregon in 1903.

An Expert's Opinion.

"Portland is the only place I have struck, since leaving home, that I should like to remain in." This was the remark of E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., a horticulturist well known to most rose growers of this city, who arrived at Portland, Ore., a few days before, on a tour of the coast. He had heard of the beauty of Portland roses, and the first thing he did after getting there was to look about town and visit some of the principal rose growers. He was fortunate in arriving just after the rain and so found the roses in good condition. He was taken out by James Forbes to visit Riverview cemetery and some of the commercial places, and so had an opportunity to see the best roses to be found in Oregon. He was delighted and said he had never seen such beautiful roses before, though he had traveled through England and France when the roses were at their best and had passed through southern California on his way to Portland. Of one grower's flowers he said: "I have never seen such a hedge of La France roses, even in France, and as for the Caroline Testouts, the man who origione of the five most popular roses in existence. It fairly revels in the warm, moist days of early summer, and responds to intelligent and generous treatment with almost continuous bloom from June until the frost of winter. When I was an amateur, or, as we say in Portland, "a rose crank," and before joining your professional ranks, I had the origin. The success of this undertaking was quite gratifying, but the percentage of loss in handling the bulbs was large enough to show that a good deal must yet be learned about the growing of Harrisii bulbs under American conditions. It was also stated, at the time, that several other lots of the same crop of bulbs had been sold to the trade and flowered with more or less success.

Pierce's Bulb Fields.

Newton B. Pierce, another enterprising resident of Santa Ana, is also growing the Harrisii bulbs successfully from seed, and a part of one of his lily fields is shown in the photograph which is here reproduced.

Mr. Pierce is proprietor of the Wild Plant Improvement Gardens, at Santa Ana, Cal. He says that there is no sufficient reason why the culture of the Easter lily in California should not meet with commercial success, if such an enterprise were properly backed and prosecuted. Such commercial culture, he says, should begin with proper seed. The work should be done in an isolated position, where no bulb mites would be introduced by the grower or his neighbors, as these pests would destroy the industry. The first few years should be devoted to the selection of plants free from the Bermuda lily disease and having the needed qualities of flower as well as the habits of growth and seeding qualities required. Mr. Pierce is convinced that after attending to these prerequisites, which may be secured by careful work, then suitable ground and water supply are all that is necessary to assure the success of the work in California.

The results of one of Mr. Pierce's earliest tests are indicated in the illustration. The test was conducted as follows: Seeds were planted in flats October 3 and germinated in sun frames. In three and one-half months (January 20), they were potted off into 2-inch pots and plunged in sand in cloth houses. Nine months after seeding (July 1), the bulbs were set in the field in a firm, sandy loam, and in rows two feet apart. The land was properly graded, so that irrigation could be practiced, and each time they were irrigated they were properly cultivated to form a good moisture-retaining mulch. Proper irrigation and cultivation were continued during the following year, but with no fertilization, and June 12 to June 20, twenty months and a few days after seeding, they were in full bloom, as seen in the illustration.

The necessity for potting the young plants, Mr. Pierce says, may be avoided by planting the seed under cloth or other protection, where they may be grown until of size for planting in the field, or from August or September till the following May or June. Seed is harvested from the first part of August onward, for four to six weeks. The bulbs are matured at the same time by cutting off irrigation. Mr. Pierce's bulbs produced as high as eighteen flowers to the plant, but commonly eight, ten and twelve flowers.

The Wild Plant Improvement Gardens, now owned by Mr. Pierce and used by him as the field of his operations, were founded for the United States Department of Agriculture, and exchanges were at that time organized with the missions of many foreign lands. Seeds of our best economic plants were sent to the missionaries in exchange for seeds of valuable wild plants and fruits, known to the missionaries or to the natives among whom they worked. After several years of such exchanges, and further exchanges with botanists in different parts of the world, the Department of Agriculture withdrew from the work and its interest in the gardens was purchased. The large collection of rare plants thus obtained has since been increased, it is said, by purchase and further exchange.

A Bulb Forcer's View.

Emil Buettner, of Park Ridge, Ill., is a large forcer of Easter lilies and a man whose opinion on any subject of trade interest is of value. Mr. Buettner has inspected the bulb fields at Santa Ana and last season forced a few hundreds of the bulbs grown from seeds there. "There proved to be about as many types of plant as there were bulbs," said Mr. Buettner. "Some of the plants and flowers were excellent, and some were not at all good. In order to be useful to the bulb forcer the California growers must turn out an article that will give a uniform result. When I visited the Santa Ana growers I noted in their fields that there were a great number of types, which condition probably must continue as long as the bulbs are grown from seed, though it may in time be possible to select a type and grow it carefully enough from seed so that a fair part will come true. I told the growers that I thought they would fail to get any specially valuable commercial success until they selected some certain type of lily and grew it from scales or offsets, so as to get it true, but they said growing from seeds was necessary to avoid the lily disease and the mite. So I conclude the California growers still have a long way to go before they become dangerous competitors of the present sources of supply."

BOSTON.

The Market.

A little improvement is now shown in the cut flower sales. The bulk of last week's business was rather discouraging, supplies being far in excess of the demand, a week of clear skies and comparatively mild weather greatly increasing the output. Roses are still cleaning up well. They are not yet in heavy crop and are selling better than almost any other flowers. Rhea Reid is now seen of excellent quality and good color and is likely to prove a much better spring and summer rose than Richmond. Killarney and White Killarney are good. Bride and Maid hang fire, as usual. Beauties are not abundant, but the demand is not strong. Safrano and Bon Silene are in evidence at all the better class stores. Carnations have been decidedly hard to move of late, many purchasers preferring bulbous flowers. Violets are abundant. The singles are, however, nearing the end; 50 cents per hundred is top price and only the best flowers well bunched will bring this amount, some going as low as $2 per thousand.

Bulbous stock during a large part of last week arrived in such unwieldy quantities that it was virtually impossible to clean up. Narcissus poeticus ornatus was slow to move even at cheap rates. Double Von Sions and the best single trumpets are selling fairly well, as are double tulips. The bulbous glut appears to be over, at least temporarily. Hyacinths are a slow sale. Sweet peas are abundant and lower in price, but are sold in large quantities. There is an ample supply of Easter lilies. Average Easter quotations are 12½ cents per bud on pot plants and 10 cents to 12½ cents cut. Callas are good and snapdragon is now seen of fine quality, making $1 per dozen for the best.

There is an ample supply of miscellaneous flowers, such as forget-me-nots, marguerites, wallflowers, English primroses, anemones, mignonettes and lupines. Acacia pubescens sells at $2.50 per bunch. Gardenias are much more abundant and slower sale. The demand for orchids has been rather light. Cattleyas are not abundant, but there is an abundance of dendrobiums, cœlogynes and other seasonable sorts. Lily of the valley has sold moderately well. Green stock is selling remarkably well.

Shamrocks have been in big demand during the last few days and are much better than usual. Pot plant trade has now commenced to boom and sales for Easter promise to be larger than ever. Easter lilies with the bulk of the growers will be on time. Among rambler roses, pink colors, such as Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay and Tausendschon, predominate. Hiawatha is seen in some stores, also Wedding Bells. Crimson Rambler is not the leader it once was. Azaleas are good and so are metrosideros, forced shrubs in variety, cyclamens, acacias, genistas and other flowering plants.

Various Notes.

The members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club are asked to take the electric car for Waverley, leaving Park Street station subway at 1 o'clock March 19, for the field day with the W. W. Edgar Co. All interested friends who are non-members are cordially invited to attend. The regular club meeting March 22 will be addressed by A. E. Thatcher, of Arnold Arboretum, on the subject "New and Desirable Hardy Herbaceous Plants." Mr. Thatcher is an expert on hardy plants. Before coming to America he was at Aldenham House, Elstree, England, under the renowned Edwin Beckett, where the finest private collection of perennials, trees and shrubs in Britain is to be found.

Welch Bros. say the business is broadening every year and that they have handled not only increasing quantities of cut flowers this season, but increased numbers of plants. P. Welch gets about quite a little, having recently been at Providence and other cities, and says that wherever he has been the retailers have had a good season and are preparing for a big Easter.

The news of the death of the genial and popular treasurer of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Edward Hatch, brought out expressions of sorrow on all hands. There have been few men who were more popular than Mr. Hatch and his will be a difficult place to fill.

Mann Bros. are handling immense quantities of finely grown bulbous flowers at present. Among tulips, Cramoisie Brilliant, Flamingo, Thomas Moore and Murillo are extra fine, while in narcissi Emperor, Victoria, Barri conspicuus, Golden Spur, Sir Watkin and princeps are leaders. The same firm has an unusually fine lot of Easter plants in large variety.

William H. Elliott is cutting quantities of fine Rhea Reid roses. The color is good. Mr. Elliott never lacks courage. He essayed to grow this rose when all growers and buyers condemned it. He says it yielded as many flowers per plant as Richmond in February. The Reids, however, averaged 14 cents per bloom and Richmonds only 6 cents. People are now beginning to realize that Rhea Reid has some merits after all.

George Cruikshanks, of R. & J. Farpuhar's, will address the North Shore Horticultural Society on "Cyclamen Culture," March 18.

F. L. Hardy, of Natick, at 2 Park street, is handling the finest antirrhinums I have seen this season.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, is supplying some extra fine pink lupines, sweet peas and mignonettes, in addition to carnations, at the older Park Street market.

J. H. Newman is still one of the leaders among single violets. He handles many thousands daily. March 12 he easily disposed of 32,000 at 2 Park street.

We are glad to report that Alexander Montgomery, who had a slight shock, is much better and able to be around his rose houses again.

Julius A. Zinn has much increased his business since moving to Park street. Some nice bouquets made by Mr. Zinn himself, illustrating German methods of bouquet-making before he left Europe, attracted much interest. They are in many respects superior to the bouquets made up today.

At Thomas Galvin's Tremont street store one of the large windows contains a pleasing landscape effect, all the planting being of shamrocks, Irish and American flags being used.

E. H. Wilson will leave on another Chinese exploration trip April 2 and expects to be away about a year.

Everett Cummings, of Woburn, has handled 90,000 to 120,000 single violets per week at 2 Park street during the last two months. He grows only 10,000 plants, but they produce a wonderful crop. Carnations and some vegetables are also grown. Comet tomato is planted when the violets are over.

Philip L. Carbone, on Boylston street, has some extra good Dendrobium Wardianum. His Tausendschon and other ramblers, also forced shrubs in variety, are of fine quality.

Arrangements for the coming big orchid show are now well advanced. A splendid show is certain. In the orchid department there will be a number of special expert judges.

Samuel Hudson, lately at Elm Court Farm, Lenox and South Orange, N. J., succeeds W. S. Grassie at the Harvard Botanic Gardens. Mr. Grassie will build a commercial plant at Waverley, where he has secured some excellent land.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, a recent acquisition to the list of local commercial growers, is just finishing a house of sweet peas. He has had a fine lot of shamrocks this week and will have a fine house of sweet peas for late blooming. Next season he will grow about 10,000 carnations also.

Penn Bros., on Bromfield street, are showing some extra fine Hiawatha, Tausendschon and other rambler roses. Their store is always neat and they do a big business. Their big bunches of violets, several hundreds in each, always make a big hit.

H. W. Vose is selling, through W. F. Aylward, some extra well grown cinerarias and lilies.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are fully equipped for handling a heavy Easter trade. They are having many calls for pot lilies and their supplies of cut flowers will be larger and more varied than ever. In green supplies business is good.

The present season has seen an unusually heavy crop of Dutch bulb travelers. If they all carry away full books of orders we can anticipate a veritable avalanche of bulbous flowers in 1911.

All the seed houses are now being kept on the jump and both counter and mail trade is unusually heavy. Everyone anticipates the best season on record. We are getting quite open weather for March and early seed sowing in the open has commenced.

William Sim is now marketing an immense pick of violets. His coldframes of the latter will be right for Easter. Sweet peas are at present superb, a sight worthy of a long journey to see.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with clouds and chill and the promise of another cold wave. Just as well to have it over before Easter, now less than a fortnight away. In 1907 Easter was also early, the financial panic was raging and the outlook was dark. Now, with prosperity wide and deep, the plantsmen practically sold out and the early spring assured, there seems good reason to expect the best Easter to date. In 1908 Easter was celebrated about the middle of April; the panic was over, the banks resuming specie payments, the weather perfect and the plant supply abundant. Last year Easter was two weeks later, and more and more the difficulties incident to a movable Easter manifest themselves. Especially are the plant growers handicapped, and in lilies and blooming plants a shortage this season is inevitable. No increase in prices, however, has been made by the plantsmen up to date, as is always the rule to within a week of Easter.

The cut flower market has shown little sign of improvement and prices have not yet advanced above the discouraging figures of the last three weeks. Saturday, March 12, however, found the demand sufficient to use up everything arriving. The present week must see the beginning of better times.

Beauties last week reached the low mark of the season. With clear weather there will be no unreasonable advance in these or any roses for Easter. The promise now is for abundant shipments and the picklers will get little consideration. Carnations advanced a little Saturday and a better average is likely from now on. There seems to be an abundance of orchids and prices have not been satisfactory to growers for some time. There will be a good variety of them for the holiday, as usual. Lilies have advanced and sales are made at $12 per hundred, with a probable increase to 15 cents for good stock in pots, and not enough to go around. Of all else there is no limit, sweet peas, tulips and daffodils ad infinitum, and of the latter the southern shipments promised during the present week. Violets are down to rock bottom, the best last week going at 35 cents per hundred.

Club Meeting.

Seventy-five members attended the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, Monday evening, March 14. John Young, the secretary, because of attendance at the executive meeting of the S. A. F. at Rochester, was absent for the first time in twenty years. The club sent him a telegram authorizing the evening of March 14 as a vacation with pay. J. H. Pepper was appointed secretary pro tem. Chairman Sheridan reported rapid progress for the dinner committee. Resolutions on the death of the father of C. W. Scott were read by J. H. Pepper. Chairman Bunyard reported for the outing committee. The date was set for July 1, at Wetzel's, per steamer Isabel.

An exhibit of Freesia Purity grown by W. W. Mathews, of Great Neck, and exhibited by Philip Kessler, received a cultural certificate. The award committee also passed upon the new fern owned and exhibited by Kessler Bros. It is a sport from Boston and a distinct variety and was declared an acquisition to commercial floriculture. The committee desired further opportunity for comparison with other popular varieties. The ten samples shown in all sizes were perfect specimens.

A. Hanig, of Brooklyn, was elected to membership and Charles A. Krick, of the same city, was nominated. A. C. Zvolanek, the sweet pea specialist, was unable to be present to read his paper on the sweet pea and his trip to California, because of the Gardeners' Society's convention at Philadelphia, and sent a letter of regret, with the promise of his lecture at the April meeting.

An interesting discussion, participated in by many members, took place with reference to the award committee, which was originated by Patrick O'Mara when president. Its value was emphasized. Joseph A. Manda spoke for the American Rose Society's exhibition and urged all the club members to attend. W. B. DuRie, of Rahway, N. J., was present, one of the club's pioneer members, who celebrates his seventieth birthday March 17.

H. A. Bunyard spoke for the Sweet Pea Society and suggested the club becoming its sponsor and offering prizes and a banquet this summer, the same as it has done for the American Rose Society. He said he was known as a "sweet pea crank" and the "wet nurse" of the organization, now with over 100 members, and he expects to double that before the annual meeting. He also referred to the fine exhibits to be made at the gardeners' meeting in Philadelphia and at the American Rose Society. Harry Turner, president of the Sweet Pea Society, also took part in the discussion, with John Birnie, C. H. Totty and A. T. Boddington, the latter referring to the work of John Craig and A. C. Beal, of Ithaca, who are making a careful test of every variety of sweet pea.

A. S. Burns and James Dean, two of the oldest charter members of the club, were present and gave interesting addresses, Mr. Dean being especially reminiscent. Robert Berry and Patrick O'Mara also gave a record of events from memory of the days of long ago. The evening was enjoyable. The house committee was not neglectful and the club is progressing rapidly in interest and accomplishment. Mr. Dean has returned from Freeport and is now a resident of Brooklyn.

Various Notes.

There are to be some unique St. Patrick's day windows March 17. M. A. Bowe has a special artist for the occasion. The shamrock is already in every retail window in the two cities. Originality of design in the arrangement of green goods is universal and there are green roses, tulips and carnations and even green violets to tickle the ambition of our host of loyal Hibernians. Every policeman in New York will wear a green something on Thursday.

Tuesday, March 15, William Elliott & Sons opened the plant auction campaign to a large house at noon and will continue the sales every Tuesday and Friday until further notice. The first sale offered hardy roses, azaleas, rhododendrons, evergreens, shrubs, bulbs, etc.

The Fruit Auction Co. opened its plant auction season Tuesday, March 15, and will have a daily sale at 10:30 a. m. until further notice. John P. Cleary is manager and has just returned from his European purchasing trip. English-grown roses and many varieties of evergreens, azaleas, lilacs and other shrubs are on his list and for the week preceding Easter flowering plants of all kinds will be auctioned daily.

Ford Bros. and Traendly & Schenck make the usual displays of blooming plants.

David Clarke's Sons are to celebrate the firm's sixty-second Easter, a record unequalled in New York floriculture. The big store has the largest window display in the city.

The Yonkers Horticultural Society's annual dinner Thursday, March 10, was a brilliant success. There was an attendance of over 100 and many visitors from New York and sister horticultural societies. The menu was excellent and the guests and members were seated at round tables in the Park Inn's handsome banquet room. Arthur T. Boddington was toastmaster and at his best, keeping his audience in good humor until long after midnight. The toasts included the allied societies, responded to by H. A. Bunyard in a witty and comprehensive address. Secretary Waite, the Rickards brothers and others made up a fine musical program. The whole affair was one of the most enjoyable of the banquet season.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. has been fortunate in securing the big store next door to the present quarters. The building where they now are, and in which Walter Sheridan's headquarters have been located for over a quarter of a century, is to be replaced by a skyscraper. There will be many changes made this spring among the wholesale cut flower men of Twenty-eighth street. The building where Kessler Bros. and George Cottonas have their stores was sold last month. The whole street from Broadway to Sixth avenue will doubtless ultimately be occupied by up-to-date buildings. Rents have been increased considerably this spring for those remaining.

George Saltford's lease has another year to run.

This is the fourth anniversary of Alex. McConnell in his Arcade store on Fifth avenue and the business has outgrown it. The conservatory and two extra stores will be utilized for the display of his Easter exhibit.

Peter Henderson & Co. are in their new offices, the marble fronted building about completed and business never so good as now.

Mr. McTaggart, long with Thorburn & Co., has joined the ranks of the seedsmen, with headquarters at 123 Warren street, New York.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, says he never has had better success in flowering Easter stock, rambler roses in many varieties, as well as many kinds of plants popular with the retailers. Sales already are heavy.

Fred Smythe is back from his European trip, combining business and pleasure and adding heavily to his nursery importations.

The ribbon men all declare this season the best they have ever known in advance Easter orders. They even complain of too much business, a healthful sign.

W. H. Siebrecht celebrates next week the thirty-fourth anniversary of his long record as the valley king of Astoria.

Moore, Hentz & Nash were represented at the Yonkers dinner by Messrs. Hanft and Radice, in charge of their carnation and Beauty departments.

B. Rosens has decided to remain on West Twenty-ninth street and is shipping heavily from his supply department daily.

The Kervan Co. reports a big business in wild smilax and southern green stock of every variety. Lecakes & Co., Cottonas & Co. and J. J. Fellouris all say this has been their busiest year.

Kessler Bros. have a large display of blooming plants, their specialties being daisies and bougainvilleas in all styles of growth and sizes. One specimen bougainvillea sold at $50. Their new fern is popular and America is likely to be its name.

August Millang & Son will ultimately be the name of the wholesale cut flower house at 41 West Twenty-eighth street.

The Forster-Mansfield Co. is looking for larger quarters. Its work is unique and original and it has some big contracts for beautifying florists' stores in the near future.

Charles Millang is concentrating at 55 West Twenty-sixth street on the ground floor of the Coogan building, where his business grows steadily.

In Brooklyn.

S. Jacobs & Sons report splendid business this season and the brightest outlook in their career. The greenhouse builders all are optimistic enough. Work is already booked to keep every one of them hustling until fall.

S. Masur has a large branch store for the holiday and will soon have to find larger quarters for his regular business.

R. G. Wilson has a wonderful exhibit of flowering plants at his greenhouses on Greene avenue and a striking window and other seasonable decorations at his store on Fulton street. Brooklyn, he says, is the coming pink carnation and already popular in the city.

Bonnet & Blake, the Greater New York Florists' Association and William Kuebler all report their best year and find a host of buyers in Brooklyn. A trio of green goods and supply men also find a good paying field in the City of Churches.

The veterans, James Weir's Son, John V. Phillips and Mallon's Sons, still occupy their old stands and add yearly to their bank balances.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.The Market.

March has been ideal so far and has put new life into business. As we are nearing the first days of spring, people are asking about planting flowers and fixing their lawns, etc. Stock has been quite plentiful, especially in carnations, but trade has been exceedingly heavy on them. Roses have been scarce and are sold up closely daily. Loads of bulbous stock are on the market, but they move well. From all reports, they are moving much better than last season. Sweet peas are coming in heavily and find ready sales. Valley is used up closely right along. Violets find a ready sale and the supply is quite heavy. Lilies have been much in evidence the last week or so. Azaleas are still heading the list of blooming plants. While there are lots of bulb pans, etc., sold, the better class of trade usually picks on azaleas, rhododendrons and some of the more showy stock. Quite a few spiræas are to be seen and everywhere one looks things are taking on their new Easter fashions.

The combine of business houses having their openings at the same date, from March 14 to March 19, has been making business for all the florists and all the plants that are rentable are out. All the florists had their stock all spoken for a week previous to the openings and there were not nearly enough plants to go around. There are several hundred stores in on the new scheme and the displays outclass anything ever undertaken here and promise to be a great success.

Funeral work has been heavy for the last week or so and has used up quantities of stock.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a meeting Tuesday night, March 8, with quite a good attendance. There will be no meeting until after Easter, but no doubt there will be a good turn-out for the dance, March 30.

Oliver A. Munk has resigned from the Munk Floral Co., but still retains his interest there. He has bought the Munk home place at Valley Crossing, O., consisting of seventy-six acres and five greenhouses, which are all in lettuce, but he expects to grow carnations and roses next season. Being only six miles from the city, with good soil and all favorable conditions, he will, no doubt, be in a good position to furnish the goods.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business on funeral work.

G. Drobisch says it is hard to get enough stock to go around.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is having some heavy cuts on carnations.

The Livingston Seed Co. is busy at this time, both on flowers and seed trade.

J. M.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

Trade is about the same as reported last week. There is little doing in the social affairs, although the trade bought considerable stock last week, but not near enough to clean up at any of the wholesale houses. It was mostly all funeral work that kept them busy during the week. This week not much is looked for, though the Easter rush will be on next week, from which a big trade is expected, especially by those who handle a big stock of blooming plants. The wholesalers say they expect a good deal of stock of everything in season and plenty of it. At present, all the wholesalers report plenty of stock and all of good quality.

Violets have sold well, but such a great amount of these came in that not more than half of them could be disposed of at any price. Carnations, too, have been in abundance and sold cheap in big lots, from $10 to $15 per thousand. In these there promises to be a big crop for the Easter demand. Enchantress has the best call of any variety, and Perfection and Boston Market come next. Roses are coming in much better and the report is that shippers to this market will be on crop for Easter, with extra quality of stock. Beauties are also more plentiful. Callas come in better than Harrisii just now. Valley is fine. Other bulbous stock, such as Romans, Paper Whites, Von Sions, freesias, Dutch hyacinths and tulips, also promise to be in abundance for Easter. At present the market has plenty of stock to meet all demands. Since March 1, the weather has been warm and clear and that means plenty of stock and good blooming plants for Easter.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held Thursday, March 10, at 2 p. m. The meeting was fairly well attended, twenty-five responding to the secretary's call. President George B. Windler presided over the meeting, with all the officers present. After all the opening routine business had been disposed of, Trustee Bentzen reported on the death of L. N. Van Hook and that the usual floral designs had been sent, expressing the sympathy of the members. The chair then appointed F. J. Fillmore, A. S. Halstead and C. De Wever to draw up suitable resolutions. C. De Wever reported for his committee as to issuing a monthly club bulletin for home florists and wished the club's endorsement for same and the usual club notices to be placed in this bulletin. On motion it was carried and the committee is to meet and make preparations for the first issue to appear at once.

A letter was read from the convention bureau, asking the club to join them in an invitation to the American Association of Nurserymen to hold its 1911 convention in this city. On motion the chair appointed Messrs. Weber, Sanders and Halstead a committee to draw up an invitation and forward it to the bureau.

For the good of the club, President Windler read a paper on what he saw and heard at the annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association last month. This proved interesting. Treasurer Smith reported a handsome balance in the club's treasury. The question box brought out a lively discussion and interesting facts. The meeting was much better attended by the city members this time and not so many of our suburban members.

The next meeting takes place Thursday afternoon, April 14.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill., spent a day in the city taking in the household show in the big Coliseum.

W. A. Rowe, F. Vennemann, W. J. Pilcher, H. Wenzel, Charles D. Hecht, Gus Grossart, A. S. Halstead and Joe Houses were the only suburban members to attend the club meeting last week.

Miss Tillie Meinhardt had charge of the flower booth at the household show, which was held in the Coliseum last week. Violets and carnations sold well and at good prices.

Dr. J. C. Whitten and Prof. W. H. Chandler are giving free lectures at the Central Y. M. C. A. on farming; Dr. Whitten on "Truck Gardening," and Prof. Chandler on "Orcharding." The lectures are largely attended. These lectures take place once a week.

J. H. Deickman is building two new houses, 25x200, in Kirkwood, for his son, who will grow violets, carnations and sweet peas for this market. Mr. Deickman is a new starter in the business. It is also reported that several of the older firms will add considerable glass to their plants this summer. Some of them will attempt to grow roses. At present nothing is being grown in Kirkwood but violets, carnations, sweet peas and some bulbous stock.

Henry Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., reports that he had plenty to do last week, furnishing plants and cut stock to the exhibitors at the household show in the Coliseum, besides plenty of funeral work which kept him busy all the week.

The Tinsley Seed Co. has moved into its new location and is now next door neighbor to the St. Louis Seed Co., at Fourth street and Lucas avenue.

H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. has its downtown branch with the St. Louis Seed Co., where they keep a large assortment of nursery stock, in which business is brisk at present.

Henry Lorenze, who has been on the sick list for the last two months, is out again and attending to his duties at the Park Floral Co.

Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, made trips recently to Kansas City and Chicago. Mr. Gorly says they were business trips for Easter trade.

Christ. Sanders is now in the employ of Jules Burdett, who is running the old plant of the Michel Plant & Bulb Co., at Magnolia and Tower Grove avenues. Their landscape department is running overtime.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers is putting a new brick foundation under her show-house and other improvements are being made so as to be in good shape for the Easter trade.

The Ladies' Florists' Home Circle Club held its March meeting at Trimps hall, Delmar avenue near Taylor street, Monday afternoon, March 14. Miss Tillie Meinhardt entertained at this session and a bowling game was enjoyed after the meeting.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its regular monthly meeting Monday night, March 14, in the botanical laboratory of the Central high school. Dr. William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, gave a talk with lantern slides on "The Development of Botany." The meeting was well attended and was interesting throughout.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been exceptionally good in all lines, especially funeral work, although the latter has been a feature of the business during the entire winter. The market, while not flooded with stock, has all that can be reasonably handled and cleared up clean. Carnations are in abundance, while roses are getting more plentiful. Bulb stock is almost a glut at present. Several warm days in the last fortnight have forced these ahead and they are coming to the shops by wagon loads. Prices hold good and little change is expected until Easter.

Various Notes.

J. Kopelman & Co., 25 Washington street, have been putting up a number of attractive signs.

George C. Kelly, 237 Waterman street, is getting ready for his annual Easter exhibition. He has a fine collection of bulbs, of all kinds, in pots.

F. Macrae's Sons, 1138 Smith street, have one of the finest lots of Easter lilies hereabouts. They have over 7,500 plants in fine shape, well budded and with strong stalks.

William B. Hazard says his business has doubled since he removed from Westminster street to his present place on Mathewson street.

William E. Chappell was a visitor in Boston March 6, where he called upon many of the guild. He will tell all about it at the next meeting of the club.

The decorations for the Sternscher wedding, March 8, were furnished by J. Kopelman & Co., as were also all the cut flowers.

H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Gardens, has been reelected superintendent of the Calhoun avenue Sunday school.

One of the busiest firms in town is that of T. J. Johnston & Co., Edward Brooks, manager. Three delivery wagons were kept busy the greater part of the time last week carrying out orders.

James Tefft, of Peacedale, was in the city March 9, taking orders for Easter deliveries.

Willis S. Pino is having an exceptionally good seed season, with advance orders far in excess of previous years.

Johnston Bros., 38 Dorrance street, always have attractive windows. One that was much noticed last week was prettily arranged with hanging baskets of Beacon carnations and maidenhair, beneath which was an immense jar of Easter lilies rising from a solid bed of violets.

The Providence Seed Co. reports spring business as most satisfactory, with a substantial increase over former years.

O'Connor finds his hands full with decorations and design work.

Mr. Fraser has opened a retail store at Quidnick.

J. F. Schellinger, of Riverside, is preparing his houses for the cultivation of fancy melons during the coming season. His success with one house last year has led him to put the entire range to melons this year.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., was in Boston, March 9, looking for choice Easter stock. He took in the automobile show in the afternoon.

Charles H. Hunt, Burnside street, has an extra fine lot of bulb stock in pots for Easter, that promises quick returns. He has a big batch of orders already booked. He was in Boston March 11.

P. Welch, of Boston, was a visitor in this city March 8.

W. H. M.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

The weather, for the last ten days, has been just what we should want it to be for Easter. Genuine spring days, with plenty of sunshine, which seemed quite a treat after the rough weather we had experienced previous to that. This weather was just the thing for the rose crop, which has been decidedly limited since the holidays. There were plenty of buds, which only needed a little coaxing and a few bright days, to give them a start for Easter; so from the present outlook, the rose crop will be in fine condition for Easter, most of the stock coming with good long stiff stems, and the blooms excellent in color and size. Carnations have been holding their own right along, quality has been fine, and a good supply of them is also expected for the Easter trade. On the other hand, the continued stretch of bright weather was unexpected and unlooked for by some of the local florists, who had figured ahead and brought their bulbous stock in from the coldframes, consequently, many of them have a liberal portion of their Easter stock in full bloom now.

The market of March 12 looked like the Saturday before Easter, as it was loaded with Dutch hyacinths, tulips, azaleas, and other Easter stock. Nevertheless, there is still a good supply of stock to dispose of, and from the present outlook Easter trade this year will be a record breaker. White carnations are in demand this week and bringing a good price, on account of St. Patrick's day. Cut daffodils, hyacinths, narcissi and valley have had a good call during the last two weeks, as there has been an unusually large demand for funeral work. The lenten season, this year, has been a good one all the way through, and while business was checked to a certain degree, still it has not been so noticeable as in previous years, and everybody seems to be contented and happy over things in general.

Club Meeting.

The Dayton Florists' Club held the regular monthly meeting, March 7, at the establishment of J. F. Young, 37 East Fifth street. At this meeting the annual election of officers took place, with the following results: H. H. Ritter, re-elected president; John Boehner, vice-president; George Bartholomew, re-elected treasurer, and Horace M. Frank, secretary. Mr. Frank has held the office of secretary ever since the organization of the club.

Steps were taken toward organizing a flower market, with the understanding that anyone desiring to sell flowers on the market would be obliged to rent their space and sell them at the market rates. The reasons that prompted this movement are that the farmers and gardeners, throughout the neighboring country, dabble in the flower business as a side issue and pastime; then, on market days, they swamp the market with their stock, and sell it for a mere nothing, and naturally this is hard on those who depend chiefly on the floral business for their existence. Arrangements for the completion of these plans are well under way, but nothing definite has as yet been decided.

Various Notes.

The Easter stock of the Miami Floral Co. is all in good condition. They expect to cut from 25,000 to 30,000 Easter lilies, and, besides these, they have a good supply of azaleas, spiræas, hyacinths and all bulbous stock. Their roses and carnations are coming in fine, and their cuts on both are increasing daily.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs returned March 5 from a three weeks' visit to New Orleans, La., where she had a decidedly pleasant visit. Mrs. Hendrichs believes that vacations are good things to take, for since her return she has had plenty of trade and several large funeral orders.

H. H. Ritter seems much satisfied with business in general. He says things are coming his way, and reports that last week was a record breaker, with plenty of funeral work, while Saturday's business topped the climax. He finds a good demand for pot plants and his outlook for Easter is promising.

We regret to report that Miss Minnie Johnson is still seriously ill, not being able to leave her bed, and no improvement is noticed in her condition.

The Heiss Co. reports business to be satisfactory with them and says the outlook for Easter is encouraging.

The Dayton Floral Co. had a large banquet decoration at the Dayton club, March 14, the occasion being the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce. They report business with them to be fine and plenty of stock for Easter.

Mr. Matthews has a patent on making artificial bay trees, for which he has good demand.

"Couldn't wish for better business than we have had in the last week," is the report of Mrs. Young. She also reports that crocuses are in bloom in her yard.

Samuel F. Purllant, of Bloomington, Ind., formerly in business at Washington C. H., Ohio, was a visitor at the Miami Floral Co., March 13.

Fred Lempke, representative of W. W. Barnard, Chicago, made his rounds among his Dayton customers last week. He spent the day, March 6, as a guest at the home of George Bartholomew.

Elson Helwig, of Marion, O., and A. F. Longren, representing E. H. Hunt, Chicago, called on our local florists last week.

R. A. B.

PORTSMOUTH, O.—Oscar Herms, of the Herms Floral Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, who died March 2.

WEST WELLINGTON, MASS.—George Brooks has nearly completed his new greenhouse, more than doubling his glass area. A new hot water boiler is being installed.

DETROIT.The Market.

There is an old saying, "A calm before a storm." Such is hardly the case in our city. Although the storm comes next week with the Easter rush, still business has not been calm by any means.

The market has remained well cleaned up of every kind of flower; the glut of a few weeks ago was but short lived. While the bulk of the business has been for funeral work, there is a good demand for flowers and blooming plants for various uses.

Early this week white carnations, for coloring green, were at a premium. The Irish are pretty well represented in Detroit and green carnations at 10 cents straight are sold by the hundreds, March 17.

Various Notes.

Herman Knope, Fred Miesel, Jr., and Michael Bloy, of Detroit, spent an enjoyable day in Toledo last week, visiting the different establishments. They were royally entertained by Mr. Magee, of Davis & Magee.

Wm. Gray, who has been with Sullivan's for many years, is now employed by Gus. H. Taepke in his Gratiot avenue store.

M. Rahaley, father of Robert and Henry, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, met with a serious accident last week. While driving out Woodward avenue, in Highland park, his wagon was struck by an incoming Flint car and smashed to kindling. Mr. Rahaley was at first thought hurt beyond recovery, but is now out of danger and resting nicely.

Since giving up the Mt. Clemens place, Breitmeyers are obliged to buy all their cut stuff and Harry Breitmeyer has assumed the responsibility of keeping their large cooler well stocked with flowers, bought at the right prices.

R. J. Irwin, of Skidelsky & Irwin, reports seeing a house of Kaiserin roses at Robert Klagge's, Mt. Clemens, such as he has never seen before. Mr. Irwin said: "I never in my life saw such a house of roses, every plant in the pink of condition and loaded with buds, just fine for Easter."

Mrs. F. Rush removed from 768 Michigan avenue to 736 Michigan avenue, or one block nearer the city. Business has been good, and probably the next step will be on Woodward avenue.

The surplus of B. Schroeter's excellent crop of lilies for Easter has been bought by the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. H. S.

LENOX, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held Saturday, March 5, with President G. Foulsham in the chair, and was largely attended, being full of interest from start to finish. The following were unanimously elected active members of the society: Alfred H. Diprose, Rochester, N. Y.; Joseph Manda, West Orange, N. J.; and L. E. Stickles.

The schedule for the year was adopted as read, and the following exhibitions will be held: Annual and perennial, July 27; fall show, October 26-27. In addition to the society's money prizes for the latter show, three silver cups have already been generously donated as follows: Henry A. Dreer, for a group of miscellaneous plants arranged for effect, to cover 100 square feet; Eustace Jaques, for eighteen varieties of vegetables; W. B. O. Field, for twelve varieties of vegetables, and it is safe to predict that the high standard of vegetable culture, for which Lenox is so famous, will be fully maintained this coming fall.

E. Jenkins gave an interesting description of the recent Boston midwinter show, congratulating that society on their splendid exhibition, special praise, however, being bestowed on W. Craig's collection of orchids.

The annual dinner of the society will be held Wednesday, March 30, and is being looked forward to with much interest by the members and their friends, some excellent talent having been engaged for the occasion.

Rose and carnation night is Saturday, April 2, and competition in the various classes will be keen. George Breed will also read a paper on "The Neglected Orchards of the Berkshires." G. H. I.

WASHINGTON.

William F. Gude is one of the judges at the national rose show at New York this week.

David Grillbortzer will increase his planting of Richmond as well as Killarney next season. Both roses have done splendidly with him.

John Robertson will be obliged to move his store from Fifteenth and H streets May 3, owing to the building being sold. This is unfortunate, as Mr. Robertson has been in his present location but a short time. He is looking for a new place.

The automobile and motorcycle delivery mentioned last week should have been credited to George C. Shaffer, whose enterprise has met with deserved success in both experiments.

Z. D. Blackistone finds Killarney a better winter rose than My Maryland.

Mrs. Philips, Fourteenth street out at Mt. Pleasant, has had an excellent season. Her attractive shop has won favor. M. E. C.

OBITUARY.Edward Hatch.

Though not unexpected, the news of the death of Edward Hatch caused a deep feeling of regret in horticultural circles in Boston, March 11. The deceased gentleman had been in poor health for about eighteen months and was never a physically strong man. He left for Columbia, S. C., a few days ago and died suddenly from a stroke of paralysis. Mr. Hatch was born and brought up in Boston, was educated in the public schools and in 1859 left his studies to enter business life. In 1862 he became associated with his uncle, the late Colonel Samuel Hatch, one of the most conspicuous and successful auctioneers at that time in New England, and ten years later was admitted as a partner. The office of the firm was burned out in the great Boston fire of 1872. They then reopened at 9 Congress street, where the office remained until 1896. Mr. Hatch, who had in the meantime succeeded to the business which was moved to 22 Devonshire street, quite recently took new offices in the Worthington building. For many years the deceased gentleman was prominent in many of the larger real estate transactions in all sections of the city.

Mr. Hatch was a former director in the Boston Real Estate Exchange, one of the founders and organizers of the Exchange Trust Co., a member of the Boston Yacht Club, Massachusetts Yacht Club, Mercantile Library Association, Boston Athletic Association, Algonquin Club and Bunting Club.

Horticulturally Mr. Hatch was known to about every florist and gardener in and near Boston. At auction sales of plants he met and became acquainted with many. As a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society he met many more, but it was during his long connection with the Gardeners' and Florists' Club that he met so many of the craft. Until eighteen months ago he often attended the meetings, presiding at the annual banquet two years ago and, as toastmaster, keeping everyone in the best of humor. He first took office in 1892, when he served as a member of the executive committee. The following year he was chosen treasurer, a post which he filled with credit until his death. It was always a pleasure to hear him read his annual financial statement, which was always accompanied by a timely talk on thrift. When the club's fortunes were at the lowest ebb, Mr. Hatch never lost heart and no one rejoiced more sincerely when it once more reached the highway to prosperity. When the landscape gardening classes were organized, $100 from Mr. Hatch was the first contribution to the fund to start it with. On every occasion, when asked to help any worthy horticultural object, he was never found wanting and the name of Edward Hatch will long be held in affectionate memory by all who were privileged to meet and know him.

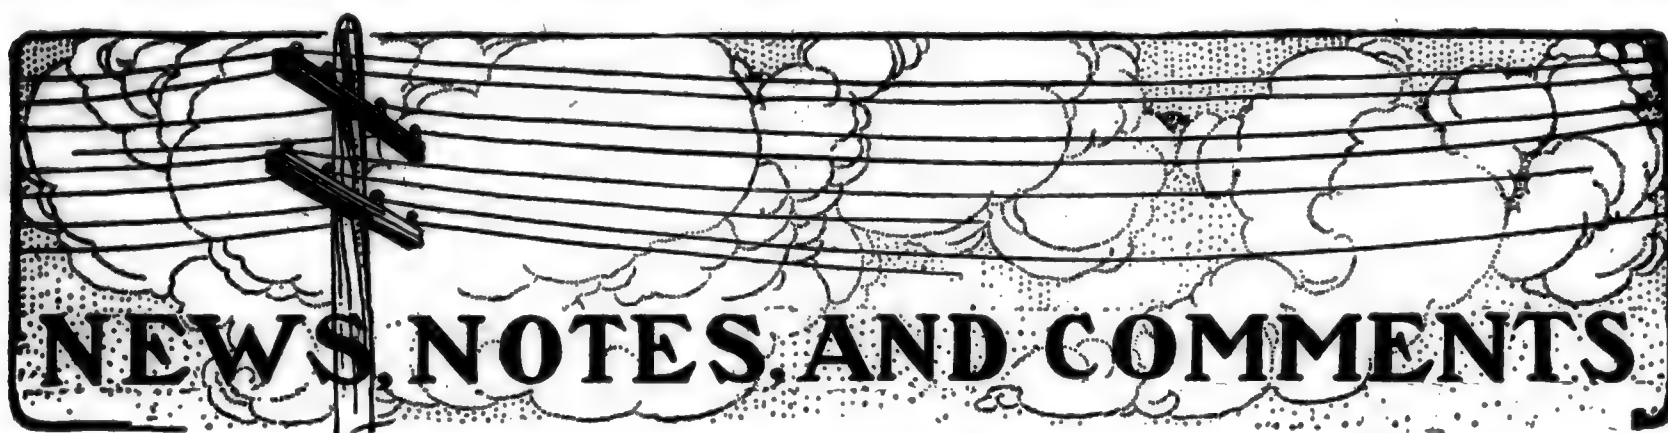

The deceased gentleman was never married. He resided with two sisters at 328 Commonwealth avenue. These and a brother, J. C. Hatch, of the Exchange Trust Co., survive him. W. N. CRAIG.

F. G. Broetje.

Frederick G. Broetje, a florist of Mount Tabor, Portland, Ore., died March 4, at his home, 31 East Sixty-first street. He was 49 years old and had lived at Mount Tabor for the last twenty-six years. He was a son of Fred Broetje, a resident of Oak Grove, Ore. He is survived by his widow and four sons. The funeral services were held in the German Methodist church on Fifteenth street, and the interment was made in Multnomah cemetery.

Cottrell F. Hoxsie.

Cottrell F. Hoxsie, a widely known gardener, who had an extensive estate in the town of Warwick, R. I., and did a large business with the Boston markets, died Sunday, March 6, aged 83 years. He was reared on his father's farm in the southern section of Rhode Island and was educated in the village schools of his boyhood. He was known as a lightning calculator, being able to figure seven columns of figures simultaneously. At the age of sixteen, he was the village schoolmaster, but he was an agriculturist from instinct. After a few years in Providence, he removed to Warwick and became a land owner and the Hoxsie station on the New York, New Haven and Hartford was soon named for him, so great had his farm grown and so many were the men and women stopping off there each day. He had about 500 acres under cultivation and employed about 200 hands.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE white paper consumed in printing this edition of the REVIEW weighed 9,372 pounds, or almost five tons.

ACCORDING to the U. S. Treasury Department, the population of the country now is 89,883,000—not yet all flower buyers.

It is reported that a recent purchase of freshly imported orchid plants by A. N.
Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., approximated a value of $8,000.

THE general market for fertilizers is advancing steadily and the special fertilizers used by florists are carrying their full share of the advance.

WINDOW-GLASS of greenhouse sizes is a full dollar a box higher than it was a few months ago, the advance being practically fifty per cent on the low price of last autumn.

THE counselors appear to have selected W. J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, as the man best qualified for the presidency of the S. A. F. in the year of its second national flower show.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

INQUIRIES must be signed with full name, and address must be given, to receive reply. Signatures are not used for publication in the REVIEW, but anonymous inquiries are not answered.

EVERY advertisement in the Want department of the REVIEW represents a legitimate, actual need—and that the needs of the trade are many a glance at that section of the paper will show.
Watch the Wants—and use them.

THEODORE WIRTH, superintendent of parks at Minneapolis, sends the REVIEW a beautifully printed and freely illustrated volume containing the twenty-seventh annual report of the Board of Park Commissioners.

THERE won't be many Bridesmaids grown another season, and White Killarney will displace Bride to a large extent.
As White Killarney is not a good early autumn rose, its color being off, Kaiserin should be more than ever profitable for summer, as Bride passes off the stage.

CHARLES W. JOHNSON, secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, has issued a tabulation of the work of the examining committees for the season of 1909. The work of the committees was recorded in the REVIEW from week to week during the chrysanthemum season.

WHILE occasionally a carnation is sent out that nobody will buy in its second year, it often happens that cuttings of a variety are in much greater demand the second season than they were in the year of dissemination. If one instances Bay State as an example of the first class he can point to Pink Delight as of the latter.

DATES OF EASTER.

Easter is the Sunday which follows that fourteenth day of the calendar moon which falls upon or next after March 21.
But as the average man is fully as bad off with the rule as without it, here are the dates for the next five years:

1911	April 16
1912	April 7
1913	March 23
1914	April 12
1915	April 4

'It is interesting to note that three years hence Easter will fall four days earlier than it does this year, but that from then to 1940, thirty years, it will not occur earlier than it does this year.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Beginning with Tuesday of last week,
March 8, the market experienced the three worst days of the season to date. The weather was mild and bright, with cut flower receipts the heaviest of the spring.
Local demand was extremely light, and shipping nothing to brag about because cuts are large through all the territory that draws a part of its supplies from this market. It is doubtful if any March will show three days when average prices were lower than they were in the middle of last week. The flower stand salesmen who use quantities became critical of qualities because for the time being they made the market.

Friday brought an immense amount of shipping. It seemed that business suddenly had revived with the better class of flower stores, both locally and out-of-town, but by far the largest part of the stock went to those who run the Saturday special sales. One department store took 20,000 carnations and there were many orders for from 5,000 to 10,000.
Saturday also brought good business, Sunday morning the market was exceptionally active and Monday, as it nearly always does, brought a heavy run of shipping. The city retailers also were buying heavier than for some time. But it was not until Monday that the increased volume of business began to affect prices. While the big orders were being got out Friday it was possible to find anything wanted at cheap prices, with the single exception of white carnations, and Saturday the big buyers of cheap lots laughed in the faces of the wholesalers who tried to push up prices a notch from the low level. Monday's receipts were much lighter than for any day in the week preceding and values were slightly better. Those who had been expecting fancy prices for white carnations because of St. Patrick's day were disappointed. The supply was not large, but the buyers had become so accustomed to getting their stock at low rates that they refused to go beyond the needs of actual orders, unless the white carnations were extremely good or moderate in price; 2 cents to 3 cents was the prevailing rate.

Beauties are in large supply, but hardly can be called first-class in quality.
The special long is better than the medium and short grades. The quality of Bride seldom has been better, and some extremely good Maids are seen, though not nearly so many as of Killarney. The latter always is good and now some magnificent stock is being cut, both of Killarney and the white sport. These and Richmond are available in quantity with stems more than three feet long. The

Killarney

The Rose Your Customers All Will Want

Our Killarneys are in a class by themselves, whatever the length you use—buds better, length for length of stem, than any other house can supply. While we have the extra special for all who want them, the bulk of our large Easter crop grades as select and specials—the length all stores use in quantity.

Also strong on Richmond, Bride, Maid and all other roses—fine stock in any quantity.

LILIES FOR EASTER

We shall have 50,000 of the best Lilies in this market—all true giganteums—just the right kind of stock for the retailers to handle as cut flowers—they will average about 3 flowers to the stalk. Good long stems, from the same growers who have supplied us for the last 6 years.

$15.00 per 100; $125.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

Carnations

You buyers who use our fancy Carnations will be glad to know we are in heavy crop for Easter. We can fill large orders and many of them. There are no better carnations anywhere than our "select, large and fancy," but if your trade requires the "common" grade (ours are as good as some houses ship as fancy), we can take care of you. Let us know what you can use—we do the rest.

Sweet Peas

We shall have an immense supply of Sweet Peas for Easter—grown by specialists. Can fill orders for 1000 or 10,000 all out of one lot, and you know the advantage of that—they're all good. No Peas on this market to compare with our "fancy" grade.

Violets

We handle the cream of the crops of Hudson River Double Violets and ship them in large quantities all over the middle west. Large supply of good doubles for Easter, also a large lot of fine singles.

Bulb Stock

For Easter orders, all bulb stock in quantity; Tulips, in yellow, white and pink (Novelty); choice Jonquils and Daffodils, also Paper Whites and Romans, also Callas.

Green Goods

You can get of us all the Smilax that you need, nice, long, heavy strings. Also the popular green, Mexican Ivy, of choice quality. If you want the best ferns in the market order here.

demand for roses now is for stock running twelve to twenty inches. The special call for short roses has subsided with the increased supply of these and other flowers, and the work which calls for the extra special roses is not plentiful during Lent; this superlatively fine grade will be in better demand after Easter.

There continues to be a large percentage of split carnations and with the market so heavily supplied as last week there is little sale for these. Enchantress, next to white, has sold best, but low prices have been the rule. Except for the splits, quality is pretty fair all through the market.

Last week sweet peas were in about as bad a state as was possible to imagine. There was so much special long stock that the others stood no chance at all, but a change to cooler weather reduced the supply at the beginning of this week and prices were more nearly in line with the value of the stock. Violets have sold as cheaply as ever, but the receipts have not been quite so heavy, with which also is the fact that wholesalers and growers have become accustomed to the situation.

Easter lilies are abundant; it appears that some of the growers are early for Easter and would rather sell now than try to hold back. Callas also are abundant. The southern narcissi are coming in, but in the few days of the shipments they did not appreciably affect the market—there were enough jonquils and daffodils locally grown to depress the market to a point where a little further weight was not noticed. Fancy tulips in colors are selling, but the wholesalers find it difficult to move white tulips.

APHINE MFG. CO., Madison, N. J.

GENTLEMEN:—After using your product for past three months find that it has effectively killed all the green and black fly on double and single violets in our houses—without injuring in the least the flowers, or even tender center leaves. We sprayed our young sweet pea vines, which were badly infested with green fly, and that one application has cleaned out every aphid visible to date.

We have placed order for ten gallons Aphine with your local agents to keep on hand—as we cannot afford to be short should another crop of fly appear.

Yours truly,

J. H. SLOCOMBE.

is not strong. Gardenias are abundant. Fancy white lilac is available for advance orders and the arrival of orange blossoms bespeaks the approach of the wedding season. The indoor greens are selling excellently, the supply being light in all these, but there is an abundance of all the hardy greens.

Easter Prospects.

Everyone seems to think alike regarding Easter prospects. Wholesalers and retailers all anticipate large supplies of stock. There is no fear that lilies will be short, except in stem; there will be plenty of soft and short lilies, but no oversupply of really first-class stock. Consequently those who want nothing but good lilies are booking orders early. Everyone agrees that there will be plenty of fine roses, an abundance of sweet peas at low prices, and any quantity of bulbous stock. Some of the growers who consign report carnation crops going off, but no one takes such talk seriously; it has been heard so often as a prelude to a glutted market that wholesalers reply by urging the growers not to hold back any shipments beyond the Friday before Easter. White carnations have been rather scarce and may be on the short side for Easter. Prices quoted run all the way from 2 cents to 6 cents, partly accounted for by differences of opinion as to what it will take to move the goods and partly accounted for by variation in the quality. As to violets, the eastern doubles are not now especially good and singles are showing the approach of spring. With cool weather violets will be abundant, and possibly overabundant, but with a few hot days they will be in such condition no one will want them.

Some of the wise buyers recall that where the market is agreed upon holiday prospects it often turns out that just the opposite of what was expected occurs. These retailers are insuring themselves by placing their orders now. They all count on big business.

Various Notes.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting White Killarney roses that are a revelation to those who think of this variety as commonly seen last fall before the growers began to take all the wood they could get for propagating purposes. The Poehlmann White Killarneys now have stems up to forty-two inches long, wood heavier than on Beauty and buds almost as large. If other growers can do this variety as well, when stock becomes more plentiful, as it will be in the next year, certainly no other white rose can stand beside it. The Poehlmann city store reports a standing order for shipment to Spokane, Wash., additions to which come in each morning by night letter telegram.

E. Wienhoeber returned March 14 from a trip to Philadelphia and New York, on which he was accompanied by his son, William, who has been learning the business at Pittsburg.

George Wagner, on Indiana avenue, says that he has made more casket covers in the last three months than in the whole year preceding. He adds that they are quite the fashion in his neighborhood, and that no family of any standing thinks it can have a funeral without a casket cover. The average price is about $100.

B. Schilder, who has been a grower for Weiland & Risch for the last two years, has gone to Dubuque, Ia., to take charge of a private establishment.

The remodeling of the building occupied by the Flower Growers' Market is being greatly delayed. It was expected to have the work completed May 1, but it now looks as though it only would be fairly begun at that date. John Sinner says that if they will postpone alterations until July and August it will suit the management.

At E. H. Hunt's they report shipping several thousand pots of Easter lilies this week.

Tim Matchen says Peter Reinberg tells him he never has seen anything like the way the carnation cuttings are selling this year. The republicans did not succeed in finding a candidate to run for Saturday night, March 12, Mr. Reinberg gave a vaudeville entertainment and smoker for his friends at Schmitz hall, Lincoln avenue and Roscoe street. There are reports of "large doings." Vaughan & Sperry say that they think Bride roses should sell unusually well at Easter this year, presuming that the report that lilies are not extra good or plentiful proves correct. Brides are available with 3-foot stems and fine heads, so that a hundred best Brides would make a much better show than a hundred poor lilies.

E. C. Amling says his books show that business was extra good at this time last year. He thinks an early Easter does no one any good unless it may be the growers of bedding plants.

At the Percy Jones establishment Henry Van Gelder reports receipts several times as large as they were a few months ago, partly because of spring crops and partly because of more consignors.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is not interested in an early spring. E. E. Pieser says he never has seen a season so late that their southern peonies were not ready for Decoration day, though he has seen several springs so early that the value of the southern peonies was cut in two.

N. J. Wietor says that he considers business fully as good as it usually is in the fortnight preceding Easter. He looks for advancing prices soon, believing that the low rates of last week will make the small growers hold back more than ever for Easter.

Sunday, March 13, the water was turned off from the wholesale stores in the Atlas block, and when it was turned on again two spiggots had been left open in the store of Zech & Mann. The flood which resulted did no damage to the florists, but it brought down some plastering in the store below.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held, March 11, at their rooms, in Orange. A paper on "Our Native Orchids" was read by Rev. L. H. Lightipe, illustrated by fifty mounted specimens from the author's herbarium.

Exhibits were made by Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, of many choice varieties of orchids, among which were fine specimens of Cypripedium Orion, never before exhibited, Phalenopsis Stuartiana, and epiphronitis, under the charge of George W. Strange.

Joseph A. Manda exhibited cattleyas, speciosissima, intermedia, superba and amethystoglossa; Odontoglossum Rossii majus, Miltonia cuneata and Ansellia cuncta. Exhibits of other flowers were made from neighboring estates.

Some time was devoted to a discussion of the new schedule for the ten months' floral competition just started, and in which twelve silver cups are offered.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The encouraging improvement noted a week ago has continued, the market averaging stronger than then in the face of larger receipts. There has been no general advance in prices, only there is more stock sold at a better average, the street paying more for the leftovers Saturday, March 12, than previously. While there was no advance on Monday on the better sales, a healthier tone prevailed.

The features of the market are the demand for white carnations in anticipation of St. Patrick's day, which has forced the price up; the scarcity of Beauties, and the heavy supply of pink roses, both Killarney and My Maryland being in strong crop. The odds and ends on the list are mostly selling well at the lower level of prices noted a week ago, with an indication of improvement. Greens are in active demand, asparagus being especially lively, followed by good adiantum, with more smilax sold at the higher than the lower price on the list.

Callas are low. Gardenias are in heavy supply, with only the finer stock bringing the market prices. Cattleya Schroederiana is the principal orchid, with supply about equal to demand. Good sweet peas are selling well, but comparatively few go in the top grade. Violets are plentiful and quiet. Valley is rather slow. While there is no special demand for Easter lilies, the market is in healthier tone than it has been. White roses are not in as brisk demand, but the supply is still small, for, while there are more White Killarney and Bride, few Kaiserin have come.

The Scarcity of Beauties.

American Beauty roses are looked upon as holiday flowers. The general market is always interested in this rose as a holiday approaches, because buyers who seldom use it at other times ask their dealers for it. This Easter indications point to an absence of the usual supply. The crops usually brought in for Christmas and again at Easter were this season prolonged through January, the severe weather making it impossible for the growers to get their next crop in time for the early Easter. Dealers will save their customers the risk of disappointment by diverting as much of the demand as possible from Beauties to fancy Richmond and Killarney.

The Easter Outlook.

Prospects are excellent for a good supply of lilies. It is possible that the longer-stemmed flowers may not be equal to the demand; good judges are divided on this point, but for those who can use medium or shorter-stemmed flowers a good supply seems assured. It is possible that all other cut flowers will be plentiful, saving only Beauties, unless some unforeseen weather conditions arise.

The plant market, especially in lilies, azaleas and all kinds of roses, is better supplied than ever before as regards quality and fully as well as regards quantity. Other varieties of plants are in fair supply, more or less, with the certainty that a little latitude in the orders will enable them all to be filled.

The Ontario Street Greenhouses.

The greenhouses of Godfrey Aschmann, now filled largely with Easter blooming plants, are of special interest from two points of view, the economic and the personal.

The economic side of Mr. Aschmann's business reflects the wonderful growth of the demand for blooming plants at Easter. Almost the entire place is filled with popular varieties of plants, in popular sizes, grown for the people all over the country. The business question of how many plants can be produced to the square yard of space has yielded to the grower's demand for sufficient room to finish the plants properly. The large plant and the small plant are rarely found here; it is the popular medium size that is most in evidence. A pretty accurate idea of the strength of the lily, the azalea and the hydrangea in popular favor can be formed by carefully noting the quantities of each of these and other varieties grown here. They accurately reflect the public taste.

The personal side of Mr. Aschmann's place shows a business man of undaunted will, steadily surmounting obstacles that would overcome many of his less intrepid brethren. Strong support is received from three sons, whose enthusiasm for the business and cultural skill do much to uphold the standard of excellence.

Pelham.

Pelham is one of the most attractive suburbs of Philadelphia. The idea in the development of Pelham was that good roads, and sidewalks of the best material, should be made and entirely completed before the foundation for a single house was dug. This idea proved so popular that people flocked to Pelham, buying lots, building houses and renting the houses that the company was building, with an alacrity most surprising.

Like every well regulated suburb, Pelham boasts its own florist. The Pelham Greenhouses, as REVIEW readers know, are owned and operated by Emil H. Gerschick, who rebuilt three of the houses last summer in modern style and will add another house this summer. The Pelham Greenhouses are looking better, under their present manager, than I have ever seen them before. Carnations are a specialty, grown chiefly for retail trade, and grown extremely well. Sweet peas and lupines are also flowered in excellent shape. Just now the center of interest lies in the Easter stock, the lilies, mainly Formosum, being numerous and well grown. Mr. Gerschick said that he had doubled his lily crop this year, in view of the early Easter, and would have them all; a claim fully supported by the appearance of the plants. The rest of the Easter plants were the general assortment grown by most of us. When told of the pleasure given by looking through these houses of well grown stock, a pleasure enhanced by the variety, Mr. Gerschick laughingly said that he would not grow only one thing for anything, as it would make him "dopey," a quiet poke at his visitor.

Mr. Gerschick's sister, Miss Mary, adds that feminine touch to the arrangement of plants and flowers in the shop

The Floracraft Greenhouses.

A representative of the most progressive florists' paper spent a half hour happily with Walter P. Stokes and his hustling corps of assistants in the Floracraft Greenhouses, at Moorestown, N. J. The sight of this pre-Easter season was an entire King house, 22x150, filled with hydrangeas just rounding into form. This sight alone was well worth going a long way to see; the plants were dwarf, sturdy and uniform, carrying fifteen heads of large flowers on the 8-inch pots without a stake to support them. In fact, so evenly trained and well grown were the plants that the absence of stakes was merely an afterthought. The 6-inch pots were equally fine, with, of course, a smaller number of heads. All the plants were well clothed with healthy foliage.

Lily of the valley, the Floracraft specialty, was present in large numbers, batches going in and coming out with clock-like regularity. The stock just ready for cutting looked well, but the batch of 40,000 tips intended for Easter promises to be the finest ever sent out from Floracraft.

The Easter lilies were of splendid size, substance and foliage, with but one defect—they have bloomed shorter than was desired. This was attributed to the excess of light in the house where they were grown; it was believed that in a darker house greater length of stem would have been secured under the same treatment.

Ferns are an important factor at almost every season but this. Even now there are some fine specimens of Nephrolepis Scholzei, a lot of nice looking stock for jardinières, and plenty of futures, so to speak.

The Market.

The cut flower trade is about the same, with not much doing last week. Funeral work is fairly good and this helps out a great deal. Flowers are plentiful just now, especially carnations, which retail at 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen. Roses go at $1.50 per dozen, violets at 75 cents and $1 per hundred blooms, and sweet peas at $1 per hundred.

There is a good supply of bulb stuff coming in, of fine quality, and the prices range from 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen. Some nice jonquils were seen here last week, that were retailing at 35 cents per dozen. Some nice azaleas are to be seen in the store windows at prices that range from $1 up. Callas have quite a demand here and sell at $2 per dozen retail. Snapdragon gets $1 per dozen, and mignonette goes at 50 cents per dozen.

If the weather continues good, there will be a good supply of flowers for Easter. Violets, if any, from indoors will be rather scarce. Garden work is now being commenced. Sweet peas are being planted and gardens cleaned up of rubbish.

Various Notes.

The vegetation is beginning to awaken now. Pussy willows are out and if the spring-like weather we are having continues, the buds will soon begin to swell.

are being put in now. They expect to have it planted by April 15, with roses and a bench each of My Maryland, White Killarney, Bride and Maid. This firm is not going to discard Bridesmaid so long as it does well with them. The cut of roses is extra large and of good quality and the carnation range looks as good as any you would want to see. The plants are healthy, with flowers on long, stiff stems. They have about 35,000 young plants and all are looking fine. Those intended for inside will be planted from the pots direct to the bench, as they consider this the best way. They will plant a large number outside for summer blooming. Their Easter lilies are coming just about right, and there are a lot of them. All other plants are good.

CRIMSON RAMBLER. American Grown. The only stock for forcing. Large heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10, 3 to 4 feet, $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100; 5 to 6 feet, extra heavy, $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

DOROTHY PERKINS. Lovely shell-pink color. $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

TAUSENDSCHON. The new Rambler Rose. The name translated means a "thousand beauties." Color beautiful rose, shading to pink. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

LADY GAY. A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown, 4 to 5 feet. $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100.

Flower of Fairfield The Everblooming Crimson Rambler

This variety is a sport from the beautiful Crimson Rambler, is similar in color, more brilliant and lasting than the old favorite. It also possesses the further advantage over the Crimson Rambler in the fact that it flowers profusely on the young wood the first year. Flower of Fairfield is a vigorous grower and free bloomer. It starts to bloom early in the Spring and continues until late in the Autumn. It is rightly termed "perpetual blooming." 40c each, $3.50 for 10, $30.00 per 100.

Vellchenblau (Violet-Blue)

It has long been the desire of rosarians to secure a blue Rose. In Vellchenblau we have practically approached this color. The steel-blue flowers of this new Rose appear in large clusters, are semi-double, of medium size and keep in bloom a long time. The showy yellow stamens, contrasting with the blue flower, give the whole a striking appearance. 60c each, $5.75 for 10, $55.00 per 100.

Baby Rambler Roses

BABY DOROTHY. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, 85c for 5, $16.00 per 100.

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MRS. WM. H. CUTBUSH. Color intense crimson and exceptionally free-flowering. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MME. NORBERT LEVAVASSEUR (Baby Rambler). Strong, field-grown plants. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER. (Grown as a Standard). The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. 40c each, $3.75 for 10, $35.00 per 100.

BABY DOROTHY. (Grown as a Standard.) For description, see above. 75c each, $6.25 for 10, $60.00 per 100.

Something New in Roses for Florists HALF STANDARD BABY RAMBLERS

These are Baby Ramblers, grown on stems or standards about one and one-half feet high, and will be a novelty for your trade you cannot profitably overlook. They are offered for the first time in this country in the following varieties:

BABY DOROTHY (Half standard). Deep pink. 60c each, $6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100.

BABY RAMBLER (Half standard). Crimson. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY CATHERINE SEIMETH (Half standard). White. 45c each; $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY "STARS AND STRIPES" (Half standard). White and red grafted on the same plant; most attractive. 50c each, $5.00 per doz., $40.00 per 100.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

MARCH is living up to its reputation as the mail-order seedsman's best month.

THE wholesale seedsmen in Europe are busier than usual at this date, for they have been behind with their work ever since harvest time.

CANNERS as well as seedsmen are finding it necessary to pay higher prices to farmers to get them to take contracts for growing corn, peas and tomatoes.

GEORGE B. REMSEN, 54 years of age and foreman of the packing room of John Lewis Childs, hanged himself March 7. He leaves a widow and several children.

SUCH traction engine plows as are used by D. V. Burrell and other large western seed growers weigh from seven to twenty tons, range from twenty to fifty horsepower, cost from $1,500 to $6,000, and will plow from fifteen to fifty acres a day.

THE Holland bulb growers are wondering what the next few weeks will reveal in the way of damage resulting from the mild winter and early spring, with the apparently interminable rains. The bulb fields have been soaked to the point of saturation.

A HEARING was held at Washington March 8 on the pure insecticide bill now in the hands of the House Committee on Interstate Commerce, James R. Mann, of Chicago, chairman. There seems to be little opposition to the bill, the leading manufacturers recognizing the importance of having a recognized standard of quality.

THE small local catalogue seed houses that have sprung up so numerously the last few years, especially in the south, southwest and west, are growing rapidly. While they probably never will become national, like some of the big pioneer eastern houses, they appear to be making good use of the rich opportunities that lie almost at their doors.

"NOT HOW CHEAP—
BUT HOW GOOD"

HORSESHOE BRAND PRODUCTS

Do you know that it costs more to grow the best quality of lily bulbs, or do you think they all cost the same in Japan? It requires from three to four years to bring a seed bulb to exportable size. The longer a grower must fertilize and cultivate his bulbs, the more costly. Now, if a bulb be planted near the top of the soil, it will round out to marketable size quicker than if planted deep down in the ground; but by hastening the growth much of the vitality of the bulb is exhausted and it generally proves defective in flowering results. Therefore bulbs properly planted cost more than those mushroomed to size a year earlier by the hot sun pouring down on them in the fields.

Good seed bulbs, planted deep, well cultivated and matured, are the kind that are sure to root readily, throw a strong stem and produce results that pay the most net profit. HORSESHOE BRAND GIGANTEUM will produce more blooms per thousand bulbs if properly forced than any other brand known. They are properly grown from the healthiest seed bulbs in the world.

One season's failure on lily bulbs of doubtful origin will cost you more than the difference in the price that better bulbs will cost you in ten years.

If you want good lily bulbs, write us. If you want cheap stuff, don't.

When You Buy Your Aster Seed of James Vick's Sons

You are coming directly to Headquarters

We believe it is beyond dispute that this concern, which has introduced more new varieties than any other Seedhouse and grows each year an acreage of more than double that of any competitor, has done more for the development and dissemination of High Grade Asters than all other American Seedsmen.

VICK'S MIKADO PINK-ROCHESTER

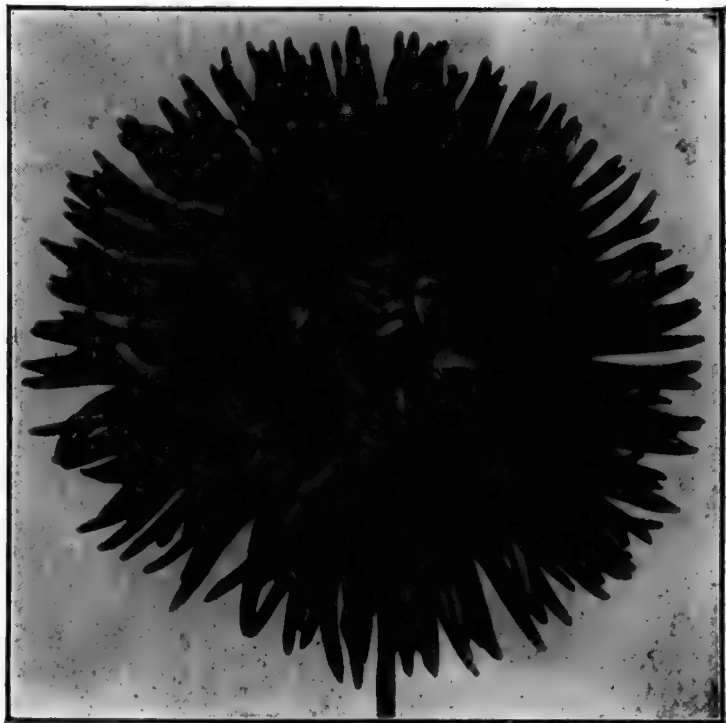

(Cut reduced to $\frac{1}{2}$ natural size)

The story of its new name is of more than passing interest. Members of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, which has recently chosen the Aster as the representative flower of this city, were so pleased with the color, shape and size of Vick's Mikado Pink, that they have selected it as the official flower of Rochester, and have requested that we rename it "Rochester." Therefore, in addition to its former name it now bears the honored name of this city.

During the recent Industrial Exposition reproductions of this Aster have appeared in countless papers, programs and private advertising matter. Thousands of souvenir spoons, watch fobs, and hat pins, carrying a design of this Aster, have been sold by various concerns. The design and coloring of this beautiful flower are an important feature of the mural decorations of the Temple Theater, just finished, which, by the richness of its appointments, in many respects, surpasses any other playhouse between New York and Chicago. It will also appear in the color schemes and figurative designs of the decorations and furnishings of the handsome new lake steamship, "THE ROCHESTER."

Naturally we are proud of the various honors which have been bestowed upon this flower, especially in view of our prediction last year that it would spring into popularity surpassing that of any other variety in the last ten years.

Prices: 1/64 oz., 20 cents; 1/32 oz., 35 cents; 1/16 oz., 50 cents; 1/8 oz., 85 cents; 1/4 oz., $1.50; 1/2 oz., $2.75; 1 oz., $5.00.

VICK'S ROSE KING (New)
Companion to Vick's Violet King
(Flower reduced to $\frac{1}{3}$ natural size)

Nearly every Aster grower is acquainted with Vick's Violet King. If you are not, just look over the catalogues of almost any up-to-date seedsman, or better still, purchase some seed and grow it.

VICK'S ROSE KING is similar to Vick's Violet King in every respect except color. Now MARK THIS: VICK'S ROSE KING in our estimation will surpass in popular favor any other Aster Novelty offered this year either by us or by any other seedsmen anywhere. There is money in it for the growers who get it first.

Price, 25 Cents Per Packet.

BEFORE YOU PLACE THAT ASTER SEED ORDER, LOOK OVER OUR "ASTER BOOK FOR FLORISTS."

Just notice it doesn't give you the impression that each and every variety is exactly alike in its superiority over all other kinds, but it points out to discriminating Florists what characteristics each variety possesses under certain—not all—conditions. The problem of what to grow this summer will be made comparatively easy if you study carefully our "ASTER BOOK FOR FLORISTS." If you have mislaid your copy, or if you failed to get one, just drop us a line saying you are a Florist and we will mail a copy immediately.

Don't delay. Look this matter up at once.

SEED TRADE IN GERMANY.

The seed trade in Germany, referring especially to the big seed growing districts of Erfurt and Quedlinburg, is now approaching the end of one of the most exasperating seasons on record. The winter throughout has been the mildest in many years, and marked by the fall of much moisture, dating back to the unfavorable summer and autumn of last year. Seldom have the processes of drying and cleaning the seed crops been so difficult or so prolonged, and deliveries in general this season were later than ever before, occasioning much complaint from oversea houses that were needing their stocks.

The large export houses cannot complain of any dullness in business. The general condition of short crops which has been almost world-wide the last few years has resulted in an exceptionally heavy demand and in many lines the supply has been inadequate, adding to the troubles of the export houses.

At Erfurt a special demand has been experienced for peas of all kinds, probably due to crop failures in other districts, and the sale of beet has been quite satisfactory. The call for carrot, radish, lettuce, celery and cucumber has been above that of the average year. There has been a fair call for cabbage, and other brassicas have been in heavy request. Onion has moved slowly. Deliveries of leek were among the latest. Almost the same conditions apply to the Quedlinburg houses, where parsnip, parsley and spinach are reported as not nearly covering the demand. Advances in prices have in a measure served to piece out the supply on some of the shortest items.

The German seed growers have noted this season an increased demand for flower seeds. The crop of aster was below normal and many lines were quickly sold out. At Erfurt it is said that gaillardias and portulacas are about the only items on which better movement might have been asked. At Quedlinburg it is said that Canterbury bells, foxgloves, eschscholtzias, Myosotis alpestris Victoria, Pyrethrum roseum and varieties, sweet peas and Virginian stocks were quickly cleaned up and many orders refused early in the season; but nasturtiums did not move as readily as usual and a surplus is expected. The florists' seeds have been in good request, a special call for petunia being noted, with some of the leading large-flowering kinds early sold out.

It is thus far too early to speak of the condition of the crops for 1910, which have wintered in the open. The weather has been extremely mild and wet, which gives rise to some fears, but with no unseasonably late severe cold satisfactory wintering should be reported.

BERMUDA ONION SEED.

The weather for onion seed growing in the Canary Islands has been, and continues to be, the most adverse. Since the planting time of the onions in October of last year, rain has been almost absent, and not half an inch of rainfall has been registered in Teneriffe. The prolonged drought has doomed a large part of the crop. Except in the lands irrigated by spring water, the plantations are a pitiful sight, quite heartrending to any lover of agriculture. I anticipate a short crop.

There is a large quantity of last year's seed crop left in the hands of the rustic agriculturist, who, since I brought about the reorganization of this trade in conjunction with Messrs. Wildpret Bros. and T. M. Reid, have been left out in the cold, and they are, like the spider, waiting patiently for some victim to come along in the shape of a general commission house or general sundries dealer. They are aware that the large exporters grow their own seeds from selected onions, and will not have one ounce of seed from sundry small growers. It is the duty of the new organization established since three years ago in defense of the mutual interests of American seedsmen and American onion growers, to tell them frankly and to the point, that to buy onion seeds, or any other seeds, from commission houses or general sundries dealers is ill advised, never mind how moderate or cheap their prices may be.

Now, the only real growers understanding agriculture in nearly all its branches in the whole of the Canaries, are two well known firms and myself. Always buy direct from the good and intelligent grower, and never through middlemen, so far as Bermuda onion seed trade is concerned.

I have received letters from Messrs. Wildpret Bros., of Puerto-Cruz, and T. M. Reid, who are old and practical growers, fully endorsing my preceding remarks.

This is a timely advice that I give to all American seedsmen who might have been deluded by the offer of "choicest seeds" at moderate prices, made by any general commission house or general dealers, to get all or part of their contracts on onion seed for delivery next July or August.

FERTILIZER MARKETS.

The situation is becoming firmer, with increased demand and large stocks of fertilizer material now beginning to be consumed by the southern growers. In the ammoniates nitrate of soda and sulphate of ammonia are higher. The former is quoted at $2.15 for spot and $2.10 on futures. On sulphate of ammonia quotations have been advanced to $2.80 and $2.85, as to grade, and these prices are firm. The western abattoir markets are strong at present prices for dried blood and tankage. No hopes are held out for any lower prices, as the kill of cattle is becoming smaller and available material consequently scarce. Fish scrap, both wet and dry, are increasing in scarcity, and advances are looked for. There is still a shortage of the potash salts at southern ports and prices are advancing. There is no longer a schedule to go by and prices are nominal and made to suit conditions. Acid phosphate is showing increased activity, bone likewise, and quotations are very firm. The rock phosphates are still in good supply, but prices are well maintained at the former range in all the descriptions.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Chas. E. Morton, formerly with the Redondo Floral Co., has issued an announcement to his customers and friends, informing them of the opening of his new flower store at 206 West Third street.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—F. Edward Gray, of the Ingleside Floral Co., reports that at the opening of the new store of the Mullen & Bluett Clothing Co., March 10, there was the best display of flowers, flowering plants and set pieces ever seen at a similar occasion in Los Angeles. He says it showed the great advancement in the trade in that city.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.The Market.

The long-looked-for rain has not materialized yet. The weather has been delightfully warm and sunny. In fact, summer weather has prevailed until the last few days, when we have had considerable fog.

Peach, plum and other fruit trees are in bloom—and the orchards are beautiful. Many of the flowers are to be seen in the stores and are used profusely in decorations. Hedges of cherokee roses are white with bloom, and the June roses of the east are blossoming freely here at present.

All the home gardens are gay with stocks, callas, California poppies, roses, marguerites, freesias and other spring flowers. Geraniums in full bloom we always have with us. The poppy fields at Altadena are well worth the journey to see. The orange trees are now coming into bloom, and the air is filled with fragrance.

The florists are all making beautiful window displays. In California they all mass their windows with great quantities of flowers of all kinds, with the object of making as big a showing as possible, and the quality is good, as well as the quantity. The florists are not making any special preparations for Easter, as it is not so great a day for them as for the eastern florists.

Funeral work has been plentiful, nearly all the store men having all they could do.

Various Notes.

Frank Smith, of Smith & Fettes, Cleveland, O., was a recent visitor.

The Redondo Floral Co. is receiving the finest outdoor grown carnations the writer has ever seen. They are nearly as large and fine as those grown under many have taken advantage of the lenten season to leave the city.

With a few days of sunshine, the stock shows a wonderful improvement. Carnations are plentiful and of fine quality. Roses are showing an improvement, but are still deficient in stem, though there are hopes of better results with additional sunshine. Violets are becoming overplentiful; the quality is improving, but prices are on the decline. Valley and cattleyas are plentiful and move well. Callas and Easter lilies are especially choice and effective. Azaleas, hyacinths, tulips, and genistas about constitute the potted plants.

The shipping trade has been impaired by the recent floods and snow slides. Some towns have been isolated for weeks. Every road has been tied up and the mails have been delayed for several days. All eastern trains for California had to be routed via Portland.

Preparations for Easter are to be seen on all sides. Everyone is confident it will be a record breaker, yet the scarcity of lilies and general stock is evident.

Outside planting of roses and shrubs is progressing rapidly, as indicated by the advance orders.

Various Notes.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy, of Seattle, spent a few days in our midst. She was enthusiastic over conditions at her new location, on Third avenue.

J. O. Davis, of the Tonseth Floral Co., finds it expedient to take a vacation of indefinite length, on account of his health. A. W. Post will in the meantime serve in the same capacity. He is a young man of pleasant address and well liked by the trade.

The city is again infested with flower venders, who have secured an injunction against the city, preventing the city from enforcing its ordinance against street merchants.

Considerable attention was centered this week on the "aviation meet," which was a success mechanically, but not financially.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to the family of Fred Broetje, whose death recently occurred at their Mount Tabor home. Further particulars about his death will be found in this week's obituary column. E. R. C.

Vegetable Forcing.

WHILE an extremely large number of florists find good profits in a house or so of vegetables, and also in vegetable plants, it is the regular thing for vegetable forcers to graduate into cut flowers.

STRAWBERRY FOR FORCING.

On page 50 of the REVIEW of February 24, I noticed an inquiry by F. E. for the best variety of strawberry for forcing.

H. F. Dew, of Albion, Mich., has a new summer fruiting strawberry which he thinks is more valuable than any now before the public. He has also forced this berry in the greenhouse. It is hybridized from the wild strawberry and the old French Jucunda. Mr. Dew has so much confidence in its merits that he is propagating it extensively in Michigan, and, for a more thorough test, he has grown and fruited it two years in Monmouth county, N. J. It is a strong, rugged plant, with broad, glossy foliage and conspicuous, perfect blooms, and increases at a great rate by means of runners.

Under ordinary commercial conditions, the berries are exceptionally large, well shaped, and dark crimson to the core. In color it is deep red, showing no green tips. The flavor is unsurpassed. The texture is fine grained and exceptionally firm. When a normal spring crop is produced, there is no unusual tendency toward summer fruiting. Plants must be checked by removal to fresh soil and culture. Then, on the new growth, a profuse crop of large berries is produced, beginning to bear in August and continuing into the autumn months. Mr. Dew intends to put the plants on the market this summer and fall. A. H. D.

ROOTS ATTACKED BY INSECTS.

I am sending by this mail a sample of a bug which has attacked my string beans and cucumber plants at the root. I am also enclosing some little ants, for I notice that wherever the bugs are, the ants are there also, and these two pests have almost ruined my crop of beans. I have tried several remedies, without effect. Can you give me the name of the pests and tell me how to exterminate them? R. R.

In the supposed sample package of the pests I do not find a single insect of the kind that is doing the damage. The package was somewhat broken in the mails and they may have escaped. I did, however, find several of the tiny red ants.

I have a suspicion that the insects doing the damage are the sciaras or manure gnats, but do not know how to account for the ants being there also. I do not believe that the ants are doing the plants the slightest injury, but are there to collect the residue from the insects which do the damage. For instance, you will usually find ants on the leaves and stalks wherever there is any aphid. The aphid secretes a sticky, sweet substance on the leaves, like honey, which the ants collect, and I think they are following these other pests for the

THE CHICK PEA.

Enclosed you will find a sample of the seeds of certain vegetables that are used in this form for soups and stews by Italians, and are called in their language "Chigi." I should like to know the name of the vegetable in this country. J. L.

The name of the vegetable in question is Cicer arietinum, chick pea or Egyptian pea, an annual of the leguminous family, little known in this country and seldom used. Twenty years ago it was to be had in bag quantities on South Water street and on West Randolph street, Chicago, but it has not been seen to any extent since then. There was no demand for it, on account of its possessing no value over other better known varieties of the same general character.

There are other sorts of the same vegetable which produce seeds of a different color but are otherwise the same.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THE southern wholesale nurseries that make a specialty of peach trees say they have had a banner season.

To conduct a nursery on a national scale, in these later days, takes a wise head and a deep pocketbook.

ST. LOUIS intends to capture a meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen before giving up the attempt.

P. J. BERKMANS Co., Augusta, Ga., say they now have on hand about all the orders they will be able to handle during the present season.

THE Sturgeon Bay Orchard & Nursery Co., of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., has filed an amendment increasing its capital from $20,000 to $40,000.

THERE is report of much winter killing of hedges and shrubbery in the parks and boulevards of St. Louis. C. C. Sanders says the wet, warm autumn is responsible.

THE Vine Hill Nursery is a new corporation of Mount Pleasant, Tex.; capital stock, $20,000; incorporators, M. Black, E. C. Lilienstern, H. W. Peterman.

It is of interest to know that the strawberry catalogue of M. Crawford, Cuyahoga Falls, O., is the work of Mrs. Crawford, who at 70 years of age looks after every detail of the office work.

THE Dundee Nursery, of Dundee, Ill., has now been incorporated, under the name of the D. Hill Nursery Co., with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators are David Hill, George Wm. Hill, Arthur H. Hill and Vernon D. Hill.

THE Albert Lea Nursery Co., of Albert Lea, Minn., has purchased the Willow Point Farm, which contains 144 acres and is located three miles southeast of the city. A general line of nursery stock will be grown on this farm, while the present site of the nursery will be largely used for trial orchards and for the packing and filling of orders.

W. A. MAUREL reports that the Berry Hill Nursery, Harrisburg, Pa., under the management of E. Morrell, recently moved a purple beech fifty years old and weighing, with the ball of earth, twenty tons, transporting it to Front street from the old Hildrup farm outside the city. The same tree removers recently transplanted a maple forty-five feet high, with a diameter of nine inches. They first dug a trench around the tree, making a ball nine feet in diameter and something over two feet in thickness. The tree was then tilted by means of tackles and a 4-wheeled truck placed under it, after which the tree was lifted to an upright position and the truck pulled out of the hole by means of a block and tackle.

FIRE AT KNOXVILLE NURSERY.

Carlman Ribsam, Office, 31 Wall St. Nursery, Hamilton Ave. Trenton, N. J.

These illustrations show how we grow California Privet here at Harrison's Nurseries—and the way our Privet looks when planted as hedges along driveways, walks, etc.

We have the right soil and climate here for growing California Privet, and take unusually good care of our plants. We cultivate the blocks each week, and during the dormant period last year we cropped the smaller sizes—one- and two-year—back to the ground. These plants developed a wonderfully bushy growth in 1909 and are now in prime shape.

The upper view represents a block from which tens of thousands of plants will be dug this spring. This is the kind of Privet you'll be proud to furnish your customers—fine, vigorous, well-rooted and branched plants, every one. In fact, Harrison's California Privet is so strong and thrifty as to be almost a distinct and separate variety in itself.

California Privet Plants for Hedges By the Rod or by the Mile

Whether you want enough Privet to plant a rod or a mile, we want to supply you; write us NOW for particulars and prices. Owing to the mild climate of our locality we dig our Privet only as ordered; this does away with the necessity of digging and storing through the winter. When shipments are to be made, the roots are carefully protected and wrapped, and in this condition, Harrison's Privet can be shipped to any distance without drying out.

Try us on an order for California Privet; we have nearly 300,000 plants in sizes varying from 4-5 feet, down to 12-18 inches. We offer in addition very attractive stocks of Barberry, Arborvitae, Colorado and Koster's Blue Spruce, Norway Spruce, etc., also Fruit and Shade Trees of all kinds. Particulars on request. ing structures, with practically all of the equipment and implements of the concern and 400,000 grafts, were destroyed. As a result of the fire over fifty men will be temporarily thrown out of employment. The plant will be rebuilt at once.

Judging from the manner in which the fire spread through the building and from the location of what appeared to be its origin, it was thought that it was started by "fire bugs."

This plant was one of the largest of its kind in the South. It was used for the storing of grafts of the nursery stock and at the time of the fire contained practically all of the stock on hand. Nathan W. Hale, president of the Knoxville Nursery Co., was in California at the time.

FREIGHT ON DORMANT ROSES.

Shippers of dormant roses this season find their freights perceptibly increased and when explanation is requested are told that the classification has been changed, so that the rate on dormant roses now is the same as on miscellaneous live plants.

Charles Sizemore, who is traffic man for W. P. Stark, chairman of the transportation committee of the American Association of Nurserymen, says: "We received notice some time ago from the chairman of the Official Classification Committee that they were going to change the rates on dormant roses and similar articles to read same as plants not otherwise specified. We endeavored to convince him that roses in a dormant state should take the same rating as trees and shrubbery, but they would not see it that way, and threatened to place a higher rating on shrubbery if nurserymen insisted on dormant roses going at the present shrubbery rating."

NEW INCORPORATIONS

Among the new incorporations recently filed with the secretary of state at Olympia, Wash., were the following:

FRUIT GROWING ON THE PLAINS.

The great plains of the West are not naturally a favorable region for fruit growing, on account of the lack of moisture. But, as the great majority of settlers in the region must either grow a supply of fruit for home use or do without it, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has made a careful study of the possibilities in the case, and has issued a circular on "Fruit Growing for Home Use in the Central and Southern Great Plains."

This investigation has shown encouraging possibilities for the growing of apples, cherries, plums, grapes, gooseberries and currants, and, in the southern part, peaches and pears. Where irrigation is possible, fruit growing is comparatively easy, but in the great plains irrigation can only be depended on in exceptional localities. Conservation of the scant rainfall must be the main dependence. Much depends on using the most favorable location, selecting the

TRIMMING PRIVET.

Can you inform me the proper time to trim a California privet hedge? I live in Kentucky. J. E. M.

Allow the plants to make five to six inches of new growth before shearing them. About the first week in June should be a good time with you. If you want a dense wall-like hedge, clip several times during the season. The leaves will then come somewhat smaller and the growth thick. Allow time between the last trimming and the time growth ceases for the plants to make three to four inches of growth. This is better than leaving them too formally level on top and sides over winter. C.

EVERGREEN HEDGE.

What would make a hardy, dense evergreen hedge, that would grow from two and one-half feet to three feet high, and that would withstand trimming. It gets rather cold here in Illinois during the winter, having been about 16 degrees below zero this last season. As to having flowers, my customer does not care much about that; he would rather have dense green foliage. H. E. M.

Thuja occidentalis, the American arbor-vitæ, will make as fine a hedge as you could get. It withstands close shearing and is absolutely winter hardy. Retinospora plumosa will also stand close trimming and makes a neat hedge. A hedge of California privet would be expensive, but it would undoubtedly kill to the ground with you, and would lose its foliage, even if it did not winter kill. Ligustrum Regelianum and L. Ibota are much hardier and more satisfactory privets for cold climates. C. W.

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20 x 50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

and the majority of the testimony is in favor of its passage. The Oregon people are opposed to it, however, because their package is smaller than that required in the proposed bill and the California people object to it on the same grounds, although their package is somewhat larger than that used in Oregon. It is undoubtedly true that a standard package would mean a big boost for the apple and also the nursery business, as people will surely buy more when they know just what they are getting.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business for the last week has been satisfactory with funeral work steady. A number of department store openings have kept the palm decorators busy. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful and with a little sunshine there should be plenty for Easter.

Various Notes.

Secretary A. F. J. Baur, of the State Florists' Association, and E. A. Nelson, met with the State Board of Agriculture last week in connection with the floral exhibits at the state fair. Mr. Baur reports that the board consented to allow the association to name the judge and the superintendent of the building. It also agreed to give more space this year, as the space was entirely inadequate last year, and a number of florists announced that they would not exhibit again unless allowed more space. The board granted numerous other concessions.

Smith & Young, of Cumberland, have their own patented cement gutters all ready for another house, to be built as soon as the weather opens up. This house is to be devoted entirely to smilax.

Henry Bakemeyer, of A. Wiegand & Sons, has been laid up with the grip for the last week.

H. W. Rieman is in good shape for Easter, having a fine lot of azaleas, lilies, obconicas, lilacs and Baby Ramblers. He also has some pot Magna Charta rose bushes that will be just right for Easter.

Albert Pittet has been unusually successful with his sweet peas this year. At the present time he is sending in some of the best that have been seen this winter. Mr. Pittet has some seedling peas of which he is quite proud.

Joseph Rolker, of New York city, and Mr. Good, with A. L. Randall, were visitors this week.

Nicholas Gentlemen, who purchased Martin Nelson's greenhouses, is going to remove them to Fiftieth and College avenues.

Sidney Smith says that the Indianapolis ball team is going to be a pennant winner this year. He follows the game down in Texas, as he does while the team is at Washington park, and says we have the material for a sure winner.

SANGAMO BRILLIANT PINK

Experienced carnation growers who have visited our place, and have carefully watched Sangamo this season, claim it will produce twice as many blooms as any other variety grown today. It is not only the most prolific carnation, but the calyx does not burst, and the stem is always long and stiff; therefore, Sangamo increases your profits more than two-fold. We not only invite growers to visit our place to see for their own satisfaction, but we will pay your railroad fare from Chicago to our place and back again, if you will only come. It is not too late for Sangamo. Our best plants were propagated in March and April last year. Strong, healthy, well rooted cuttings ready.

You still have ONE opportunity to get a stock of rooted cuttings of our splendid new Carnation, Dorothy Gordon, for fall and winter trade. Early orders took our entire stock during February and March, but we offer a limited quantity of fine rooted cuttings for April

Has added to its laurels: At the Toronto show, just closed, a gold medal was awarded this Carnation when exhibited in competition with others. Carnation Dorothy Gordon IS a winner—a winner of prizes and a winner of profits, as our customers are learning.

Some of its merits are: Strong constitution—absolutely free from diseases; wonderful productiveness—50 per cent more flowers than Enchantress; good color—clear, uniform pink; splendid form and keeping qualities—flowers last four and six days after cutting; and enormous size—averaging three inches in diameter. We know of no variety possessing all these strong qualities.

Order NOW some of the splendid stock we offer for April. Prices remain the same—$10 per 100; $75 per 1000—and you'll find, long before the season is over, that it was the best investment you made this year. If you want to investigate first, come to see us, or write for particulars—but don't delay, for the stock won't last.

The Market.

While business the forepart of last week was not quite so brisk as the latter half, still it can be said that it was satisfactory, for the supply in all lines was heavy and there was none left.

The prospects for Easter are bright, although the supply, and to some extent the demand, will undoubtedly depend upon the weather. Of late, this has been quite favorable and the prospects, at this time, are that there will be enough stock in cut flowers, as well as plants; in fact there are more and better plants to be had now than in former years, especially in Easter lilies, azaleas and ramblers.

There was a brisk demand for white carnations, to be used principally for St. Patrick's day, but the supply was limited, consequently they brought a good price. The yellow rose will reign supreme, Palm Sunday, for it seems to be the favorite of those who are confirmed on that day.

Various Notes.

Monday, March 14, most of the large drygoods stores held their annual spring openings, which helped to keep several of the florists on the jump for a number of days.

Mr. Bolter, of the Riverside Greenhouses, Appleton, Wis., was a mid-week caller.

Mr. C. E. Schaefer, of La Crosse, besides looking for Easter stock, visited several growers to compare his stock with that grown in this vicinity.

Although he had to use crutches, John Bourgaize, of Racine, was a caller last week. It was his first trip up here since the middle of December, at which time he broke his ankle. He says he is getting along nicely.

Since March 12, Fred Manke, of Manke Bros., North Milwaukee, has worn an unusually broad smile. It was on that day that a fine baby boy, heir number one, arrived to brighten the home. So far all is well.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. shipped over 10,000 carnation blooms to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Friday, March 11.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. made several large shipments of plants to Chicago March 12. They are fortunate in having a good crop of yellow roses these days.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

We regret to report that death claimed Elmer J., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Menger, 536 Twenty-seventh street, Monday, March 7. The funeral took place March 9, with interment at Forest Home cemetery.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

The weather conditions have been better lately. Several warm, sunshiny days have brought flowers out too fast, especially carnations, of which there has been an abundance, with department stores selling them at 25 cents per dozen. This mode of warfare brought the store price from its all-winter standard of 75 cents per dozen for the best, down to 50 cents. The department store business certainly is a serious menace to legitimate trade.

The bright weather has hurried the backward lily crop along, so that they will now hit Easter just right, whereas a week ago it looked as though some would not have enough for their retail requirements. As to azaleas and bulbous stock not nearly as much is seen as was customary in former years, but there will be enough for all local requirements and possibly a few to ship. The stores and wholesale growers, while they claim there is nothing in bulbous stock, have to grow it. There will be some rhododendrons and lilacs. Not many hydrangeas will be seen, but plenty of obconicas and cinerarias.

The supply of cut flowers will be ample to take care of all orders, unless there may be a possible shortage of roses. Of violets there will be an abundance and they will undoubtedly be good sellers. As a whole, the market will be well supplied with everything needed and expectations are for a fine Easter trade, providing the weather does not turn extremely cold.

Various Notes.

Eli Cross has a house of mixed lengths of Easter lilies that with careful firing and a few bright days will make out O. K.

Henry Smith, the Grand Rapids Floral Co. and William Cunningham have enough lilies for their store requirements.

Crabb & Hunter are already moving plants into cooler quarters for hardening off. They have a fine lot of pot plants and every plant will be in just right for Easter. G. F. C.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The first annual dinner of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held at Park Hill Inn, Thursday evening, March 10, and was voted by all as the best ever. About 100 members and their friends from New York city, Long Island and other places were present. The dining room was tastefully decorated, and much thanks is due W. H. Waite for supplying the plants and W. Macdonald for arranging them.

All the speakers took occasion to warmly compliment the society on the excellent showing it has made since its start two months ago, and expressed the hope that success would attend the society in its efforts to hold a show in the fall. A. T. Boddington, the well-known seedsman, acted as toastmaster and his remarks, when introducing the speakers, were both snappy and humorous. The first speaker of the evening was President Bennet, who responded to the toast "The Yonkers Horticultural Society." He gave a brief outline of the work accomplished since the society was formed, saying there were now eighty members, and prophesying great things for the future. Mayor Lennon was the next speaker and congratulated the society on its success, and on behalf of the city offered assistance at the show to be held in the fall.

The other speakers and their subjects follow: "Kindred Societies," H. E. Bunyard; "The Private Garden," J. Mooney; "The Nurserymen," James Scott; "The Visitors," Harry P. Turner, of Castle Gould, Long Island; "The Seedsmen," Albert Rickards, of New York city; "The Florists," Louis Milliot; "The Ladies," J. Austin Shaw, of New York city; "The Horticultural Press," J. Pepper, of New York city.

The entertainment was furnished by the Rickards brothers, comic and sentimental songs; James Anderson, baritone solos; and W. H. Waite, tenor solos.

The committee in charge of the dinner consisted of W. H. Waite, Hamilton Scott, and Peter Macdonald, and much thanks is due them for the great success of the affair. LEE WHITMAN.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Flowers of all kinds were plentiful and prices low, but there was enough demand to clean up everything by Saturday night, March 12, which was satisfactory from the wholesalers' point of view.

Among the retailers there was some complaint, as there has been a tendency to cut prices, especially on bulbous stock and violets, however, they all got busy on funeral work and wound up the week with an exceptionally good Saturday.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is arranging to erect a block of smaller houses for propagating and growing their young stock.

John Bader was confined to his home last week with an attack of grip, but hopes to be about to help dispose of several houses of azaleas that are coming in just right for Easter. He will have an unusually fine lot of blooming plants this year, but does not anticipate any trouble in selling them all.

The A. W. Smith Co. says the last two Saturdays were the best two days, outside of holidays, since they have been in business.

H. L. Blind & Bros. are making a fine showing of blooming plants these days and say they not only sell the plants, but the plants seem to make an increased demand for cut flowers.

W. D. Faulk, of Homestead, is offering his business for sale as he wishes to give his time exclusively to his coal interests at New Castle, Pa.

The Braddock Florist is the style of a new firm which opened last week at Braddock, Pa.

DENVER.

The Market.

Flowers of all descriptions have been plentiful, with the exception of Beauties. White carnations were abundant, bringing the price down to $1 per hundred to $2 for selects, but there is likely to be a scarcity about Easter time, so the growers say. Violets are plentiful, also, and have come down somewhat in price. Trade has been fair. There was quite an amount of funeral work; otherwise the retailers would not have fared so well. The outlook for Easter business is promising.

Pretty little pots of shamrocks, as well as green carnations, were shown all last week in many of the windows.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held Thursday evening, March 10, at Y. M. A. hall. An excellent program was furnished, besides refreshments. An interesting paper was read by Robert Kurth on "The Growing of Blooming Plants." John Berry, state vice-president of the S. A. F., presided, in the absence of J. A. Valentine, who is attending the rose convention in New York. Harry Berry furnished some excellent music. An exciting 6-round boxing match brought the spectators to their feet by the fast milling which characterized the contest.

At the next meeting it is the intention to have a card party and dance.

The Flower Shop, at 24 West Eighth street, of which Charles S. Dutton is proprietor, is enjoying a steady and increasing trade in cut flowers and plants. A stock of extra fine Cyclamen giganteum has been a great drawing card and a good seller all winter. Just now bulbous stock of all kinds, in pans, holds the floor. Home-grown carnations, violets and sweet peas of fine quality find a ready sale. A good block of well-grown lilies and roses, in pots, are just right for Easter, and these, together, with a large supply of bulb stock and a good crop of carnations provide well for an active Easter trade. Henry P. Dutton, the manager of the greenhouse end of the business, is grow-

PREPARE FOR EASTER

Headquarters For Easter Plants

AZALEA INDICA IS OUR SPECIALTY * * *

Stop making
How can I Aschmann's Lilies
And Aschmann himself those goo-goo eyes!

help it?
look so charming,
is so entrancing—

That I simply can't resist; I must send him an order today.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see,
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow.
The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day.
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.
The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green,
With bulbs, and plumed Spiraea, the best you've ever seen.
And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear,
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear.
If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring,
Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

REMEMBER!

Azalea Indica is Our Specialty.

Don't be fooled. Be careful what and from whom you buy. Remember we are the people who can offer you bargains in azaleas. We have the real stock. Why? Because we make a specialty of importing azaleas and having sufficient capital to buy for cash, we get the cream of Belgium's production—full of buds, with plenty of foliage and perfect pictures of health.

Mme. Van der Cruyssen, the best pink azalea in existence, a variety well known to every florist of America and Europe. We have two houses full, as round as an apple. You can hardly see the foliage, the plants are so covered with buds and flowers. Have them in all the best marketable sizes, 6 to 7-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00. NORTH PACIFIC COAST ROSES.

time and inclination to develop the best I could get out of my rose garden. You know the Paul Neyron was up to a few years ago, and perhaps is yet, the largest rose in cultivation. I have seen it credited in your eastern catalogues with this characteristic, and further described as sometimes attaining five and one-half to six inches in diameter. In Portland, in my own garden, I have cut this rose, not once but often, measuring eleven and one-fourth inches in diameter! Perhaps you will think this is a rose story. It reminds me of a friend of mine, Judge W—, of Portland, now passed across to the happy hunting grounds, beloved of all good sportsmen and rose lovers.

Some years ago the judge and I were fly-fishing on one of Oregon's lovely streams. A little distance ahead I saw him scientifically play and shortly land a fine trout, calling out excitedly, "Sibson, a 3-pound beauty!" While saying this, he had taken from his pocket his scale and hooked it in his "beauty's" gill, but lo, it registered only one and three-fourths pounds! Throwing his scale far into the stream, he cried, "Darn this scale! It never is right." I beg, however, to assure you that the foot rule that measured the roses above referred to was correct. While the size attained was exceptional, and was the result of constant and intensive cultivation, it indicates relatively the size of flowers that can be realized in our climate and soil.

Evolution.

Ever since I first knew Portland, when her population was only about 9,000, her people have been devoted to roses, and I believe the same applies to every town in western Oregon and Washington.

Nearly twenty years ago excellent rose shows were held in Portland. In those days the ladies of the city took hold and, by united effort and good executive ability, exhibitions were held that would have been a credit to much larger places. The love of roses, thus encouraged, rapidly increased and every new home builder became a lover of the rose.

In 1901 the Hon. F. V. Holman, a leading attorney and noted amateur rosarian, suggested that Portland be christened and henceforth called "The Rose City." The suggestion quickly "took," and today, not only in this country, but throughout the civilized world, Portland, Ore., is identified with fine roses.

Pacific Coast Rose Shows.

In 1905 the Lewis and Clark Exposition attracted, I think, some 2,000,000 people to Portland, and the reputation of her beautiful roses was spread far and wide. About two years later the Portland Rose Festival Association was organized, and annually in June there is held a "week of roses," including the great rose show under the auspices of the Portland Rose Society. At this rose show last year it was estimated that 3,000,000 rose blooms were used in the decoration of the building in which the show was held.

Perhaps I am saying too much of Portland, but in this connection it is almost unavoidable, because I live there, and have been, and am in close touch with these matters. Other towns, however, in western Oregon and Washington, are developing the same success in their cultivation. It is invidious to mention names where all are interested, but it would surprise many of you to see the beauty and quality of the flowers that are exhibited at the rose shows throughout that section. At many of them the latest introductions of Europe are exhibited. Our rosarians are also discriminating and well posted about their favorites, and woe betide the dealer who is not careful to keep everything true to name!

Shakespeare says, "What's in a name? That which we call a rose, by any other name would smell as sweet." But here we must have the true rose by its true name, that was given to it by its introducer at its birth. I could say more about this, but it does not come within the province of this paper.

A Business Proposition for 1910

Proposed by W. E. Judy & Bro., Mfg. Elastic Glazing Paste, Greenville, Ohio. Orders promptly filled. Guaranteed.

Gentlemen. We have satisfactorily tested your paste on new and old sash; it stays where you put it, does not crack off or destroy putty bulbs when left in; always ready to use at any time; one gallon will glaze 1000 ft. of glass and costs $1.00 per gallon. Very much cheaper and more durable and convenient than putty. With our years of experience as florists, we recommend its value to the public.

growers, wishing to know something about the conditions from a commercial point of view.

I regret to say that for commercial growing, in a large way, many insurmountable drawbacks exist. The mildness and beauty of the climate, so favorable for the amateur, are absolutely disastrous to the professional.

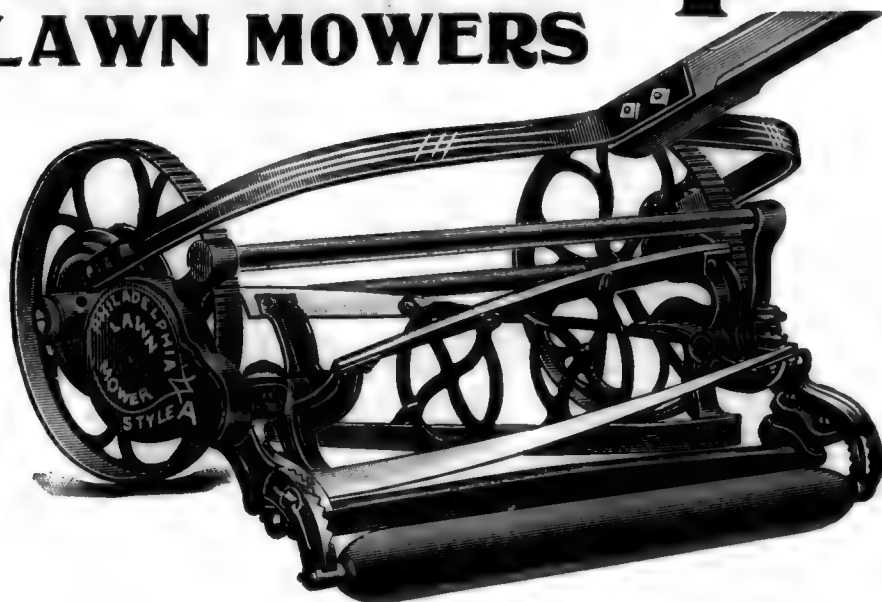

About five years out of seven, the plants will not ripen until too late for distant shipment. I have often cut good outside roses at Christmas. Then our spring usually opens too early. Frequently, when the east is blocked with ice and snow, our roses are budding out and getting ready to bloom. I have more than once seen outside roses in Portland begin to bloom by or about April 8. On the other hand, several times no roses have been in bloom on Decoration day, May 30.

In the former cases, the shipping season is ruinously curtailed. At other times there are killing frosts late in January or February, and in my own experience I have seen the young wheat plants frozen out in the middle of March, necessitating reseeding of practically the whole northern part of western Oregon.

In such seasons the plants suffer such serious injuries that a year is practically lost before they can again be ready for market.

I am afraid that some of our "push clubs" might object to these plain facts, but for all general purposes the climate and conditions which exist in Oregon and Washington are so good that the truth will not hurt either us or them.

Greenhouse Heating.

THERE is less probability of a strike of coal miners April 1, but it will be just as well to have the sheds full on that date.

THE railroads are planning to advance the freight rates on coal, and of course the man who runs a greenhouse will have to stand for it.

ONE of the large growers for the Chicago market, head of a firm that has appreciated the importance of the heating plant as related to the season's profits, after spending a good deal of money in trying out various devices, says he concludes there is nothing so good to make steam as Pocahontas coal burned on the close-set bars of the Martin rocking grate.

UNDERGROUND SMOKE FLUE.

My experience with an underground smoke flue may be of interest to W. H., whose inquiry appears on page 84 of the March 3 issue of the REVIEW.

Almost eighteen years ago, I thought it would be a good idea to run a flue underground and cover it over with hot-bed sash, so as to get an early start with lettuce and radishes. I bought fifty-six feet of 9-inch vitrified tile, laid them out in the field with a good rise and cemented the joints perfectly tight, as I thought, but almost at once had to punch a hole in the bottom of the joint next the boiler to let out the water.

At the outer end I built a wooden chimney about sixteen feet high and on top of that almost as much more hot air furnace pipe. I had a small, upright boiler with horizontal sections and it needed extra good draft. In sharp, frosty weather it worked fairly well, but a day or more before a thaw, the thing would smoke so badly that the fire would only smoulder, so that, between the risk of freezing and destruction by coal smoke and gas, I was in a bad way.

I don't think it is worth while trying to make a flue work underground. There must be a certain degree of heat in the flue, something like 300 degrees, if I remember right, and it would be almost impossible to maintain that temperature with the flue in contact with the cold ground; the dampness alone would almost put it out of business. If it could be boxed in, dry and clear of contact with the cold ground, it might work, but I don't think it would pay to try it.

STACK WITH NATURAL

I have a thirty-five horse-power boiler of the locomotive type. It contains thirty-six 3-inch flues, eight feet long. I burn gas in the fire-box, but the blaze does not go in about the flues, as there is no smokestack on the boiler. I am planning to erect a stack, thirty feet high, this summer. What per cent would I save in fuel by using the stack?

Without knowing more about the present arrangement of the boiler, a definite answer cannot be given to the question regarding the probable benefit from using a stack thirty feet high upon a locomotive type of boiler for burning natural gas, but it is probable that the efficiency of the boiler could be increased fifty to 100 per cent. However, it is doubtful whether a boiler of the size mentioned can be made to develop thirty-five horse-power.

TWO WEST VIRGINIA HOUSES.

Please let us know how much pipe will be needed to heat one greenhouse, 50x200 feet, to grow carnations, and one house, 25x200, to grow roses, in zero weather. The houses will have 3-foot concrete walls and four feet of glass, making the walls seven feet to the gutter. The concrete

Gentlemen:-

In reply to your favor of the 5th asking how we liked the two eight inch collies Reducing Valves we bought of you two years ago. These two valves have been in constant use since then and have given the very best kind of service. The temperatures have varied so much out doors during the past two winters that it was a great saving having these reducing Valves working so nicely that we could control our temperature inside the houses with very little fluctuation. A modern heating plant could not get along without them.

walls will be four inches thick, with iron supports. Also, what size of boiler will be required? I will use 1 1/4-inch pipe and heat with steam. We expect to build two houses of this kind, and also a boiler house, 18x50, made of concrete blocks.

E. H. & S.

For the carnation house, 50x200 feet, it will be advisable to use three 2-inch flow pipes and fifteen 1 1/4-inch returns. The rose house, 25x200 feet, will need three flows and ten returns. This will make it possible to have one flow and about one-fourth of the returns on each wall. The other returns can be under the benches, with the flow pipe to supply them overhead.

If it is preferred to carry the steam through the house in the coils and return the condensed steam in drip pipes beneath the coils, twenty 1 1/4-inch pipes will be needed in the carnation house and fifteen in the rose house.

A fifty horse-power boiler will supply the radiation easily.

INSTALLING AN EXTRA BOILER.

I intend to install another boiler during the coming summer and I have the boiler on hand now, but it will need a new grate. The boiler is brick set, is sixty inches by eighteen feet and contains forty-eight 4-inch return flues. What size of grate should I use, in order to get the full capacity of the boiler? What horse-power will it furnish, using the largest grate allowable, and carrying from five to twenty pounds of steam pressure? Will a boiler of that size be safe with the safety valve set at thirty pounds, if the

Will a round concrete stack, fifty feet high and thirty-six inches in diameter, inside measurement, give sufficient draft for two boilers, the one about to be installed and the one now in use, which is brick set, measures forty-two inches by twelve feet and contains twenty-eight 3-inch flues, with a grate 42x48 inches? What is the horse-power of the latter boiler? The distance from the ground to the top of the breeching is ten feet in the smaller boiler and twelve feet in

22-inch flue from the smaller boiler to the 36-inch flue? A. & H. W.

The boiler to be installed is probably rated at about 120 horse-power and it should have a grate about five feet square to afford the maximum of power. If tested at eighty pounds, it should certainly be safe for thirty pounds.

The stack described should be amply large for the two boilers. The boiler at present in use is about thirty horse-power. If, as I understand your plan, the larger boiler will be connected with the chimney by a 36-inch flue and the other boiler will be connected by means of a 22-inch flue to the end of the large flue, this should give good results.

STEAM IN UNDERGROUND PIPE.

I shall soon start a range of houses, and can get my heat from the coal mine at the price the coal would cost. The local steam fitter says that it will not pay me to do it, as there is something in the soil that rusts the pipe out in a year or two, even if it is run through a tile and the tile is cemented. I should like to know whether there is any way in which the pipe can be packed to keep it from rusting. The steam will have to travel 600 feet before entering the greenhouses. At a pressure of sixty to 100 pounds, how large should the pipe be to heat four houses, 29x142 feet? The local man says 1/2-inch will be large enough. About 400 feet from the greenhouse there is a fall of about ten feet below the level of the greenhouse, and in the other 200 feet there is a rise of about four feet to the bottom of the boiler. Would there be any trouble in the heat circulating from that dip in the pipe? Kindly give any other information you can regarding valves, traps, etc. R. O. H.

While one would have to be familiar with the local conditions to give a definite answer, it seems probable that with

SALT LAKE CITY.

It is expected that Robert Miller and Louis L. Barton, who have united in organizing the new Miller Floral Co. for the purpose of growing flowers in this city, will arrive here in a few days and begin preparations for business. Until recently, both members of the company were connected with the big establishment of A. N. Pierson, at Cromwell, Conn., and they have now decided that Salt Lake City is an ideal location in which to found another industry of the same sort, with the hope that it may finally assume something like the same proportions.

Mr. Miller has held the position of head rose grower at the Cromwell establishment since he removed there from Massachusetts. He has had wide experience and is well known in his own line. Mr. Barton has been in the office of A. N. Pierson for the last six years.

The company will build a modern range of greenhouses and will begin business with a capital of $15,000 to $25,000. The mild climate of Utah is said to be an ideal one for the growing of flowers, and the fertile soil is another consideration which has led to the selection of this locality as the site of the new enterprise. It is also agreed that there is a large radius of country here which can be supplied with flowers without coming into close competition with other growers.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

At the last meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society, Thomas J. Grey, of Boston, gave one of the most interesting talks of the year, taking as his subject "Old-time Gardens and Gardeners in the Vicinity of Boston." Quite a number of our older and well loved fellow craftsmen were brought vividly to memory.

The talk was so well liked that the suggestion was made that Mr. Grey have it printed in book or pamphlet form for the benefit of his wide circle of gardening friends around Boston.

The next speaker will be J. Cruickshank, of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, who will give a talk on "Cyclamens."

PLANTS FOR A PALM HOUSE.

I am asked to stock a four-department greenhouse on a private place. The first twenty-five feet is to be for hothouse plants, such as palms, etc. What varieties of palms are most decorative, also what other plants will grow and look well in the same house? I do not want a long list, but only a few of the best, orchids considered. J. J. O.

Suitable palms are Kentia Belmoreana, the best all-around decorative variety; Kentia Forsteriana, Latania Borbonica, Phoenix Roebelenii, Cocos Weddelliana, Areca lutescens, Phoenix Canariensis and Livistona rotundifolia. There are a large variety of other plants that would grow successfully with the palms. These include crotons in variety, dracaenas, Anthurium Andraeanum, Pandanus Veitchii, P. Sanderi, marantas, Medinilla magnifica, Platycerium grande, dieffenbachias, Cycas revoluta, fancy-leaved caladiums, alocasias in variety, and some of the ferns requiring a warm house, especially the adiantum family.

In climbers, Allamanda Hendersoni, A. Williamsi, Clerodendron Balfourii, Bougainvillea glabra and B. Sanderiana are good. Each of these will require resting to ripen the wood well. Nepenthes, pitcher plants, would do well, especially at the warm end of the house. Any bare walls can be covered with Ficus repens, or a wall of Lycopodium denticulata and ferns, also such colored leaved plants as peperomia and fittonia.

Some orchids will make their growth successfully in a palm house, but should have a drier house to ripen their bulbs. About any of the dendrobiums, of which Nobile and Wardianum are best, will grow well. Ripen them in a colder, drier house. Cattleya Trianae, C. labiata, C. Mossiae, C. gigas, Laelia purpurata, such East Indian orchids as aerides, vandas, excepting corulea, angræcums, saccolabiums, Zygopetalum Mackayi, and many of the cypripediums will grow well if given a side stage close to the glass. The cattleyas, laelias and dendrobiums should be hung well up to the light.

BEST OUTDOOR SWEET PEAS.

What are the four best sweet peas for outdoor summer blooming in white, pink, lavender and purple? When should they be sown and how many sowings can be made of the above four colors to produce continuous crops from early spring to early frost? H. J. H.

Dorothy Eckford, white; Countess Spencer, pink; Lady Grisell Hamilton or Frank Dolby, lavender, and Navy Blue, dark blue, are excellent varieties of their respective colors. If you should prefer orange-pink or light rose-pink, you could substitute Helen Lewis or Miss Willmott for Countess Spencer. The ground where the peas are sown should be deeply plowed and liberally manured and you should sow the seed just as soon as possible after frost leaves the ground. The earliest sowing always gives the finest flowers, and if you sow thinly, or thin the seedlings well when above the ground, you will get the finest flowers and fewer plants will die off. A second sowing, if made, should be put in not later than May 1, but my experience has been that one sowing will suffice for the season, if these are well cared for. C. W.

Lancaster, Wis., Feb. 28, 1910

Aphine Mfg. Co., Madison, N. J.

Gentlemen: The "Aphine" purchased through your agents, of Chicago, is certainly O. K. I have had universal success with it both as a spray and as a dip. Have dipped plants in full bloom, such as primulas, cinerarias, roses, etc., with no apparent ill effects on the plants or blooms, but with death to the bugs.

Would like to ask if you would consider it safe to use on edible vegetables, such as cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, etc.?

There ought to be a large sale of "Aphine" when the people become acquainted with it, and can be sure of obtaining the results claimed.

Yours very truly,

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Since the beginning of the month business has been quite satisfactory at the markets. Flowering stock is in demand, but is a little backward on account of the late cold weather. Roses are showing an immense quantity of buds ready to open. Cut flowers are still extremely scarce.

Various Notes.

We have noticed a few new greenhouses being erected. Geo. Thomas is adding a new house, 18x85, to the three already on his place. It will be used for a general line of stock. M. Cook's Sons have ordered an entire structure, 20x110, to come from Chicago.

M. Cook is soon going to take a trip to Europe for a few months.

GREENFIELD, MASS.—Frank J. Yetter, the Main street florist, has secured a patent on a device to hold flowers in boxes and prevent their being bruised while being delivered or shipped by mail or express. The device, it is said, is in the form of a clip, which is quickly adjusted and is positive in its action.

WORCESTER, MASS.—The sons of the late H. F. A. Lange, who succeeded him in his extensive business and have been conducting the store at 294 Main street, have now secured a lease of the store at 371 Main street. It is said, however, that the Langes may not take possession of the new quarters for some time, as the lease of the present occupant does not expire till December.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The last meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Wednesday, March 9, with over thirty members present and with President Duthie in the chair. One petition for membership was received and six new members were elected, including E. Stanley Brown, of East Moriches, L. I., and W. H. Hunt, of A. T. Boddington's.

The society elected its first life member, Mortimer L. Shiff, of Oyster Bay, and the following gentlemen as honorary members: L. Tiffany, Emlin Roosevelt and Chandler Moore, all from Oyster Bay; A. G. Hodenpyle, Locust Valley; Colgate Hoyt, Centre Island; D. M. Munger, Glen Cove, and Congressman W. W. Cocks, of Washington, D. C. Credit is due our president in securing those members for the society.

There was also a shower of checks for our fall show. We were sure of the goods; now we are sure of the cash, which gives hope of the most successful show held so far. The date of the summer show is set for June 15.

Messrs. Robertson, Eccles and McQuinn acted as judges and rendered the following decisions:

Roses—White, J. Everet; pink, I. Everet; any color, G. Wilson. All three exhibits were of superior merit.

First for sweet peas, H. Gaut.

Cultural certificate to R. Marshall, for two beautiful cyclamens; to J. McDonald, for a splendid schizanthus; to Alex. Mackenzie, for a grand vase of Golden Gate roses; to I. Trepess, for a fine specimen of Cœlogyne cristata, which was really a mass of blooms, making the most gorgeous display.

Honorable mention to F. Petroccia, for primulas.

A hearty vote of thanks was awarded to J. F. Johnston for a splendid exhibit of conifers. We are to hear from him next meeting, when he will read an essay on evergreens.

The next meeting will begin at 7 o'clock. O. E. A.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

THE MASTIN AUTOMATIC WHITEWASH AND SPRAYING MACHINE IS RELIABLE, PRACTICAL AND DURABLE

The tank is made of galvanized sheet steel, and in brass. The pump is of brass throughout, simple and powerful. The mixing device keeps the contents of the tank well stirred up from start to finish.

When the machine is filled to within six inches of the top, a few strokes of the pump will compress enough air in the tank to produce a continuous mist-like spray for 15 minutes.

All parts are made to gauge and may be had for repairs.

Ask your dealer about our Extension Hose, Extension Rods, and the Mastin Whitewash Nozzle for Bordeaux mixture.

Sold through seedsmen, dealers in florists' and poultry supplies.

HYDRANGEAS DOING POORLY.

I have a number of Otaksa hydrangeas in 7-inch and 8-inch pots. I had them plunged outdoors last summer, repotting them with fresh soil before putting them out. Instead of storing them in a cellar last fall, I put them under the glass, where they have been ever since. They are not doing well and do not seem to make much growth. I suppose my mistake lies in not giving them a rest. What would you advise me to do with them, in view of the above conditions?

W. B.

Your plants would have done much better if they had been rested in a cellar. You do not state when you wanted to flower them. As they are now making growth, they should be in bloom not later than May. The best you can do under the circumstances is to give them a light position. Spread them out well. Water abundantly. Feed once a week. Fumigate to keep aphids in check. Hold somewhat cool if you want them late, and give 60 degrees at night if they are needed early. Probably it will be best to grow them cool, as the demand for hydrangeas is best during the last half of May and the first half of June.

C. W.

VARIEGATED VINCA.

I want to get some Vinca variegata. How should I grow them? Should they be pinched back, or do they grow right along anyway? As I never had any of them, I do not know how they grow.

H. E. Y.

The vinca will not require any pinching. These plants are used for edging vases and window boxes and the long, hanging shoots are therefore necessary. They are better grown along the edges of the benches.

CONCRETE IN GREENHOUSES.

Florists constitute a large and prosperous class who make the same uses of concrete that other people do. A florist is just as certain to build his sidewalk of concrete as is his neighbor, and he is just as likely to have a concrete house, or a concrete barn, or a concrete water tank. In addition, concrete is becoming an important factor in greenhouse construction. Every now and then there is an item in the REVIEW recording that So and So has just bought so many hundreds of barrels of cement for his spring work. The day has passed when a well kept greenhouse is without its concrete walk, convex for dryness. Nowadays, too, the greenhouse walls are of concrete. The posts even may be set when the house is built and the concrete walls constructed under the eave or gutter, as opportunity permits; frequently the posts themselves are concrete, and concrete gutters are not unknown.

Literally thousands of growers are trying concrete benches; if they do not build a raised table of concrete, they use concrete side walls for confining the soil in elevated solid beds. There are dozens of patterns of sectional concrete benches, made in molds the same as the concrete building blocks are made. Also, several patented, reinforced one-piece benches are on the market. Every grower is interested because the labor and expense, to say nothing of the vexation of renewing rotted out wood benches under a boiling summer sun, make everyone anxious for a permanent construction. Several inventors have suggested iron or steel instead of concrete for greenhouse benches, and one of the reasons they have urged was that because of its porosity concrete benches would absorb moisture and become sour, unfavorable for plant growth. Now comes forward a firm making a preparation called Aquabar, which is said to be just what its name implies; it keeps out water. It is worth while experimenting with it in connection with the concrete construction in greenhouses.

Without a doubt concrete must in a few years largely displace wood in all building operations. The field for its use in greenhouse establishments is as great as its field in any other industry.

WOOD LICE OR SOW BUGS.

Kindly let us know what we can do to get rid of wood lice or sow bugs—the flat insects that work at night on everything. They are getting so bad that it is no trick for them to eat quite a little in one night. S. N. C.

The means most commonly used for the extermination of sow bugs or wood lice is a mixture of sugar and Paris green. Some growers use common white granulated sugar, mixing with it enough Paris green to coat the granules well and give the whole mass a lively green color. A pinch of this is dropped here and there on the edgeboard of the benches, under the benches, or wherever the haunts of the pests are. If the Paris green is of good quality, there will probably be numerous dead bugs strewn along the path and elsewhere on the following morning, but the dose may have to be repeated several times before the treatment is fully effective.

One grower recommends the use of brown sugar and Paris green in equal proportions, spread along the benches at the rate of about a half thimbleful every two feet. Still another grower says that in case the bugs do not take kindly to Paris green, it might be well to try white arsenic mixed in sweetened bran.

Besides using the poison, you might trap many by laying around some potatoes or turnips with the insides scooped out. Look over these frequently, especially early in the morning, and drop the pests in hot water. You might also dust the surface of your benches with tobacco dust, which the pests do not like. If your bench soil is badly infested, you might use some carbon bisulphide, dropping a little in holes eighteen inches apart each way and covering the holes at once. This will not harm the plants. Do not leave any rubbish under your benches, as that would make congenial hiding places for them. A few cans of boiling water poured into their haunts will kill large quantities.

This bug is found mostly where there is decaying wood or vegetable matter, but it is also fond of many plants, such as Rex begonias, ferns, etc. It seems also to be fond of carnations, though it attacks them mostly during the time of reestablishment. After the carnation plants get to growing well there is little trouble along this line.

RICHMOND, VA.—Mrs. Annie L. Brooker will build an iron-frame greenhouse this season, 28x206, using King material.

LUNENBURG, MASS.—James S. Gilchrist is building a greenhouse for the starting of tomato plants, cabbages and other vegetables.

New Side ConstructionFor Our Iron Frame House

In place of welding the Guaranteed Wrought Iron Posts to the Steel Rafters for the wide houses, we now join them by the double gusset plate, which has two advantages; it is stronger and it makes an easy house to erect, especially with the otherwise very unwieldy rafters used in the wide houses.

Then there is the drip gutter, which takes the condensation from the Ice-clearing Eave Plate and carries it away through a lead pipe, behind the heating coils, doing away entirely with sill spattering.

The sides are concrete and the sills cast iron—a thoroughly indestructible construction, with extreme lightness and great strength in its favor.

Before you buy, let us talk over thoroughly with you all the details of these new houses. It is the only way to make comparisons that are fair to yourself.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Hydrangeas.

With the passing of Easter, bare benches should be in evidence. For some weeks it has been a difficult matter to give plants needful space to insure their proper development, and it is something of a relief to find an opportunity to give growing crops more elbow room. Hydrangeas are a necessity with every country florist at Memorial day and sell well throughout the month of June. Those which have been stored in cellars, sheds or greenhouses, kept barely clear of freezing, must be housed right away. If pot-grown through the summer, give them a liberal top-dressing. If, as is more probable, they were field-grown and potted in the fall, their compost will be all right. Spray freely until they are well started into growth, and never allow them to suffer for lack of water. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night is all right. Full sun, free ventilation and a spraying of nicotine once a week will keep them clean and growing nicely.

Gardenias.

The gardenia plants will now be producing their heavy spring crop. As soon as this is cut, it is a good plan to insert a batch of the strongest cuttings. Rub these off with a heel and they will root more quickly. Heat, moisture and a close atmosphere are requisites for success in rooting gardenias. It is of no avail to merely sprinkle the cuttings once a day. Keep them saturated and few will fail to root. Throw away old plants; it never pays to carry them over. They will only take canker at their collars and eventually die. Young stock every year is a necessity in gardenia culture. Keep early rooted cuttings potted along, giving small shifts. If in 4-inch pots for planting in June, they will give bushy stock before winter. Never allow mealy bug to get any foothold. A pressure of cold water, carefully directed, is the cheapest and surest remedy.

Antirrhinums.

Antirrhinums are now producing some splendid stalks. They are really most satisfactory flowers to buy, as they have excellent lasting qualities. When the first crop of spikes are cut, they can be carried along, as they break freely from the bottoms, and the next crop will come in right for Memorial day. It is a good plan to mark a few extra good varieties and take cuttings from these, which can be planted in the field in May. If these are kept headed down, they will give a nice crop of cuttings in July and August, or can themselves be lifted and potted for an early crop. Pot off or transplant into flats any spring-sown seedlings before they become crowded. These are useful for bedding and do not mind a little shade. Snapdragons are one of the plants which will not stand fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. Even a weak dose will cause many of the tops to bend over and shrivel. Nicotine extract, sprayed, is a safe remedy for aphids.

Canterbury Bells.

The early date of Easter has made it difficult to flower many Canterbury bells, but they are a satisfactory flower during the spring months, being particularly useful for Memorial day trade. They should not be subjected to a warm and moist heat, or many of the tops will rot and much of the foliage turn brown. A cool, airy and sunny house is to their liking, with plenty of water at the roots and as little as possible overhead. Well flowered pots of single or cup and saucer (caly-gether too late to get strong, flowering sized plants.

Tuberous Rooted Begonias.

For growing in partial shade or complete shade, no flowering plants can surpass the tuberous begonias. Bulbs of distinct colors are now procurable at a low rate. These should be started now, in flats of sand and leaf-mold. Water sparingly until growth is well started. Pot off singly before they have made too much root run, using a light, sandy, but moderately rich compost. In addition to their value as bedding plants, tuberous begonias are splendid for piazza and window boxes where fairly well shaded. They are also one of the best summer flowering pot plants. January sown seedlings are now nicely established in shallow flats and will go into 3-inch pots within two weeks. These will make nice stock for bedding toward the end of May and can also be potted along for flowering in late summer under glass.

Fibrous Rooted Begonias.

No matter whether bedded out in full sun, heavy shade or moderate shade, the canthema) Canterbury bells always sell well. It is a fact that they can be grown much better in pots than outdoors, and, kept in a cool, shaded house, they last remarkably well. The present, by the way, is a good time to sow Canterbury bells in order to secure strong flowering plants by fall. Too often their sowing is neglected until July. This is also various bedding varieties of fibrous rooted begonias are extremely satisfactory and flower persistently until destroyed by frost. Such varieties as Vesuvius (also named La Vesuve), gracilis rosea, Vernon and Erfordii, either for bordering or for filling solid beds, are among the finest of all bedding plants. They are inexpensively raised, withstand drought well and are but slightly affected by the heaviest rain storms. The wonder is that they are not more largely grown. One successful grower of these, instead of pricking out the thickly germinated seedlings singly, transplants them in little patches, separating these again as they get established. The plants can be grown in pots singly, or in flats and coldframes. When in the latter, a little bottom heat is an advantage. Seedlings which have been recently transplanted will grow into fine, salable plants before bedding-out time arrives.

Double Feverfew and Candytuft.

Double feverfew and candytuft are two important Memorial day crops which should now receive some attention. They may be cheap flowers, but there is good money in them, and at the end of May the grower who has an abundant supply of them will never find any difficulty in disposing of them. Each of these plants likes cool, airy treatment. Keep the surface soil frequently stirred, and, as the plants get well established in the beds or benches, give them a dressing of pulverized sheep manure or some suitable chemical fertilizer.

Perennial Phlox.

Where it is desired to increase the stock of any perennial phlox, the time to propagate is early spring. In order to get a good batch of early cuttings, dig or carnations. Keep well watered and few will fail to root. Pot off singly when rooted, and any you do not dispose of at bedding-out time can be planted in nursery rows and will produce excellent heads of flowers in early fall. These roots will be right for spring sales a year later. Propagation by cuttings is a more satisfactory method than dividing the roots. Plants under the latter method will grow and flower freely, but the trusses lack the size of those grown from soft cuttings.

Lorraine Begonias.

Plants of Lorraine begonia, partly cut back after blooming and rested for a time, are now producing a nice crop of cuttings, which are being taken off and placed in the sand bench every few days. With a little bottom heat, these do not take long to root. When potting off, use flaky leaf-mold and sand as a compost and stand them in a temperature of 60 degrees. The earliest cuttings are now established in 2½-inch pots and will soon stand a shift into a size larger. Keep young plants quite close and moist until well rooted; then air rather more freely. Do not keep a lot of old plants around the benches after you have got what cuttings you need. They will only become headquarters for mealy bug.

Achimines.

It is time to start the corms of achimines. Not much grown in a com-many people imagine are a fair representation of achimines, which they are not. Secure corms of the large flowered sorts and, whether in pots, pans or hanging baskets, they will be found decorative and useful. Soil such as will grow begonias and gloxinias suits achimines to a nicety. Gesneras and tydæas can be started in much the same way as the achimines.

E. H. WILSON.

Ernest Henry Wilson, the noted plant collector, whose name is now familiar to horticulturists the world over, is an Englishman by birth, having first seen the light at Birmingham, the busy capital city of the Midlands. He was educated at the local public schools, afterward passing to the well-known technical school there. He received his first horticultural instruction at the Birmingham Botanical Gardens as a student in botany in 1893. From there he passed to the Royal Botanical Gardens, Kew, in January, 1897. While there he gained a scholarship in honors in botany at the Royal College of Science, South Kensington.

He left Kew in September, 1898, and on the recommendation of the director was engaged by the noted firm of James Veitch & Sons, of Chelsea, as a plant collector in China. In the early part of April, 1899, he sailed for China via the United States, returning to England at the end of April, 1902. The year 1899 was spent in traveling through Tongking and southern China to the borders of Burma; 1900 and 1901 were spent in exploring the then little known regions of central China. The primary object of the first journey was to secure that magnificent flowering tree, Davidia involucrata. After an arduous search Mr. Wilson was successful in sending seeds of this to England. In addition he collected a wealth of other trees, shrubs and herbs.

His second journey for Veitch & Sons, lasting from January, 1903, to April, 1905, was to the extreme west of China, the primary object being the introduction of the beautiful Meconopsis integrifolia, illustration and description of which have appeared in the REVIEW. In addition to discovering the meconopsis, a host of other valuable plants were collected, many of them now in commerce.

The third journey, lasting from December, 1906, to May, 1909, was in the interests of the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Mass. The year 1907 was spent in the mountains of central China, and 1908 in the wild and practically unknown region of the China-Thibetan borderland. Hundreds of varieties of hitherto unknown trees, shrubs and climbers were collected on this expedition. Collections of seedlings have been distributed to a large number of growers, both in the United States and abroad, and while all may not prove hardy in New England or the colder northern states, the vast country south will undoubtedly find many of them valuable acquisitions.

The net results of Mr. Wilson's several journeys are: The introduction into gardens of over 1,500 new herbs, trees, shrubs and climbers, and some 30,000 lily bulbs and about 65,000 dried specimens of plants for herbarium purposes. He starts April 2 on a fourth trip to China, on which he hopes to still further enrich our flora.

mercial way, these are, nevertheless, among the most easily grown, beautiful and generally satisfactory of late summer blooming plants. There are a number of small, miserable varieties, which nificent collection of over 700 photographs of the flora, fauna and scenery of the portions of China explored. The Royal Horticultural Society of England has already similarly honored him. His lecture in Horticultural hall January 8 attracted a large and deeply interested audience, while before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club January 18 he had one of the largest and most enthusiastic gatherings the club has ever had.

W. N. CRAIG.

LORD & BURNHAM BUILD WEST.

The Lord & Burnham Co., New York, has plans well under way looking toward breaking ground about June 1 for a western manufacturing department.

Fifteen acres of land have been acquired at Des Plaines, Ill., seventeen miles from Chicago. There are railroads on three sides of the property and the company has the assurance that upon the completion of its plant Chicago freight rates will apply. George Sykes, manager of the Chicago office of the Lord & Burnham Co., established June 1 last year, spent the greater part of three months time in visiting available sites around Chicago and has picked the Des Plaines property as exceptionally well adapted for the purpose. A few details remain to be adjusted, but it is expected that about June 1 a start will be made on a foundry, an iron-working shop, a wood-working shop and an erecting shop. It is intended to provide facilities for the manufacture of boilers, as well as greenhouse material, turning out the full line which the Lord & Burnham Co. now is making at Irvington, N. Y. The plans are being drawn with the view to the extension of the factory buildings as rapidly as the western business makes advisable.

The Lord & Burnham Co. has had a western branch in mind for some years. A western office, in the Rookery building, Chicago, has been operated for ten months under the direction of Mr. Sykes and the amount of business produced in this short time has doubtless been a large factor in determining the company to proceed at once with the construction of the manufacturing plant. It is reported that the western office has turned in thus far three or four times as much business as was expected of it in its first year. All these have been private greenhouse contracts, no effort having been made to secure commercial business. The western plant will remove the handicap of freight charges from Irvington and will put the company in a position to compete on any class of houses.

To handle the western business, the Lord & Burnham Co., Chicago, has been incorporated under Illinois laws, with an authorized capital stock of $50,000. The certificate of incorporation was issued at Springfield March 17. The incorporators are George Sykes and his son and office assistant, George Frederick Sykes, with F. S. Munro, an attorney in the Rookery building.

WELL WATER FOR PLANTS.

The following is an analysis of the water which I am now using in my greenhouses: Parts in 100,000—Odor, slightly earthy; sediment, slight; free ammonia, .0030; albuminoid ammonia, .0008; nitrates, .5000; nitrites, .0010; chlorine, .70; hardness, 3.2. Source of sample, well.

Can you tell whether there is anything in the composition of this well water that is injurious to plants? It is the only supply available at present. My geraniums do not thrive, but seem to lose all their roots by rotting. The average temperature in the house is 52 to 54 degrees at night and 60 to 65 degrees with sun heat. The plants are in a house with carnations. They are kept on the dry side, being watered only when it is absolutely necessary.

R. C.

Judging from the analysis given, there is nothing in the water that is likely to affect the growth of your geraniums, unless it is the chlorine, and I know of no experiments that show just how small a proportion of this would have an injurious effect. While it would not require a large amount, either as chlorine gas or combined with sodium as common salt, it would hardly seem that one part in 100,000 could do any serious harm.

To test the matter, I would suggest that two lots of cuttings be started and given the same treatment, except that rain water is used for one lot and the well water for the other, and if the difference in results is noticeable it can probably be ascribed to the water.

Can the injury be caused by the use of tar on the benches or heating pipe?

BEGONIA PINK PEARL.

It is pretty well understood by all in the trade that in England the tuberous begonia is a much more important plant than it is in this country. There is nothing finer for bedding under English climatic conditions, and it may almost be said that what the geranium is to the average American florist, the begonia is to the Englishmen. There are several large firms in England which make the tuberous begonia their specialty, employing large ranges of glass and sending out immense quantities of stock each year. These firms have all been diligent hybridizers and each year send out sets of novelties, just as the American raisers of new chrysanthemums do. Through the efforts of these hybridizers great advance has been made in the plant, in habit as well as in size and color of flower. The accompanying illustration represents one of the season's leading novelties. The variety was raised by Blackmore & Langdon, of Bath, and is named Pink Pearl. The large flowers are almost rose-like, of a lovely shade of salmon pink, carried in profusion. The plant is said to be vigorous and of dwarf, upright habit. When the variety was staged at the Temple show in 1909 it was unanimously voted the award of merit by the committee of the Royal Horticultural Society.

The tuberous begonia is coming into more general use in some parts of the United States and in Blackmore & Langdon's catalogue they make use of a letter in which James Fraser describes the satisfactory results he has had at Cedar Court, Morristown, N. J.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—W. Stroh, of Buffalo, now with W. J. Palmer & Son, and his brother, Albert Stroh, will become associated under the name of C. L. Stroh & Sons, and begin at once the erection of greenhouses that will cover 70x150 feet.

WOMEN WE MEET.

The retail florists' business has many attractions as an occupation for women and each season finds a larger number engaged in it, many of them making pronounced success.

At Des Moines, Ia., Miss Leta E. McMillen handles the retail cut flower store of the Guthrie-Lorenz Co., of which she is secretary and treasurer. The concern last autumn removed to the corner of Seventh street and Grand avenue, taking a large corner store. In addition to cut flowers, seeds and poultry supplies are handled and so rapidly has the business grown that this spring the adjoining store was secured and the partition removed, Miss McMillen's cut flower department occupying one side of the enlarged premises.

LILIUM SPECIOSUM RUBRUM.

How shall I handle Lilium rubrum, which will arrive April 1? Shall I plant them outdoors, or in pots, or on a bench in the greenhouse? When can I expect them to bloom? G. A. T.

I suppose you refer to Lilium speciosum rubrum. April is late for potting or planting out these bulbs. They usually arrive about the end of November. We like to plant outdoors at once, having previously protected the ground where they are to go with straw, covering the bulbs about eight inches. Potted at that time and stored in a cool cellar or frost-proof pit, they will begin to show growths about this time, and if wanted are less satisfactory than those secured in late fall. C. W.

PHILADELPHIA SPRING SHOW.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was opened in Horticultural hall, Broad street, below Locust, Tuesday evening, March 15, and continued until St. Patrick's day was over.

Through the courtesy of David Rust, secretary of the society, I was enabled to go over the exhibition just before the judges went to work, which was a fine opportunity to see the flowers at their best. The first man I met inside the hall was William Kleinheinz, of Lynnwood Hall, president of the National Association of Gardeners. Mr. Kleinheinz praised the quality of the exhibits—deservedly, for the stock shown was uniformly good; some of it was extra fine.

The backbone of the show was in the flowering bulbs and roots, shown for the seedsmen's prizes. Tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, lilies and spiræas were shown in quantity. The tulips were particularly fine. The displays of a single variety in a large pan gave an excellent opportunity for comparison. Of the whites, Joost von Vondel, single, and Murillo, double (possibly this should be classed as soft pink), appeared to advantage. Other good ones were: Yellow Mon Tresor, single; red, Vermilion Brilliant; pink, Rose Luisante, single; Pink Beauty, single; Salvator Rosa, double; orange, Couronne d'Or; terra cotta, Toreador, double. Among the hyacinths, the folties and some twenty-five of each in medium sizes—an effective plan. The varieties were: Begonias, His Majesty and Mrs. S. H. Moon, both Rex varieties; Cocos Weddelliana (there is none better); Phoenix Roebelenii; Ananas sativus variegatus, soon to be commercialized; Anthurium Scherzerianum and Pteris Childsii.

The Henry F. Michell Co. had a unique exhibit at the entrance, electrically lighted. This comprised four little girls, prettily dressed, one about to hoe her garden, another to sow sweet peas, another to sow grass seeds, while the fourth was swinging, electrically, ropes of St. Patrick green. A Wheelock wire fence surrounded the garden. There was a table of fine spring bulbs in front. This was Philip Freud's bright idea.

H. Waterer had two tables, one of fine bulbs, the other of requisites, attractively displayed. There were two choice orchid exhibits, one from Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., and the other from Alphonse Pericat, Collingdale, Pa. Both were excellent. A group of wisterias, lilacs, Easter lilies, callas and other interesting plants constituted one of the finest features of the show. The group was tall, graceful, and beautifully arranged with choice stock—a symphony in blue and white. This was a masterpiece of Samuel Bachelor. Two exhibits of fancy, long-stemmed snapdragons showed culture in a rare degree. There were fine exhibits of roses, carnations and sweet peas, also some wonderful specimen azaleas, perfectly flowered.

The foregoing are a few of the exhibits noted in a pretty show.

The Lord & Burnham Co. exhibited good photographs of their greenhouses and conservatories, an orchid house in bloom being a feature. PHIL.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Convention Aftermath.

It has been demonstrated time and again that it takes a whole lot of publicity to attract the attention of any considerable part of the people of a big city to the fact that a flower show is worth visiting. The New York newspapers did not give the Rose Society the publicity that had been hoped for, but it is estimated that 20,000 people visited the exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History last week. The attendance was largest as closing time approached, showing that word of the fine display was going out from mouth to mouth among the people. While the attendance of the general public was large, the attendance of the trade was disappointing. Those from outside the New York territory numbered less than two score. While the show was larger than last year, a number of first-class special premiums were not competed for and few entries characterized most of the classes. The quality of the stock was shown by its condition at the closing hour. If nothing but roses with this keeping quality were placed in the hands of the public it would be an immense advantage to the rose growing industry. The quality of A. Farenwald's Richmond, judged the best finished lot of flowers in the show, gave rise to much comment.

Club Banquet.

The annual dinner of the Florists' Club, March 17, at which the Rose Society visitors were present, was a great success. Nearly 300 were in attendance, including many ladies. The early reception crowded the halls and room provided to overflowing. The big dining-room was none too large for the crowd, and the happy arrangement of the tables and the grouping of friends added to the general harmony. The decorations were quite elaborate, every table having an abundance of orchids, roses or carnations. Large quantities of wild smilax on the walls and pillars added to the charming effect. The Sunday World declared that the decorations represented an outlay of $10,000 and published the photos of the leading officials of the club. The dinner itself was excellent and there was much exhilaration on the side. The acoustic properties of the big room are not perfect and it required a stentorian voice to reach the limit. Next year the club will doubtless try the Astor. "Going up" seems to be its watchword. The program was an extensive one and the artists and speakers all fulfilled expectations. Messrs. Craig, Manda, Pierson, Poehlmann, Connell and Miller were the orators of the night. P. O'Mara was a great success as toastmaster and splendid songs and music were furnished by Misses Dorsell, Pollock and Barnett, and Messrs. Brante, Kelly, Hayes and Master

WOMEN WE MEET.

The retail florists' business has many attractions as an occupation for women and each season finds a larger number engaged in it, many of them making pronounced success.

At Des Moines, Ia., Miss Leta E. McMillen handles the retail cut flower store of the Guthrie-Lorenz Co., of which she is secretary and treasurer. The concern last autumn removed to the corner of Seventh street and Grand avenue, taking a large corner store. In addition to cut flowers, seeds and poultry supplies are handled and so rapidly has the business grown that this spring the adjoining store was secured and the partition removed. FLORISTS' COURSE AT AMHERST.

The short course in floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., closed March 11. It is to be regretted that so few took advantage of the excellent opportunities to avail themselves of practical and theoretical information along floricultural lines, and it is hoped the course may be more largely attended next year. While it is difficult to arrange a course which will meet the needs of all classes of students, the aim is to give the beginner as much elementary information as possible, without neglecting those who are more advanced, and at the same time to make the work sufficiently scientific to satisfy the needs of those who have been longer in the business.

The talks by the various practical men who have generously assisted in the course have again proved most valuable. Aside from the speakers previously noted, C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., gave a most excellent talk on chrysanthemums. J. K. Shaw, of the horticultural division of the Experiment Station, spoke on the principles of plant breeding, and H. D. Haskins, of the chemical division of the Experiment Station, gave a valuable talk on fertilizers for greenhouse crops.

All the young men had positions when the course was completed and several more might have been placed. The demand for men was greater than the supply.

Some important changes are planned for the course next year. The morning will be occupied in class-room work and lectures will be given on such subjects as the management of greenhouses, greenhouse crops, fertilizers, insects, diseases and like subjects. In the afternoon the class will be divided into two sections. One section will consist of those students who have little knowledge of floricultural work, and the time will be spent in practical work in the greenhouses. The other section will consist of men of considerable practical training, and the afternoon will be spent on assigned reading or some special branch of research. It is hoped in this way to meet the needs of all taking the course.

The Saturday observation trips proved especially profitable. The following are among the ranges visited: H. W. Field's, Northampton; A. N. Pierson's, Cromwell, Conn.; the Montgomery Co.'s, Hadley; Smith College Conservatories, Northampton; Mt. Holyoke College Conservatories, South Hadley; Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick; Wm. Nicholson's and S. J. Goddard's, Framingham; Butterworth's, South Framingham; Peter Fisher's, Ellis; Geo. Sinclair's, Holyoke, and Wm. Sim's, Cliftondale. Full notes on each of these trips were required.

The Massachusetts Agricultural College stands ready to assist the state florists in every way possible; the mission of the floricultural department is to be of service to the practical growers and retail men. This can be accomplished only through the most cordial cooperation. The support the college is receiving from these practical men is most gratifying.

TEN WEEKS' STOCKS.

Should ten weeks' stocks be grown in flats or singly in pots and are they used for cutting or pot plants? E. C.

Ten weeks' stocks can be pricked off in flats or potted singly. The latter method entails more labor, but is the more satisfactory. These stocks can be sold as pot plants, but are but little used in this way. They are excellent for cutting. Outdoor grown flowers are usually inferior in length of stem and purity of flowers to such as are produced under glass. By sowing seed at once and benching when of sufficient size, you will get a crop by June. If, however, you have seedlings ready to transplant, you could get them in for Memorial day in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees.

C. W.

LUPINES FOR WINTER.

When should seed of the blue lupine be sown to get stock for winter forcing? Please give brief cultural directions and state the temperature required.

E. C.

Seeds of the annual blue lupine, if wanted for Christmas or during January, should be sown about August 20. The annual pink lupine is a better winter bloomer and by getting in the seed about September 10 it can be had for Christmas. Seeds sown during October will bloom during February and March. Sow the seeds on a bench and thin the blue varieties out to ten inches apart in the rows, allowing eighteen inches between the rows. The pink varieties can go much closer, being of more slender growth, with small foliage. A cool house, not over 45 degrees at night in winter, suits them best. While the pink varieties come in crop almost at once, the blue forms bloom for a number of weeks. Soil such as is used for chrysanthemums is all right.

BEDDING PLANTS IN SHADE.

I have several beds to plant for customers and want to get the right stock in soon. Some of the beds are situated either partially or wholly in the shade of trees. Aside from zonal geraniums and coleus, what other plants could be used to good advantage in such places? Will you name a half dozen or so good carpet bedding plants, also a few of the best flowering cannas that could be used in partial shade? L. R. K.

While the bulk of the bedding plants prefer full sunshine, there are quite a number which will succeed well in partial shade, while a few do well in quite heavy shade. For the latter position tuberous rooted begonias are the most showy, persistent flowering and generally satisfactory plants. Fuchsias do well in fairly heavy shade, but are a failure in full sunshine. The fibrous rooted begonias do splendidly, no matter whether planted in full sun, partial shade or heavy shade, and flower continuously until cut down by frost. Good varieties of these are: Vernon, Erfordii, Vesuvius and gracilis rosea.

None of the flowering cannas do well in shade, but where they will get two or three hours of sun daily they will bloom satisfactorily. A few reliable varieties are: Souvenir d'Antoine Crozy, Crimson Bedder, Antoine Wintzer, Tarrytown, Queen Charlotte, Alphonse Bouvier, Beaute Poitevine and Yellow Bird.

A few carpet bedding plants you could use in partial shade are: Alternanthera brilliantissima, A. aurea nana, Santolina maritima, Echeveria metallica, E. secunda glauca, Lobelia Emperor William, Alyssum Little Gem.

The following other plants will grow and flower satisfactorily in partial shade: Salvia splendens, Vinca rosea, V. alba, verbenas, panies, Nicotiana affinis, N.

Sanderæ, mignonette, Calceolaria Golden Bedder, lantanas and ageratum. Flowering geraniums do not succeed well in shade, but Mme. Salleroi and Bijou can be grown for foliage. Many grasses, such as Pennisetum Rupelianum, and some perennials, like Funkia subcordata variegata, can also be grown.

NAME OF PLANTS.

Please find enclosed slip of foliage from Florida, for which we would like to have the name. A lady gave it to us from Florida and she says they have it down there as a border plant. It resembles the clover leaf. I am also sending you a fern leaf. Will you kindly give me the name of it?

J. R. C.

The first described plant is a pteris, or Pellaea adiantifolia, and the second is an adiantum, but I cannot be certain of its identity.

C. W.

OUTDOOR ASTERS.

Will you kindly give me information as to how I should manage a piece of land, something less than an acre, which I wish to put into asters? I have no glass this year. Can I, by starting the seeds as early as possible outdoors, secure plants that will give me a good commercial crop in Connecticut? The last frost in spring comes about May 12, and the first in the fall of last year was about the middle of October.

What varieties would you suggest? What do such flowers command at wholesale? I am a dahlia grower and have had considerable experience under glass, but no experience with asters outdoors. With a good grade of seed, about how many plants could one depend upon from an ounce of seed?

H. B. G.

If the piece of land is in grass, it would have been better plowed and allowed to remain rough over winter.

Failing this, break it up as soon as the ground is in a fit condition in spring. Give it a good coating of barnyard manure—well rotted cow manure if the land is light, or horse manure if heavy. Harrow this into the ground thoroughly. Later use a smoothing harrow. Some complete fertilizer may also be used in addition to the manure. We would, however, put this on when the plants are well established and growing, running the cultivator through the rows afterward; 300 to 400 pounds per acre should suffice, or 100 pounds of guano will also answer well.

If you have a coldframe, you can start seeds early in April, transplanting them from the middle to the end of May. If, however, you want to sow altogether outdoors, you can do so and secure excellent results. For the earliest varieties, such as Queen of the Market, sow about April 20. Use some cheesecloth for protection in case of late frosts. The midseason and late branching sorts can be sown from the beginning to the middle of May and transplanted on moist, cloudy days when of sufficient size.

The early sorts can go somewhat closer than the late ones. Let the rows of the early ones be twenty-four to thirty inches apart and allow nine inches between the plants. The late sorts should have thirty-six inches between the rows, to permit of easy cultivation, and the plants can be set twelve to fifteen inches apart.

There is more money in early and late asters than in midseason ones. Seeing that you cannot produce early ones, as those can who have greenhouses or frames to start their seed in, it will be better to depend on the late varieties. Of these, Vick's Branching, Semple's, Pink Beauty and Crego's Giant Comet are first-class sorts, the first two being deservedly popular commercially.

Prices vary according to supply and demand. Last year the earliest flowers would bring $2 per hundred, with a gradual drop to $1, 75 cents, 50 cents and even lower; probably 35 cents per hundred would be a fair average price for your crop, taking it right through. If they grow and flower satisfactorily, they will pay well at this low figure. First-class flowers of the late varieties often bring $2 to $3 per hundred, but the general average is much lower.

Use a horse or hand cultivator freely all summer. This is far better than any attempt at watering. With good soil and keeping the surface constantly tickled, asters will stand a surprising amount of dry weather. Last summer was an exceptionally dry one, but asters were more numerous and of better quality than ever before.

Asters are fairly hardy and will withstand several degrees of frost without injury. In purchasing seed, secure the best quality only. Perhaps some other large aster growers can give an idea how many aster plants an ounce of good seed should produce.

W. C.

OUTDOOR LILY OF THE VALLEY

I have a fine lot of lily of the valley in the open ground and I want to propagate. When is the best time to transplant and how should they be treated? I want them altogether for outdoor growing. I live in Indiana.

E. T. B.

Fall is the best time to transplant lily of the valley, October being an excellent month. Next to that period, transplanting is most successful if done as soon as possible after frost leaves the ground, which with you should be in the early part of April. The ground should be plowed or spaded deeply and liberally manured for the best results. If set out in rows across the field, allow twenty-four inches between the rows and set the pips five to six inches apart. If in beds you can plant rows twelve inches apart, allowing a 24-inch patch between every fifth row. Give the plants a liberal mulch of well-decayed manure each fall.

Casey. It was a night long to be remembered and reflected great credit upon W. F. Sheridan and J. B. Nugent, Jr., who had charge of the arrangements.

FLORISTS' COURSE AT AMHERST.

The short course in floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., closed March 11. It is to be regretted that so few took advantage of the excellent opportunities to avail themselves of practical and theoretical information along floricultural lines, and it is hoped the course may be more largely attended next year. While it is difficult to arrange a course which will meet the needs of all classes of students, the aim is to give the beginner as much elementary information as possible, without neglecting those who are more advanced, and at the same time to make the work sufficiently scientific to satisfy the needs of those who have been longer in the business.

The talks by the various practical men who have generously assisted in the course have again proved most valuable. Aside from the speakers previously noted, C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., gave a most excellent talk on chrysanthemums. J. K. Shaw, of the horticultural division of the Experiment Station, spoke on the principles of plant breeding, and H. D. Haskins, of the chemical division of the Experiment Station, gave a valuable talk on fertilizers for greenhouse crops.

All the young men had positions when the course was completed and several more might have been placed. The demand for men was greater than the supply.

Some important changes are planned for the course next year. The morning will be occupied in class-room work and lectures will be given on such subjects as the management of greenhouses, greenhouse crops, fertilizers, insects, diseases and like subjects. In the afternoon the class will be divided into two sections. One section will consist of those students who have little knowledge of floricultural work, and the time will be spent in practical work in the greenhouses. The other section will consist of men of considerable practical training, and the afternoon will be spent on assigned reading or some special branch of research. It is hoped in this way to meet the needs of all taking the course.

The Saturday observation trips proved especially profitable. The following are among the ranges visited: H. W. Field's, Northampton; A. N. Pierson's, Cromwell, Conn.; the Montgomery Co.'s, Hadley; Smith College Conservatories, Northampton; Mt. Holyoke College Conservatories, South Hadley; Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick; Wm. Nicholson's and S. J. Goddard's, Framingham; Butterworth's, South Framingham; Peter Fisher's, Ellis; Geo. Sinclair's, Holyoke, and Wm. Sim's, Cliftondale. Full notes on each of these trips were required.

The Massachusetts Agricultural College stands ready to assist the state florists in every way possible; the mission of the floricultural department is to be of service to the practical growers and retail men. This can be accomplished only through the most cordial coöperation. The support the college is receiving from these practical men is most gratifying.

TEN WEEKS' STOCKS.

Should ten weeks' stocks be grown in flats or singly in pots and are they used for cutting or pot plants? E. C.

Ten weeks' stocks can be pricked off in flats or potted singly. The latter method entails more labor, but is the more satisfactory. These stocks can be sold as pot plants, but are but little used in this way. They are excellent for cutting. Outdoor grown flowers are usually inferior in length of stem and purity of flowers to such as are produced under glass. By sowing seed at once and benching when of sufficient size, you will get a crop by June. If, however, you have seedlings ready to transplant, you could get them in for Memorial day in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees.

C. W.

LUPINES FOR WINTER.

When should seed of the blue lupine be sown to get stock for winter forcing? Please give brief cultural directions and state the temperature required.

E. C.

Seeds of the annual blue lupine, if wanted for Christmas or during January, should be sown about August 20. The annual pink lupine is a better winter bloomer and by getting in the seed about September 10 it can be had for Christmas. Seeds sown during October will bloom during February and March. Sow the seeds on a bench and thin the blue varieties out to ten inches apart in the rows, allowing eighteen inches between the rows. The pink varieties can be much closer, being of more slender growth, with small foliage. A cool house not over 45 degrees at night in winter suits them best. While the pink varieties come in crop almost at once, the blue forms bloom for a number of weeks. Soil such as is used for chrysanthemums is all right.

BEDDING PLANTS IN SHADE.

I have several beds to plant for customers and want to get the right stock in soon. Some of the beds are situated either partially or wholly in the shade of trees. Aside from zonal geraniums and coleus, what other plants could be used to good advantage in such places? Will you name a half dozen or so good carpet bedding plants, also a few of the best flowering cannas that could be used in partial shade?

While the bulk of the bedding plants prefer full sunshine, there are quite a number which will succeed well in partial shade, while a few do well in quite heavy shade. For the latter position tuberous rooted begonias are the most showy, persistent flowering and generally satisfactory plants. Fuchsias do well in fairly heavy shade, but are a failure in full sunshine. The fibrous rooted begonias do splendidly, no matter whether planted in full sun, partial shade or heavy shade, and flower continuously until cut down by frost. Good varieties of these are: Vernon, Erfordii, Vesuvius and gracilis rosea.

None of the flowering cannas do well in shade, but where they will get two or three hours of sun daily they will bloom satisfactorily. A few reliable varieties are: Souvenir d'Antoine Crozy, Crimson Bedder, Antoine Wintzer, Tarrytown, Queen Charlotte, Alphonse Bouvier, Beaute Poitevine and Yellow Bird.

A few carpet bedding plants you could use in partial shade are: Alternanthera brilliantissima, A. aurea nana, Santolina maritima, Echeveria metallica, E. secunda glauca, Lobelia Emperor William, Alyssum Little Gem.

The following other plants will grow and flower satisfactorily in partial shade: Salvia splendens, Vinca rosea, V. alba, verbenas, panies, Nicotiana affinis, N.

Sanderæ, mignonette, Calceolaria Golden Bedder, lantanas and ageratum. Flowering geraniums do not succeed well in shade, but Mme. Salleroi and Bijou can be grown for foliage. Many grasses, such as Pennisetum Rupelianum, and some perennials, like Funkia subcordata variegata, can also be grown.

NAME OF PLANTS.

Please find enclosed slip of foliage from Florida, for which we would like to have the name. A lady gave it to us from Florida and she says they have it down there as a border plant. It resembles the clover leaf. I am also sending you a fern leaf. Will you kindly give me the name of it?

J. R. C.

The first described plant is a pteris, or Pellaea adiantifolia, and the second is an adiantum, but I cannot be certain of its identity.

C. W.

OUTDOOR ASTERS.

Will you kindly give me information to how I should manage a piece of land, something less than an acre, which I wish to put into asters? I have no experience this year. Can I, by starting the seeds as early as possible outdoors, secure plants that will give me a good commercial crop in Connecticut? The first frost in spring comes about May 12, the first in the fall of last year was at the middle of October.

What varieties would you suggest? What do such flowers command at wholesale? I am a dahlia grower and have considerable experience under glass, but no experience with asters outdoors. With a good grade of seed, about how many plants could one depend upon from an ounce of seed?

H. B. G.

Failing this, break it up as soon as the ground is in a fit condition in spring. Give it a good coating of barnyard manure—well rotted cow manure if the land is light, or horse manure if heavy. Harrow this into the ground thoroughly. Later use a smoothing harrow. Some complete fertilizer may also be used in addition to the manure. We would, however, put this on when the plants are well established and growing, running the cultivator through the rows afterward; 300 to 400 pounds per acre should suffice, or 100 pounds of guano will also answer well.

If you have a coldframe, you can start seeds early in April, transplanting them from the middle to the end of May. If, however, you want to sow altogether outdoors, you can do so and secure excellent results. For the earliest varieties, such as Queen of the Market, sow about April 20. Use some cheesecloth for protection in case of late frosts. The midseason and late branching sorts can be sown from the beginning to the middle of May and transplanted on moist, cloudy days when of sufficient size.

The early sorts can go somewhat closer than the late ones. Let the rows of the early ones be twenty-four to thirty inches apart and allow nine inches between the plants. The late sorts should have thirty-six inches between the rows, to permit of easy cultivation, and the plants can be set twelve to fifteen inches apart.

There is more money in early and late asters than in midseason ones. Seeing that you cannot produce early ones, as those can who have greenhouses or frames to start their seed in, it will be better to depend on the late varieties. Of these, Vick's Branching, Semple's, Pink Beauty and Crego's Giant Comet are first-class sorts, the first two being deservedly popular commercially.

Prices vary according to supply and demand. Last year the earliest flowers would bring $2 per hundred, with a gradual drop to $1.75 cents, 50 cents and even lower; probably 35 cents per hundred would be a fair average price for your crop, taking it right through. If they grow and flower satisfactorily, they will pay well at this low figure. First-class flowers of the late varieties often bring $2 to $3 per hundred, but the general average is much lower.

Use a horse or hand cultivator freely all summer. This is far better than any attempt at watering. With good soil and keeping the surface constantly tickled, asters will stand a surprising amount of dry weather. Last summer was an exceptionally dry one, but asters were more numerous and of better quality than ever before.

Asters are fairly hardy and will withstand several degrees of frost without injury. In purchasing seed, secure the best quality only. Perhaps some other large aster growers can give an idea how many aster plants an ounce of good seed should produce.

OUTDOOR LILY OF THE VALLEY

I have a fine lot of lily of the valley in the open ground and I want to propagate. When is the best time to transplant and how should they be treated? I want them altogether for outdoor growing. I live in Indiana.

E. T. B.

Fall is the best time to transplant lily of the valley, October being an excellent month. Next to that period, transplanting is most successful if done as soon as possible after frost leaves the ground, which with you should be in the early part of April. The ground should be plowed or spaded deeply and liberally manured for the best results. If set out in rows across the field, allow twenty-four inches between the rows and set the plants five to six inches apart. If in beds you can plant rows twelve inches apart, allowing a 24 inch patch between every fifth row. Give the plants a liberal mulch of well-decayed manure each fall.

MILDEW ON KILLARNEY.

I have a small bench of Killarney roses that are affected with mildew "to the limit." I have been painting the pipes with sulphur and dusting with sulphur for two months, without the least effect. There is scarcely a leaf or bud that is not coated with the mildew within twenty-four hours of coming out. The usual temperature in the house is 50 to 55 degrees at night and 55 to 60 degrees in the daytime, and on bright days I let it rise to 75 or 80 degrees. In extremely cold weather the temperature is considerably lower, from necessity. The weather lately has been unusually even, bright and sunny. I ventilate when the temperature reaches 75 degrees.

These roses were grown in the open ground during the summer, and were shipped to me dormant and kept so until December 1. Then they were put in a bed from which mums had been thrown out. The soil was renovated with bone meal and pulverized sheep manure. The plants started nicely and are still doing well, but the product is worthless. Can I do anything more? Is the trouble caused by any of the conditions I have mentioned, or is this variety more susceptible than others? I have a few Crimson, Pink and Baby Rambler, American Beauty and Richmond growing in the same house, and not a leaf of them is touched.

C. P. N.

If proper conditions exist in the house the use of sulphur is almost unnecessary, as properly grown stock is practically immune from the ravages of mildew. On the other hand, where proper conditions are not maintained, any amount of sulphur will not prevent the disease from appearing.

The planting of dormant stock in December is one way of inviting failure, as we cannot expect these plants to have sufficient root action to stand the vicissitudes of winter culture successfully. Killarney is not more susceptible to mildew than many other varieties, such as Bridesmaid and Bride. Richmond and Baby Rambler are not quite so liable to attack.

Allowing the temperature to run up to 70 degrees or higher before ventilating is decidedly wrong and is most debilitating to the plants. Commence ventilating in the morning, just as soon as the temperature begins to rise, raising the ventilators only a little at a time, never so much as to perceptibly lower the house temperature, until the sun begins to descend, when the ventilators should be lowered with the same care, never so much as to increase the temperature to any great extent.

Until your roses begin to regain their health the temperature should not exceed 56 degrees at night and 60 to 62 degrees during the daytime. Run the benches rather on the dry side and keep the surface well stirred. Under these conditions the plants will soon attain natural root action and produce wood and foliage of a character able to combat this and other troubles. Then the day temperature can be increased to 75 degrees during bright weather, with benefit.

RIBES.

YOUNG STOCK.

Please tell me what is the proper size of pots for the first potting of rose cuttings. I have used 2-inch. Would 3-inch pots be too large? I intend to transfer these to the field later. Can I plant them out when the 2-inch pots are filled with roots, or shall I shift to 3-inch pots first? Is there any certain time, in summer or fall, for planting them in the field? I am located in southern California.

K. N.

The proper size of pots for rose cuttings is 2-inch, and when these are filled with roots a shift into 3-inch pots is the proper treatment. If there is no danger of frost when the 2-inch pots are full of roots, they can be planted from these to the field.

To gain the full benefit of the growing season, planting should be done as early as the season will permit. In your section this should be in April or possibly earlier.

RIBES.

POT ROSES FOR EASTER.

We want to know something about pot roses that can be grown for Easter trade. We see them on the market here now in 5-inch pots. They are apparently Crimson Ramblers. Can you give some advice as to what kinds are best to grow and what time to start them and where to secure good stock? For our line of trade we want them not to go above 5-inch or 6-inch pots for marketing.

J. S. & S.

The variety you probably have seen is the dwarf variety of Crimson Rambler, Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, better known as Baby Rambler. You should purchase either field-grown stock or plants from 4-inch pots of these in fall. Pot the field plants at once in the size of pots they are to bloom in. Those in pots should go into 5-inch or 6-inch pots when they are started. Of course, the exact time to start them depends on the time you would require them. The earliest lot, started during the first half of January, are now in full bloom, having been grown in an average night temperature of 50 degrees. It is best to start at 40 to 45 degrees and after they break give a little more heat; as high as 60 degrees at night can be given if required. In addition to the Baby Rambler, you will find Hiawatha, single red, an excellent Rambler for 6-inch pots. Dorothy Perkins will also make nice plants in the same size of pots. You will find many offers of these in the nursery department of the REVIEW in the proper season.

THE ROSE AND ITS HISTORY.

[A paper by George V. Nash, secretary of the Horticultural Society of New York, read at the annual convention of the American Rose Society, in New York city, March 16, 1910.]

When the secretary of the American Rose Society invited me to give a lecture before the society, it was with considerable hesitation that I consented to do so. I did not know what phase of the subject to take up, what subject I could present to a body whose chief aim and theme have been the study of the rose and what pertained to it. I finally decided to take the title announced for today, as one which was sufficiently broad to enable me to touch upon points, perhaps, which were not commonly presented to you. With this idea in view, I decided to confine my remarks mainly to the botanical side of the subject, including the distribution of the genus rosa and the historic evolution of the various types of garden roses. The matters of culture I shall leave to those much better fitted than myself to speak upon such subjects.

First, then, as to the distribution of the rose. We must not forget that the rose flourished upon the earth many years ago—shall I surprise you by saying millions of years? For such is the truth, well defined remains having been found in the tertiary age, which, though geologically speaking very recent, from the point of view of every-day life must be considered antiquated indeed. The rocks tell their tales, and the story of the rose and its history begin there.

The Species and Their Distribution.

It is a long step from those fossil remains to which we have just been alluding, but we must cross the chasm and take up its distribution as it is known at the present time in the living world. We of the north temperate zone can claim this delightful flower for our own, for it is not known outside of that area. Confined between the twentieth and seventieth degrees of north latitude, it is our flower. But in this belt it is widely distributed the world around. Starting with Asia, where one-half of the known species are native, it extends through Europe and northern Africa, to the central and northern parts of North America. From Asia we have such well known species as Rosa moschata, the musk rose, which is also found in northern Africa and Persia; Rosa bracteata, the Macartney rose, native of China, Formosa and northern India; Rosa multiflora, found wild from China and Japan to Formosa and the Philippines; Rosa rugosa, the Ramanas rose; Rosa microphylla; Rosa lutea, the parent of the Austrian briers, extending from western Asia to Italy and Austria; Rosa Wichuraiana, from China and Japan; Rosa Banksiae, a native of China. In Europe there are such favorite forms as Rosa spinosissima, the Burnet or single Scotch rose; Rosa rubiginosa, the sweet brier; Rosa canina, the dog rose, and Rosa arvensis. In North America there are, among others, Rosa Carolina, our charming swamp rose; Rosa blanda, and Rosa setigera, the prairie rose, the parent of some of our recent productions.

The genus rosa is variously estimated as containing from thirty to 250 species, depending upon whether the botanists take a conservative, a moderate or a radical view of the species question. When one considers the ease and readiness with which the various species cross with one another, as demonstrated in the evolution of the garden rose, perhaps an explanation may be found for the larger number of species referred to. Perhaps about 125 species would be a fair estimate, with one-half the number in Asia, two-fifths of the remainder in Europe and northern Africa, and the remainder in North America.

The Rose in Literature.

Finding the rose as widely distributed as we do in all north temperate lands, we should expect to find it in the literature of all the countries in that zone. And such is the case, for the rose has been the subject of song and story from the days long before the Christian era down to the present time. In each language it has a name of its own, which arouses perhaps in the breast of each people the same tender recollections and happy memories that the word "rose" does in our own. In a great many of these the resemblance is striking. For instance, in Greek it is rhodon; in Celtic, rhos; in Latin, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Hungarian and Polish it is rosa; in French, Saxon and English, rose; in German, rose, spelled the same way but pronounced differently; in Dutch, roose; in Slavonic, rhosha; in Russian, ros; in Bohemian, ruoze; in Arabic, ouasrath; in Turkish, nisrin; in Hebrew, chabhatzeleth, and in Persian, gul.

Let us now turn to the history of the rose. How old is the rose? It is of great antiquity. There is reason to believe that it flourished in the famous gardens of Babylon, which existed about 1200 B. C. It was certainly cultivated by the Jews during the reign of Solomon, about 950 B. C. Homer, the great poet of ancient days, who flourished about 850 B. C., paid homage to the rose in the Iliad and Odyssey. Herodotus, who lived about 400 B. C., says that in the gardens of Macedonia there was a rose which flourished without culture, which had sixty petals and which emitted a most delightful perfume.

Mythology and Early History.

In those olden times a mystical origin was ascribed to most things, and to this the rose was no exception. The creation of the rose was credited to the goddess Flora. The fable goes on to say that Flora, finding one day the dead body of one of her favorite nymphs, whose beauty was only equaled by her virtue, implored all the Olympian deities to aid her in transforming this nymph into a flower. The gods granted her request. Apollo is said to have given the vivifying power of his rays; Bacchus contributed the nectar; Vertumnus added the perfume; Pomona supplied the fruit, and Flora herself crowned all with a diadem of flowers. Thus, according to the tradition, was the rose created.

The poetic instinct was keenly alive in these olden days, and we find the people appreciative of the beautiful and blended colors of the rose, expressing this appreciation in the consecration of this flower to Aurora, the goddess of the dawn. They also consecrated it to Harpocrates, the patron of silence, and so with them the rose was symbolic of silence. Thus arose the expression, "sub rosa," meaning under the rose, indicating that all should be kept secret or silent, and this expression persists to the present day.

The rose was greatly prized in the days of Rome, being used in enormous quantities for decorative purposes, and it was freely employed on all festive occasions. To the rich and great the term, "a bed of roses," was a reality, for their couches were frequently covered with a mantle of rose petals. It is also related that the tyrant Nero, in one of his feasts, expended about $100,000 on roses alone. Even in these days of advanced rose culture, with ample facilities for their production, the market would be put to the test to supply such a demand. I presume there are men, however, in the country who would like to take such a contract.

Ancient Roman Greenhouses.

Ancient Rome, too, had its four hundred, and these insisted upon having roses out of season. The gardeners of those days complied with the demand and furnished them. They, too, had their greenhouses, it is said, warmed by means of pipes filled with hot water, by which means they succeeded in keeping the roses in bloom until the end of the year. So roses under glass, you see, are by no means a modern innovation.

Passing from these early days of the rose to the middle ages, we find Chaucer, who wrote in the early part of the thirteenth century, referring to the rose. In the beginning of the fifteenth century our flower is said to have been cultivated for commercial purposes. Roses in those days were apparently scarce and only for the rich, for small quantities of them were considered of sufficient value to offset the rent of house and land. Would that we could pay our rent these days with a few roses!

In 1452, as you all know, the rose became emblematic of war and bloodshed, losing for the time its significance of peace. It was perhaps the thorns and not the flowers that were the real emblems of the war. It was in this year that the rival factions of the white and the red rose sprang up in England; the former was the emblem of the house of York, while the red rose stood for the house of Lancaster. You all know of the furious wars which followed, and how Henry VII, in 1486, reunited the two houses by marrying Elizabeth, the heiress of the house of York.

Shakespeare's appreciation of the rose was evident in his numerous references to it in his works.

Beginning of Modern Rose Culture.

It was not, however, until the early part of the nineteenth century that rose culture, as we now know it, existed. From that time on the rose has been preëminent. Certain wild forms were, of course, first introduced, and these, perhaps at first by accidental crossings, resulted in hybrids. Man soon took the cue thus accidentally shown, and began to experiment for himself, first crossing the natural species at his hand, then hybrids with species, and later hybrids with hybrids, and the progeny thus produced was again crossed with species. You can well understand that soon all traces and resemblances to the original forms were lost. This crossing and re-crossing have caused such confusion that it is all but impossible to classify garden roses. Take any book you will and look up the subject of classification, and you will find no two of them agreeing; forms which in one book are referred to one class, in another are referred to quite different groups. In what follows I shall call to your attention some of the more prominent types which have existed in the history of the development of the rose, not designing by any means to include all of them, but taking up first the native or wild species, and later considering the commoner types of the garden roses.

The first of these we will consider is Rosa arvensis, a native of Europe. This is one of the parents of the Ayrshire strain and of the Dundee Rambler. It is one of the most common roses of Great Britain. Belonging to the same type is the musk rose, Rosa moschata, which is found wild in northern Africa, Persia and Madeira. This is said to be one of the species from which the attar of roses is obtained. It is also stated that the original Noisette was an accidental cross between this and Rosa Indica.

Rosa Multiflora and R. Canina.

PERENNIALS FOR MEMORIAL DAY

I have some aquilegias, columbines, sweet williams and delphiniums which were sown in March, 1909. If I lift these would they bloom by Memorial day? Please mention a few hardy plants that will bloom by that time and when to plant the seed. I live in Scranton, Pa.
H. P.

None of the plants you name will flower with you for Memorial day. They will all be in season in June. There are not many hardy herbaceous plants flowering at the end of May in your latitude. A few, which in ordinary seasons will be open, are: Iris Germanica, especially that useful variety, Mme. Chereau; Papaver orientale, Doronicum plantagineum, Phlox divaricata, and Paeonia officinalis. Among the late blooming varieties of tulips and narcissi are some desirable Memorial day flowers, which in some seasons are just right. These include Narcissus poeticus and the Darwins, Byblooms, Gesneriana and other tulips.

A SOLID BED FOR CARNATIONS.

I am thinking of making some changes in my greenhouse. In place of the center bench I will put in a solid bed. Please state how high the sides ought to be and how much cinders I should put in the bottom. I understand that some growers cover the cinders with tile. Do you think the tile would be of much benefit? Are not solid beds colder than raised benches? Do the solid beds give general satisfaction? I expect to use the bed for carnations.
E. P. M.

The usual depth of solid beds above the level of the walks is about two feet. This is for convenience of working, but many growers are using 10-inch sides. The benches are filled with ashes up to within seven or eight inches of the top. Some growers use tile on top of the ashes, thus leaving only five inches for soil.

As growers are frequently changing the character of their benches from solid to raised, and vice versa, it is uncertain which is really the better. I have tried both and find them about equally good. Raised benches are warmer and more easily controlled. For carnations I prefer the raised bench for winter crops.

RIBES.

THROW OUT THE OLD PLANTS.

This is my first year in growing carnations. I have 300 plants and they have been blooming all winter. When the weather gets warm, should I throw them away or can I plant them outside and let them bloom? How should they be treated for outside blooming? The varieties are White Enchantress, Queen, Lloyd, Melody and Alvina. I took some cuttings from the Alvina and White Enchantress March 1 and will want to take some more later in the month. Will they make good sized plants by August?
G. C. H.

The plants you have been blooming all winter are not fit to plant out for summer blooming. When the season is over, throw them away and replant your benches with young plants from the field. The cuttings you took off March 1 will make good plants if you will push them right along. Those taken later may also do well if you have a good growing season.

Next year try to take your cuttings earlier, say late in January or early in February. The danger of losing them in the cutting bench is slight at that time and you will be sure to have nice, strong plants by planting-out time. The cuttings you are putting in sand now will bear close watching. Not only is the sun much stronger than it was a month ago, but you will have trouble with high winds. Do not allow either of these to strike the cuttings, or wilting will follow, and a carnation which is badly wilted at this time of the year might as well be thrown out.

CANTON, ILL.—Barnhart Bros. have leased their greenhouses to Savill Bros., and the business will be conducted in the name of the new firm after June 1. The business is good here and a large spring trade is expected.

BRITISH NOTES.

Daffodils by the ton are now pouring into all the principal English markets, chiefly from the Scilly Islands. In one day this week a cargo of fifty tons was dispatched in the Scilly mail boat to Covent Garden, London. A spell of warm weather has brought the flowers in with a rush. Last year at this time Soleil d'Or was selling at 5 shillings and 6 pence per box of thirty-six bunches and Princeps at 4 shillings and 6 pence; the present prices are 2 shillings per box. The forced flowers from the Channel Islands are also coming in, to be followed immediately by those grown outdoors. There is but little money in them for the growers, and the raisers of new varieties are the most fortunate men in the narcissus trade at present. Some of the bulbs of new varieties shown in London this week were priced at £20 each and upward, and the prices are paid by the leading narcissus fanciers.

The special prizes offered by the Dutch Bulb Growers' Association to the Royal Horticultural Society of England, to encourage hyacinth cultivation, resulted in an excellent show, March 8. For 200 hyacinths in pots, not less than thirty-six varieties, R. and G. Cuthbert, Southgate, London, were awarded a gold medal for a fine collection, arranged on a carpet of ferns and mosses. For 200 hyacinths in twenty pans, ten in a pan, the same firm were to the front. There were many collections from private growers, and the Dutch Association's scheme is a wise course in the interests of bulb culture. Two banks of hyacinths from Sutton & Sons, Reading, showed the delightful effects obtainable in color schemes.

George Mount, of Canterbury, has a fine seedling tea rose, named Lady Hillingdon (award of merit, R. H. S.); it is a cross between Papa Gontier and Madame Hoste and is of a rich apricot color.

Under the auspices of the National Dahlia Society, a highly successful conference has just been held in London. E. Mawley, president, occupied the chair. Papers were read by G. Gordon, on "Dahlias in Garden Decoration;" J. Stredwick, on "Growing Dahlias for Exhibition," and J. B. Riding, on "Methods of Exhibiting Dahlias."

For the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society's show, to be held in December, special prizes are offered by the E. G. Hill Co. for J. Whitcomb Riley and by F. Dorner & Sons Co. for Scarlet Glow. The schedule of prizes, just issued, is the most comprehensive yet published by the society and indicates the society's progress and the increasing popularity of the carnation.

The proposed sweet pea society for Scotland, which I mentioned recently, has not matured. The promoters, not receiving the support they anticipated, are allowing the subject to simmer until the canny Scots' enthusiasm gets warmer. There are a few red-hot sweet pea men among them and they will undoubtedly keep others alive upon the subject.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A decided improvement has now taken place in market conditions. Supplies have fallen off quite sharply. As is customary near Easter, prices have risen moderately and flowers are being quite well cleaned up. Roses are more abundant. Beauties are selling better, but neither on these nor on other roses are there likely to be any particular price advances for Easter. White Killarney is selling extra well. White roses are in short supply and moving much better than colored ones. Carnations are climbing, extra good whites making $5 per hundred March 21. There promises to be an adequate carnation crop for Easter. On violets 50 cents is at present top price, but some advance will take place later in the week. There will be more violets the coming Easter than for some years. Cut lilies are making $10 per hundred, but an advance is not unlikely nearer Easter.

Sweet peas are plentiful. The best grades are now bringing $10 per hundred, but prices run as low as one-fourth that sum on poorer stock. Bulbous stock is cleaning up much better. Poeticus brings $10 per thousand; Trumpet narcissi, $1.50 to $2 per hundred; tulips, $1.50 to $2 per hundred. There are smaller lots of Spanish iris, tritonias, ixias, anemones and ranunculus. Wallflower is in heavy supply and of slow sale. Pansies move moderately well, as do English primroses. For myosotis and other flowers there is only an uncertain call. Callas are more plentiful, but selling well. Lily of the valley is in good supply and demand. Gardenias are plentiful. Cattleyas are rather scarce. Lælias, dendrobiums and cœlogynes are the leaders in orchids. There is a strong call for asparagus and other greenery. Sprengerii is arriving more freely.

Plant trade is brisk on pot lilies; 12½ cents per bud is the ruling rate, but an advance to 15 cents is not improbable. Azaleas are seen everywhere and are finely flowered. Among rambler roses there are less Crimson and Baby Ramblers seen and many more of such varieties as Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay, Hia-watha, Tausendschon and Wedding Bells, also a good many nicely flowered hybrids and plenty of Clothilde Soupert in pans. Primula obconica meets with quite a sale among cheaper plants. Hyacinths, one to a pot, bring $8 to $10 per hundred. Tulips and narcissi in pans are also popular. Lily of the valley in 6-inch pots is selling well. Metrosideros, genistas, spiræas, acacias, hydrangeas, ericas, boronias, lilacs, Azalea mollis, pyrus in variety and many other varieties are seen. It promises to be far the greatest plant Easter ever known here.

Club Field Day.

About forty members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club joined in the outing to the establishment of the W. W. Edgar Co., March 19. The houses were found filled to overflowing with capitally grown plants, and were never in better condition. Lilies to the number of 15,000 were in the pink of condition for Easter. Among these were multiflorums, giganteums and some splendid Formosas. As many as a dozen flowers per stem were to be seen on some of the last named. It is the cleanest of all the Easter lilies, but grows rather tall for a pot plant. Some thousands of azaleas were in flower. Among other varieties, Mme. Ernest Eckhaute, double cerise, was good. Other leaders were Prof. Wolters, Marie Louise, Van der Cruyssen, Charles Encke, Vervæneana, Simon Mardner and Empress of India.

Hydrangeas in quantity were in fine condition, the majority carrying eight to twelve flower heads, each in 7-inch pots. There were 2,000 coming along for Memorial day, and 4,000 young stock for next year. A large batch of H. P. roses were just right. Ramblers were heavily set with buds and good batches of astilbes, genistas, metrosideros, acacias, lilacs and other plants were finely flowered. Geraniums to the number of 20,000 are grown for spring trade and large quantities of other bedding plants, also adiantums, palms, Ficus elastica and other decorative foliage plants. Chrysanthemums were being heavily propagated, Golden Glow being a favorite among the earlies.

After an inspection of the houses an adjournment was made to the roomy packing-shed, where refreshments were served and short addresses were made by W. N. Craig, F. E. Palmer, T. J. Grey, M. H. Norton, T. H. Westwood, Robert Cameron, George M. Anderson and Thomas Pegler. Hearty votes of thanks and rousing cheers were given to Mrs. W. W. Edgar and her skillful manager, Herman H. Bartsch. Mrs. Edgar said she hopes the club will pay them a visit every year.

Most of the visiting members next proceeded to the establishment of Edgar Bros. The boys, Frank and Robert, have two large houses of sweet peas of which they are feeling justly proud, which are just coming into nice crop. The varieties grown include Christmas Pink, Mont Blanc, Mrs. Wallace, Pink Beauty, Governor Fort and Greenbrook. A number of Spencer varieties are also coming along for flowering in May and June. Chrysanthemums are being propagated in quantity and are planted as soon as the sweet peas are gone. We were pleased to see that the Edgar boys are making good and understand that they are planning to add another house this season.

Later a number of the visitors proceeded to A. M. Davenport's, of Watertown, on invitation, and were well repaid for their visit. There were seen 8,000 lilies in beautiful condition, 1,500 Crimson and Baby Rambler roses, 2,000 rubber plants and 25,000 small ferns. All were well grown and a treat to look upon. In a sash house were 2,000 Marshall strawberries in 6-inch pots, which were just setting their fruit. These will be a sight well worth seeing a month hence.

Club Meeting.

Coming as it did so near Easter, the attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 22, was less than in February, but considerably over 100 were present when Vice-president Miller called the meeting to order. Letters were read from several senators and congressmen relative to resolutions forwarded by the club, asking them to support parcels post legislation and oppose free seed distribution by the government. The death of the beloved treasurer, Edward Hatch, called forth sympathetic references, and a committee to draw up suitable resolutions was appointed. The secretary announced the receipt of $100 from Mr. Hatch a short time before his death, to be used as a permanent fund for the landscape classes. A letter was read from E. H. Wilson, thanking the club for honoring him by election to honorary membership. Mrs. E. M. Gill, the veteran and well-known florist of Medford, was unanimously elected an honorary member.

Arthur E. Thatcher, of the Arnold Arboretum, read an able and instructive paper on "New and Desirable Hardy Herbaceous Plants," which brought out an interesting discussion. There were some good exhibits, and further additions were made to the membership list.

Various Notes.

At the private funeral services for the late Edward Hatch, held at his late home, 328 Commonwealth avenue, March 16, the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was represented by ex-Presidents W. Downs and Thomas J. Grey. The club sent a wreath of roses. There was a wealth of beautiful floral tributes.

The Boston Market Gardeners' Association visited the greenhouses of A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, March 19. In the afternoon they had a lecture and discussion at Horticultural hall.

Edward MacMulkin, besides being a successful florist, does some truck farming. Last year he planted sixteen acres of potatoes, which averaged him 200 bushels per acre. He will this year plant fifty acres of potatoes and hopes to get a yield of as high as 300 bushels per acre. He believes Massachusetts can raise as good potatoes as Maine and just as many per acre.

Henry R. Comley, on Park street, is showing some extra good wistarias and Azalea mollis for Easter. Ranunculi, tritonias, dimorphothecas and many other interesting spring flowers are to be seen here.

James Peters, of the Rosary, Clarendon street, is in the hospital, recruiting from an operation for rupture.

The Gude brothers, of Washington, were visitors in the markets March 18. Mr. Hubert, the Guernsey bulb grower, also made a brief stop on his way south. August Poehlmann visited a number of New England places before returning to Chicago. Other visitors included C. W. Brownell, Walden, N. Y.; C. Earnshaw, representing the Bon Arbor Chemical Co., Paterson, N. J.; Samuel Parsons, New York, and Robert Fulton, representing Henry & Lee, New York.

Vernon T. Sherwood, with William Thatcher at Mrs. John L. Gardner's, Brookline, will go to the Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., April 1, to take charge of the greenhouse department.

Thomas Brown, of the N. T. Bowditch estate, Framingham, celebrated his eightieth birthday March 15. A purse of $80 in gold from his employers and many other gifts were received. Many friends called to tender their good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Brown, who are known and respected far and wide. Included were members of the trade, among whom Mr. Brown has many friends, and in S. J. Goddard a worthy son-in-law. Mr. Brown has been thirty-nine years on the Bowditch estate and has been a successful grower of plants, flowers and vegetables. His keen delight even today is in his fox hounds, whose music never seems to grow less dear to him.

F. H. Houghton is displaying some nice hippeastrums. These would become more popular as Easter plants if the really good varieties were more seen in store windows.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was a visitor last week and called at Framingham, Madbury, N. H., Natick and other rose and carnation establishments.

George Cartwright is handling daily shipments of the new yellow carnation raised by N. D. Pierce, of the Norwood Nurseries, Norwood, R. I.

J. F. Dolansky, of Lynn, is as usual sending in quantities of high grade Easter lilies and other plants at present.

From the Sutermeister estate, Readville, some fine Tritonia crocata and ranunculus are coming to the wholesale market.

Mann Bros. have some well flowered kalmias and a fine lot of Japanese maples.

With frost all out of the ground, local nurseries are busy digging and shipping trees and shrubs. The demand promises to be heavier than ever, advance orders being unusually large. W. N. CRAIG.

TOPEKA, KAN.—After being connected with the florists' trade for forty years, Hiram Hulse has now retired from the business.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—F. A. Baller has devoted over sixty years to plant growing, over thirty years in England and over thirty years in this country.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The equinoctial storm, which we have been taught to expect March 21 from time immemorial, has been sidetracked, and Easter week opens with sunny skies and spring temperature. The promise from the authorities on weather at Washington is a perfect week of clear, warm weather, and so the outlook for the holiday is encouraging. Prices last week were on a par with the abnormally low figures of the last month and not until Saturday, March 19, did the tide turn. Monday there was a reduction in supplies and better figures prevail. Still every wholesaler claims there will be an abundance of everything as the week progresses and no unusual increase in prices, the quotations showing about the consensus of opinion as to Easter rates. If the sunshine remains there surely will be no shortage. Some assert that holding back and pickling has already begun. The market has been many years subjected to this imposition and has gradually strangled it. The day has passed when New York can be made a holiday dumping ground. There is no market for pickled stock of any kind. It will surely go into the discard. Even the street merchants will have none of it.

The plantmen began deliveries at the opening of this week. Beautiful stock they have, with no unreasonable prices. The majority have grown their offerings in the medium sizes and these plants will be the rapid sellers of the week. The majority of the plant growers have said that they are practically sold out. The local market has become so large that the growers have ceased to worry. Much harmony prevails among them since the formation of the Plant Growers' Association and the era of good feeling and mutual help afforded by this organization is a lesson in fellowship and profit that has won universal commendation.

There will be enough lilies to go around, though the prospect was not encouraging a while ago; 12 cents seems to be the regular figure. Doubtless select and handsome specimens will bring 15 cents. The Bermuda supply is light and not considered a menace, as has been the case in some former years. The early spring is bringing plenty of southern daffodils.

The plant combinations in baskets are more artistic and beautiful than ever. Many new designs are already in the windows. Fancy boxes and vases are much in evidence. The ribbon decorations are profuse and the new chiffons and colors striking and elaborate. With good weather there will be nothing left to sell on Easter Sunday. The flower stores of New York and Brooklyn will look by Easter noon as if a cyclone had swept them.

Various Notes.

The Fruit Auction Co. is auctioning flowering plants every morning this week, with John P. Cleary at the helm. Big crowds attend. The methods of sale are quiet, sharp, complete, after the style of the fruit sellers, and in less than an hour everything is disposed of.

At 12 o'clock Tuesdays and Thursdays big sales are made at Elliott's, where the attendance is remarkable and dozens of the faces new. The suburbanites are legion and in search of bargains. Many ladies attend, and do their share of the buying. The Cleary Horticultural Co. also has its sale of plants, etc., every Tuesday and Friday, so with such source of supply there should soon be "A rose for every garden."

The new bright pink rose, grown by Myers & Samtman, of Wyndmoor, Pa., the sport of My Maryland, shown at the meeting of the Rose Society last week and the winner of high honors, is sold by Ford Bros., who handle all the shipments of this firm to the New York market.

The Pitcher & Manda Employees' Association was established last week, with Charles Russell, of Sterlington, N. Y., president, F. L. Atkins vice-president, H. W. Merkel, of the New York Zoological Park, secretary, and Arthur T. Boddington treasurer. There will be a banquet and reunion in June. Harry Bunyard says he is the first and last agent of the firm, having started with them in 1888. A membership of 150 is probable, and a body of influential horticulturists they now are.

The seedsmen report a tremendous volume of trade. Every establishment is working an increased force and day and night the strain goes on. Everything indicates a phenomenal season. The nurserymen also are getting busy. Nursery prices are the highest in years and wholesale rates are at such a figure that the firms selling through agents see large cavities in the usual profits of their system of selling.

T. Mellstrom timed his return to America so as not to miss the florists' dinner. He will shortly commence his American trip in the interest of Sander & Son, of St. Albans, England.

W. E. Marshall is back from his western trip. The firm does a large retail trade at Easter at its store on West Twenty-third street.

R. T. Terry is the foreman of the Wilson-Hoyt Co., at its factory in Brooklyn, where the capacity has been greatly increased.

The New York members of the S. A. F. executive committee are loud in praise of Rochester hospitality and predict the greatest convention of the society's history. There will be, they say, a special train of 250 from this city.

J. K. Allen is exceedingly cheerful as to Easter and says he will have an exhibit nearly as extensive as the one last week at the Museum of Natural History.

George Saltford says there will be millions of violets for Easter.

There are several new faces at A. J. Guttman's, where business seems to be booming.

A. L. Young maintains the brightest window display on Twenty-eighth street.

John I. Raynor is spending his week-ends with his family at Lakewood, N. J.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., and family have returned from their trip to South America, looking well.

Alex. McConnell and Charles A. Dards generously decorated the many tables at the Florists' Club's dinner and covered the walls with wild smilax. Their artistic work was much appreciated.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

CINCINNATI, O.—J. A. Peterson has returned from French Lick, Ind., where he has been devoting a few days to recuperation after a rather unusually busy season.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.—Bobbink & Atkins use a large number of long concrete frames that can be made into hotbeds and covered with sashes or in summer covered with lath shading.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

The fact that Easter comes early this year has made the florists somewhat anxious as to supplies. Greens are scarce, particularly smilax, and the amount of asparagus offered is less than usual, but the supply of ferns seems ample. Lilies are plentiful, and most of the stock is high grade, prices averaging about $3. Carnations are equal to the demand and retail at from $1 to $1.50. Azaleas, spiræas and cinerarias meet with ready sale. Tulips, daffodils and valley are selling well at $1 to $1.25. Violets are as popular as ever and bring as high as $1.75, and Killarney roses are in demand at $3. Altogether, the prospect is bright for a good Easter business.

Various Notes.

The floral decorations for the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce, held Friday evening, March 18, were furnished by Salter Bros., of this city. The entire ceiling of the hall was covered with lattice work, draped and festooned with southern smilax and great clusters of pink wistaria. Back of the stage, where the guests of honor were seated, was a bank of palms, and the large central chandelier was almost hidden in smilax. The entire front of the stage was hidden with palms, ferns, and great plants of Dorothy Perkins and Crimson Rambler roses covered with bloom. Among the green of the ferns and palms small electric lights twinkled like stars. Bouquets of Killarney roses adorned all the tables in the hall. The decorative plan, and the effective manner in which Salter Bros. carried it out, called forth many complimentary remarks.

ALBANY, N. Y.

A bill has been introduced in the state legislature providing for an appropriation of $50,000 to build greenhouses at Cornell University, Ithaca, where one of the state experiment stations is located. There is no state association of florists in New York, but the bill has the endorsement of the florists all over the state, and was introduced by Assemblyman Wilkie, of Buffalo, who has been urged by William F. Kasting and others to use his best efforts to put it through the legislature.

The plan is to conduct at Cornell experiments along the lines of those undertaken at Champaign for the florists of Illinois, and also to use the equipment as a beginning for a course in practical floriculture. New York has more florists than any other state in the Union and more money invested in florists' establishments, so that New York florists pay more taxes than are paid by florists in any other state. The florists now propose to make their influence felt in such a way that the state will eventually have what has long been needed in this country, a first-class school for the training of practical florists.

WAKEFIELD, MASS.—Otto B. Runge, owner of the greenhouse at Pleasant and Cordis streets, has opened a new store on Albion street.

MINOT, N. D.—Geo. E. Valker, proprietor of Valker's Minot Greenhouse, is planning to erect two connected houses, 50x155, for vegetables.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

WESTBORO, MASS.—R. O. Stockbridge & Co. have erected another greenhouse, which they are using largely for potted plants.

ESPY, PA.—A greenhouse, two barns and some other property, all owned by Bert Miller, were destroyed by fire March 12, with a loss of $5,500.

YORK, NEB.—J. W. Lawson, formerly of Mitchell, S. D., has purchased ten acres of ground here and expects to build on it a range of greenhouses.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.—A. C. Cappon reports placing an order with the King Construction Co. for material for an iron-frame greenhouse, 50x190.

SAVANNAH, GA.—F. Schwalbe, who has been employed by the Park and Tree Commission as city florist for the last eight years, has resigned his position.

MOMENCE, ILL.—The property of Willard B. Smith & Co. will be disposed of at master's sale March 28. The establishment consists of 10,000 feet of glass.

ASHLAND, KY.—Mrs. E. M. Nelson, of Greenup avenue and Twenty-ninth street, has begun the business of growing plants for the market. She had some excellent blooming plants for Easter.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—The business of D. T. McCarthy & Sons has been incorporated, with a capital of $33,000, by Daniel T. McCarthy, Thomas J. McCarthy and Mark L. McCarthy.

RUMFORD, ME.—E. B. Davis used the Stephens store, formerly the Macfarlane store, as an extra place of business during the Easter rush, as he also did in the week before Christmas.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Mrs. Atwood, wife of E. F. Atwood, died recently, and after her death Mr. Atwood was prostrated by an illness which continued for two months, but he has now recovered.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The Morse Floral Co. has removed from 37 Church street to 168 Orange street, to a store better equipped for conducting their growing business.

WALTHAM, MASS.—Peirce Bros. grew 50,000 Easter lily plants last year and about the same number this season. These lilies are shipped to many different points throughout New England, but especially to Boston, Lowell, Worcester and other large cities of this state.

GREENFIELD, MASS.—The grounds and greenhouses of W. H. Ulrich, on High street, are now in charge of W. M. Pease, who was formerly employed on a large estate at Monson, Mass., and who recently completed a short course at the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

WESTERLY, R. I.—Conrad S. Scultz, who has been proprietor of the Elm street greenhouses for the last two years, is now operating also the four Smith greenhouses on Franklin street. The Smith houses are each 25x120 feet and are practically new. They will be used for carnations. Miss Susie Lanphear has entered the employ of Mr. Schultz, as book-keeper and stenographer at the Elm street office.

PAWNEE CITY, NEB.—J. E. Atkinson, proprietor of the Northedge Nurseries, has finished the erection of additional houses covering a space 56x56 feet; also an office, sheds, etc., 14x56, and a cellar, 14x56, for storage, boiler and acetylene plant. Though not large, his houses are substantial and strictly up-to-date.

IRONTON, O.—F. I. Sloan, superintendent of the Woodland cemetery, says that about two years ago a small greenhouse was erected in the cemetery as an experiment, and the experiment has proved so successful that another house, much larger than the first one, will now be built, so as to meet all demands for flowers.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—J. A. Biggam, of the Alpha Floral Co., had charge of the floral decorations for the recent automobile show in Convention hall. The main part of the auditorium was transformed into an orchard of apple trees in blossom, with stars twinkling overhead and the moon rising in the distance. At the north end of the building, apparently floating in the air, was a great automobile, constructed of white flowers. At the other end of the hall, also suspended in midair, was a great airship, apparently in full flight.

MOUNT GILEAD, O.—The establishment of A. L. Munk, who was adjudicated bankrupt last January, was placed on sale March 12 and was bought in by Mr. Munk. Percy Waterer, who had charge of the bankrupt stock and plant during the litigation, is a son of Frederick Waterer, of Bagshot, England, senior member of the firm of Waterer & Sons, the noted rhododendron specialists. Mr. Waterer is also a nephew of Anthony Waterer, of Knapp Hill, England, the nurseryman who introduced Spiræa Anthony Waterer.

SEDALIA, MO.—The Archias Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $5,000, divided into fifty shares of the value of $100 each. The stock is distributed as follows: L. H. Archias, twenty shares; M. T. Slane, twelve and one-half shares; H. J. Potomkin, twelve and one-half shares; L. A. Kipping, five shares. The shareholders constitute the board of directors. The officers are: President, L. H. Archias; vice-president, H. J. Potomkin; secretary, M. T. Slane. The greenhouses and nursery will be on West Second street, north of City park, and will be in charge of Mr. Potomkin. The office will be at 106 East Main street.

ANSONIA, CONN.—T. J. Mooney, proprietor of the Ansonia Floral Co., not only has a prosperous business here, but also has a store in Derby. He came here from New Haven five years ago and began the operation of greenhouses at 139 North Main street, with Edward Heller as a partner. Later the present store was opened, at 124 North Main street, and early in 1907 Mr. Mooney bought Mr. Heller's interest and continued as the sole proprietor. In December, 1907, the greenhouses were destroyed by fire, and since that time Mr. Mooney has continued to operate only the stores, the one here and the other at 70 Elizabeth street, Derby.

 THE REVIEW brings results.

GET a printed letter-head. It pays to look business-like.

THOSE night letters by telegraph will still further increase the deficit in the postoffice department.

THE National Council of Horticulture distributed the first installment of the season's press service March 15. It was a set of four articles on the subject of early planting.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
 the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-
 two visits of the paper.

BECAUSE of the steady increase in circulation and the rapid growth of advertising patronage, the REVIEW finds it necessary to close its advertising forms
 Tuesday night, in order that the paper may be printed and mailed to reach its subscribers at the same hour each week.

H. H. GROFF, Simcoe, Ont., has issued a pamphlet entitled "Physical Disintegration of the Tissue, or Natural Death of Plants." He states that it is presented as a reply to the question often asked by growers of gladioli and is published as an expression of his confidence in the progressive intelligence of the modern amateur grower, who, he has always contended, is eminently capable of assimilating advanced knowledge and appreciating the most intricate results of scientific investigation.

RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence
 him most of the time.

We are completely sold out of the petunias, poinsettias, cyclamens and cinerarias advertised in the Review.—Krueger Bros., Toledo, O.,

OBITUARY.

John Booth.

John Booth, one of the oldest and best known gardeners of Newport, died at his home on Roseneath avenue, in that city, at an early hour Saturday morning,
 March 19. He had been in poor health for some little while, but had showed signs of improving, so that his physician and family were hopeful of his ultimate recovery. He had lived in Newport for more than a third of a century, and was gardener for the late Governor William Beach Lawrence, when the Ochre Point district was one great field. After the breaking up of the Lawrence homestead he went into the grape growing business on Roseneath avenue and had steadily followed that with his gardening and florist business since. He was one of those children, nearly all of whom are married.

MODEST MR. VESEY.

ED. REVIEW:—In your last week's edition you kindly mention my name in connection with the presidency of the S. A.
 F. for the next term. I naturally feel proud of the distinction of having my name mentioned in that connection. To be president of the society is an honor that is properly coveted by all men qualified for the position. I, however, hold as a matter of principle that the chief executive offices of the society should be held by men who entirely, or nearly so, devote their time to floriculture. This disqualifies me in my own mind for the position at this time. In later years I may be able to qualify for the place. It has been suggested to me that Professor Cowell, of Buffalo, would accept the position. To me this would appear a most desirable selection. W. J. VESEY.

The Market.

It is almost unanimously reported that the week in which St. Patrick's day fell was an excellent one. Prices, while a little firmer than they had been, were not high, except for white carnations, but an immense quantity of stock was moved and it was possible to make some sort of a clearance each day. Early in the week buyers refused to pay the price for white carnations, but as St. Patrick's day approached it was found that the demand, both local and shipping, was heavier than it ever has been before and that there were not enough whites to go around. Consequently, everything of satisfactory quality for dyeing was taken up at good prices. For some months white carnations have commanded a premium as compared to other colors of the same grade, and that condition still maintains. Fancy whites are worth more than any other carnations.

In no other line was there any scarcity last week. Supplies were somewhat reduced, probably due to the desire of the growers to accumulate something extra for this week, but everybody's wants could be filled at a price to meet the necessities of the buyer.

Roses are in splendid crop. Beauties are abundant and the quality is better than it was a few days ago. Some really superb Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond are offered and nearly all the flowers of these varieties, whatever the length of stem, are of satisfactory quality. The indications are that there will be no shortage this week, though Easter orders are running heavy. It is noted by some of the wholesalers that orders now are calling for Bride and Maid, instead of Killarney, the buyers apparently thinking that the old favorites are better shippers in spring weather than is Killarney. While there are good supplies of fine Maid and Bride, Killarney is much more abundant

If you need Easter Stock, wire us, call us on the phone or send us a "night letter" telegram if delivery next morning will do. We have the largest supply in our history and the force to get prompt action on your orders.

LILIES

We have 50,000 of the best Lilies in this market—all true giganteums—just the right kind of stock for the retailers to handle as cut flowers—they will average about 3 flowers to the stalk. Good long stems, from the same growers who have supplied us for the last 6 years. $15.00 per 100; $125.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

KILLARNEY

Our Killarneys are in a class by themselves, whatever the length you use - buds better, length for length of stem, than any other house can supply. While we have the extra special for all who want them, the bulk of our large Easter crop grades as select and specials - the length all stores use in quantity.

Also strong on Richmond, Bride, Maid and all other roses—fine stock in any quantity.

Carnations

We are in heavy crop for Easter. We can fill large orders and many of them. There are no better carnations anywhere than our "select, large and fancy," but if your trade requires the "common" grade (ours are as good as some houses ship as fancy), we can take care of you. Let us know what you can use—we do the rest.

Sweet Peas

We have an immense supply of Sweet Peas for Easter—grown by specialists. Can fill orders for 1000 or 10,000 all out of one lot, and you know the advantage of that—they're all good. No Peas on this market to compare with our "fancy" grade.

Violets

We handle the cream of the crops of Hudson River Double Violets and ship them in large quantities all over the middle west. Large supply of good doubles for Easter, also a large lot of fine singles.

Bulb Stock

For Easter orders, all bulb stock in quantity; Tulips, in yellow, white and pink (Novelty); choice Jonquils and Daffodils, also Paper Whites and Romans, also Callas.

Green Goods

You can get of us all the Smilax that you need, nice, long, strings. Also the popular green, Mexican Ivy, of choice quality. If you want the best ferns in the market order here.

and a good many who order one are likely to get the other, simply because so many more Killarney now are grown than Maid.

Fancy carnations were not plentiful at the beginning of this week, fancy white being hard to find, and there are those who say the unexpected will happen for Easter and a shortage of carnations will develop. The number of shipping orders already on file indicates a need for immense quantities of stock March 24 and 25, and it will be a wise grower who sees to it that every flower he has to ship is in his wholesaler's hands by Friday morning; later shipments than that will be taking chances that the possible shortage turns out to be a repetition of the old story of a glutted market after the shipping orders are out.

The Easter lily situation begins to take on a little different appearance. The retailers have been so impressed by the prospect of a short supply of first-class lilies that they have been canvassing the growers and have bought as pot plants considerable stock that certain wholesalers had been counting on for shipping as cut lilies. It therefore appears that the bulk of the cut lilies of satisfactory length of stem is likely to be found in the hands of not more than four, or even three, wholesalers as the end of the week approaches. With the stock thus held in a few hands, pretty fair prices are likely to be received for it. Those buyers who use principally pot lilies are now appearing in the market to place orders for cut lilies, indicating that the supply of satisfactory pot stock is pretty well cleaned up.

There is some decrease in the receipts of bulbous stock, growers apparently planning for Easter, but there is no possibility of any shortage in this department at any time this week. Violets show the effects of the spring weather. Their season will end within a few days, unless cool weather comes at once. How far spring is advanced is shown by the arrival in quantity of narcissi from southern Illinois, to reinforce last week's shipments from Virginia and Mississippi. These outdoor narcissi have thus far sold well, at from $3 to $7.50 per thousand, with the bulk of the shipments bringing an intermediate figure.

Sweet peas constitute one of the principal problems of the wholesalers. Several houses do not hesitate to assert that the value of sweet peas this season is scarcely more than half what it was last year. The supply certainly is much greater than it ever before has been. While the fancy, long-stemmed peas are selling first rate, the lower grades are exceedingly hard to move at anything like the money one likes to hand out to his growers.

For some weeks smilax has been about the only one of the indoor greens that has been in good supply and now even this has turned to the short side. There is an abundance of all hardy greens, but everything grown under glass is in light supply. Wild smilax is not good, the leaves having a brown and dried appearance.

Easter orders, except for lilies, did not come heavily until after last week's REVIEW had reached the trade; since then there has been a steady stream of them, Monday morning bringing probably the heaviest mail the wholesale district ever has received. The bulk of the shipments will go out March 24 and 25. Early in the week it appeared that every wholesale house would have all the business its people could handle, with the probability of enough stock in all lines and more need for time than anything else. The local people are not ordering heavily, counting on a market in their favor after the shipping is over.

Various Notes.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. sent a few roses to the national society's show in New York last week and came away with two silver cups, one first prize and one second, which wasn't so bad for four entries. The cups were won on Killarney and White Killarney.

plants, as well as cut flowers, having taken a lot of Boston ferns to clear out for one of their growers.

John Kruchten is receiving antirrhinums and says it is no trouble at all to get $1.50 per dozen for the long, straight stalks, but that it is next to impossible to sell the crooked ones. He thinks this is the plainest of evidences of the difference in profit between good stuff and stuff not so good.

John Sterrett says the Hotel LaSalle, where he has charge of the decorations, is the largest individual consumer of cut flowers in the city. Mr. Sterrett each day decorates with a vase of roses from 275 to 300 tables in the hotel dining-rooms. Every table has flowers.

Vaughan & Sperry report Easter orders from as far away as Raleigh, N. C.

At J. A. Budlong's they say Easter finds them right at the apex of the spring crops.

Peter Reinberg says carnations are not going off crop with him, but that he has not yet overcome the tendency to split that has made so much trouble for most of the growers the last several weeks.

On another page it is reported that the Lord & Burnham Co., New York, is preparing to put up a foundry and greenhouse material mill at Des Plaines.

At E. H. Hunt's the supply department has been exceedingly busy the last few days with an importation of 25,000 baskets from France, that came in several weeks later than expected. They have shipped or sold the bulk of them within a fortnight. A. F. Longren is home from the road to help in the Easter rush.

M. Stauch, lately with the Joy Floral Co., at Nashville, but well known in this market, is here after a visit at his old home in Germany.

One of the week's visitors is J. H. Shelton, Rochester, Ind.

Frank Beu thinks he was the first grower to have a crop of Kaiserin ready; he began cutting about March 10 and has a house now in full crop, with another one coming along nicely to be ready when the first house goes off crop. Mrs. Beu says that she sold twice as much carnation dye this year as in any previous year.

He won $9 in money and $3 worth of cigarettes, the latter something he does not use.

The bowling league will take a vacation over Easter.

The Market.

Trade conditions for the last week have been only fair, the greater part of the work being for funerals. Flowers have been plentiful, due, no doubt, to the fine weather we have had for the last three weeks. Those who thought they would not get their lilies and spiræas for Easter will have no trouble, as we have had continual sunshine for several weeks. The indications are that stock will be plentiful, and with favorable weather this should be the best Easter in years. Large quantities of Beauties and roses have been sold of late, and the quality is good. Numerous growers report carnations as off crop, and no doubt there will be a shortage in this flower for Easter. Bulbous stock should be plentiful, as a great many growers have been holding their stock back for Easter. Indications are that there will be more than enough Easter lilies to go around, and peas, valley, lilacs, violets and orchids will find a ready sale. In pot plants, some fine azaleas, ramblers, rhododendrons, spiræas, lilacs and numerous other plants are to be seen.

White carnations were at a premium the earlier part of last week, owing to St. Patrick's day. The Irish were well represented, and the downtown florists found a heavy demand for the green carnations.

Last week saw a number of department store openings which kept the palm decorators busy. Another sure sign of spring is the number of sales on rose bushes and hardy plants by the department stores.

Florists at the flower market report business good. As Indianapolis has no commission houses, the store men do quite a little buying at the flower market, and between the wholesale and retail business the growers manage to clean up their stock.

Indianapolis is to have a floral parade in connection with the auto show the week after Easter. The decorations are to be of artificial or natural flowers, and the dealers in artificial flowers are enjoying a good business, as the price on these flowers is advancing daily.

Club Meeting.

The March 12 meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club was well attended and a lively interest was taken in various matters discussed for the good of the trade in general and the local retailers in particular.

Reports were received from the special committee on the fall flower show which had been appointed at the previous meeting. A representative of this committee had presented the project to the board of managers of the Y. W. C. A., and it was reported that the women associated with this organization were unanimously in favor of coöperating with the Florists' Club in a matter so likely to prove of general public interest and which would doubtless reflect credit upon the city and all concerned in its management. The top floor of the Fairbanks building was suggested as an ideal place in which to hold the show, which will be made to assume the proportions of a society event, but at the same time the admission fee will be kept within the reach of all, so that in the two or three days' run, the exhibition may be viewed by a large percentage of the population of Springfield and surrounding territory.

After some discussion, the prevailing opinion was expressed that it was time to cease talk and at once begin preparations for the holding of such a show during the first week in November or as near that time as might later be determined, so as to time the show with a view of striking the best possible date to catch chrysanthemums in their glory. Every member of the club present, including practically all of the leading floral concerns of the city, pledged his support and promised to make some kind of an exhibit.

Since Springfield has comparatively few growers of cut flowers, this show must necessarily take the character of a miscellaneous exhibition, and it will consequently be necessary for the plant growers and mail order florists to do some special planting soon in order to have in readiness some novelties or specimens of interest to the public. A list of premiums is in course of preparation and competition may be opened to local amateurs and to out-of-town florists.

An executive committee was appointed to have charge of the show, consisting of Roger Murphy (president, ex-officio), C. L. Reese and C. P. Bethard for the local retailers, and John M. Good and George D. Leedle for the wholesale growers.

Various Notes.

The Schmidt & Botley Co. has recently completed a well constructed cold-storage house, 60x96, in which to carry a stock of shrubbery, fruit trees, etc. Orders for this class of stock have heretofore been sent to an out-of-town nursery to be filled, but this has been the cause of vexatious delays, annoyance and loss of profits. Much of it will hereafter be grown on thirty acres of land, south of the city, which was recently purchased, and a large stock will be wintered in the cold-storage plant. GE DALE.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The week ending Wednesday, March 23, is considered the best in the cut flower market since New Year's. The crops of carnations, and possibly roses, have been larger at times, but the general supply of flowers is now at its height, with the demand fully equal. The improvement commenced with the activity of white carnations, noted last week, just before St. Patrick's day. When this demand was satisfied, a far greater demand for all other flowers kept everyone busy; there has been practically no lull since. Prices have advanced, more perhaps in the ordinary grades bringing the prices of the higher, than in any actual increase in figures, with a few exceptions. The street men, who during the last four weeks' depression have been so useful in keeping down the surplus, complain bitterly that they can not get anything worth having now.

The height of the carnation crop is past, with indications of a fair supply, weather favoring. Prices, advanced so sharply on whites for St. Patrick's day, have receded but little, the colors now keeping pace with white. Roses are arriving in stronger force, with sufficient demand for all, save possibly the poorer grades, and they certainly do not realize more than they are worth. Sweet peas have unexpectedly dropped off in numbers just when the market began to take a keen interest in their welfare, and prices have advanced sharply, peas that could be had for 50 cents a week ago now bringing from 75 cents to $1. The fancy single violets are pretty well over, the frames supplying most of the singles now in; they are only of fair quality. Doubles are still fine, and Hudson river shipments are increasing in size and in their interest to the retailers. Daffodils have advanced to double the price of a week ago, chiefly due to the magnificent flowers of Emperor. Pansies are selling well.

The return of the "smart set" to the flower shops is evidenced in the increased demand for cattleyas and gardenias, which has now supplemented an extraordinarily heavy demand for southern arbutus, which has surprised the knowing ones this season. Easter lilies are going well, while callas have taken a jump, not unexpected. The arrival of southern daffodils has little effect, the quality being unequal to the market requirements.

Easter Plants at Harris'.

William K. Harris, Jr., and Mark P. Mills were consulting in the office over a special delivery that had just come. The shed was filled with orders selected for sending out at one minute after midnight on Monday morning, when the big vans were to come in and the packers start to work. It was an opportunity for seeing the stock at its best. The plants graded high. There were more azaleas than anything else, all standard sorts well grown, as William K. Harris delighted to say, the specimen azaleas being particularly fine. Fancy bougainvilleas were as usual well done, their graceful, drooping flowers contrasting beautifully with the white azaleas. Another pleasing lavender shade is here in Rhododendron Everestianum. The hydranges showed a far larger percentage of blue than of pink, some of the blue being truly cerulean in shade; it was not stated whether this was a change of popular tests or whether some fairy had slipped certain mineral properties in the potting soil all unbeknown to Mark P. Mills.

The genistas, exceedingly well done, were less numerous than of yore, fickle fashion seemingly preferring better keepers, for the time at least. The roses in the Rambler class were represented by Crimson Ramblers and Baby Ramblers, both in strong supply; the hybrid perpetuals by Magna Charta, an old-time favorite, nicely done. The gardenias in pots with the select Baby Ramblers may be classed as the cream of the novelties. There were more lilies, mostly of a good medium height, than usual, and a nice batch of the pink-flowered crabapple, pretty for variety.

The two principal whites of plainer type are spiraea and Deutzia gracilis, the latter done here as it is done nowhere else. Some Narcissus Von Sion and a few tulips completed the list, though I think something was said about silver-leaved maples.

J. W. Colflesh.

The ex-treasurer of the Philadelphia Florists' Club was the first man seen on his place, his cheery greeting reminding one of the unfailing good humor that won him so many friends among his associates in the P. F. C. Mr. Colflesh is a pot-plant grower of ability. About half his place is devoted to Easter stock. It seemed to me that he specialized those plants dearest to the hearts of the people, growing them in quantity and growing them well. Lilies and azaleas were there in moderate quantity, spiraea in larger, while largest of all were the daisies, white and yellow, and the cinerarias — cinerarias of brightest hue, with clean, strong foliage that should prove most attractive to those who like this plant when it is well grown. There were, of course, many other things, including roses in pots, which will be an important feature from Easter until after Memorial day; two cold houses, formerly devoted to Jacqs, are now being used mainly for pot roses, and a few of the good old Jacqs are grown in this way.

The Overbrook Nurseries.

Edward A. Stroud was at Strafford, planning, it was said, certain farming operations that would work smoothly in the wheel of progress with carnations. J. W. Prince was there to display a lot of Easter stock, as nicely grown as one could wish to see. One always looks to Overbrook for novelties and, going the week before Easter, disappointment is rare. This year there were two, Magnolia stellata, the name clearly describing the starry white magnolia flowers on every shoot, a plant that appeals to the buyer who wants something "for keeps," with its merit as an Easter blooming plant to be determined; the other novelty, for while it has been tried before, it has not yet passed the novelty stage, is Viburnum plicatum, or, in good, plain English, the Japanese snowball, flowered with a profuseness reminding one of Thomas Hogg hydrangea. Mr. Prince is enthusiastic about these snowballs; they are easily forced, requiring only a little judgment, and most important of all are pot-grown plants to be gin. To go to the other extreme, novelty to standard, there was as pretty a little batch of Beauty of Poitevine geraniums as I have ever seen; the plants were in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, well shaped, clean foliage, bright flowers, and all sold. There were some nice spiræas, Superba and Gladstone, some good lilies, both Easter and callas, and a smaller lot of the other staples, all well grown. The hydrangeas were extremely well done, blue predominating.

George Anderson.

Unluckily, George Anderson was away, but his representative did the honors, showing with pride the finest block of lilies I have seen this year; giganteums, I think he said, over six feet in height, with twelve or fourteen flowers and buds surmounting each, the kind of lilies that the church decorator longs for earnestly; with a few such plants much can be done. George Anderson is a rose grower, devoting but a portion of his space to Easter stock—this year it is larger than usual. Lilies and spiræas are grown in number. Hydrangeas, formerly an important Easter crop, are now considered as valuable and much less trouble after Easter. There have been three improvements at Mr. Anderson's since the place was last seen; a narrow covered way of walk and bench, now filled with shorter lilies, in front of half his range, a wide connecting shed of ample proportions for the other half, and the motor car, which has not yet cost its owner a penny in repairs, strong testimony to his mechanical skill.

Various Notes.

Fred Ehret's two windows are a masterpiece in contrast; the floral arcadia window, on Broad street, is rich with specimen azaleas, handsome palms and window boxes of ferns, while his window on Fairmount avenue is gay with pots of well grown hyacinths, tulips and daffs. Let us hope they will make rich gay and gay rich.

William Berger's Easter plants include an extra well grown lot of white and purple lilac, not plentiful this season; his standard plants are well grown.

M. Rice & Co. report an unusually large number of Easter telegrams.

John Kuhn, of Olney, has a fine collection of Easter plants, including lilies that are taller than the average, a point much appreciated by the buyers, and some extra well grown hyacinths and tulips in pots; it is a great thing to do this stock as Mr. Kuhn does it.

Among the many visitors to this city recently were: Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; Adolphus and W. F. Gude, and right-hand man Ohmer, Washington, D. C.; Patrick Welch and Mrs. Welch, Boston, Mass.; Edwin A. Seidewitz, Mrs. A. Schuler, Thomas and Miss Held, Baltimore, Md.; Frank Clark, Trenton, N. J.; F. E. Ridenour, Harrisburg, Pa.; Lloyd G. Blick, Norfolk, Va.; J. N. King, Norristown, Pa.; J. Bridgman, Boston, Mass.

Alexander B. Scott returned from the south, March 18. Mr. Scott was ill while away, but is now looking splendidly.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer &

Edward J. Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., got back from the west, March 19.

H. M. Weiss & Sons, Hatboro, Pa., have a magnificent crop of carnations for Easter. A visitor described their houses as "a sheet of color."

Julius Kohler & Sons, Frankford, have a fine lot of Easter plants, including some exceedingly well-grown hydrangeas in the medium sizes.

it has been a little slow in coming but is now here.

The Easter plant growers have been somewhat uneasy over the tardy demand for their product, but last reports show that the orders are here and a good Easter assured. The Robert Craig Co. sent out 140 cases of plants one day this week.

The Market.

It is interesting to note that just now everything indicates an ample supply of all kinds of stock for Easter. Blooms of all kinds are at their best, and reports from all the growers hereabouts promise an abundant supply. Bulbous stock of every description augers well, while in lilies excellent cuts are in view. Potted plants are also in the best of form. Much complaint is being made that tulips are disappointing, because of small heads and non-opening proclivities. In a few cases diseased lilies are reported, but in the main there seems to be less complaint than in several years.

While there will be a slight stiffening in retail prices, it is not believed that the rates will go as high as has been the case in some previous years. The dealers are well booked for deliveries the latter part of this week and everyone is looking for clear warm weather, which will make thousands of dollars' difference to the aggregate sales. There is a disposition on the part of the churches of every denomination to be more lavish in the use of potted plants and cut flowers than has been the case for several years.

Society's Meetings.

The monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, March 16, with an unusually large attendance, the subject of the discussion being "Fruits," which was led by a lecture by Prof. Edwin R. doned farm hereabouts for the purpose of raising apples."

Previous to the address, a business meeting was held, at which Mrs. F. S. Peck, of Barrington; George F. Rooke, of East Providence, and F. W. Jones, of this city, were elected to membership. The report of the banquet committee for the recent anniversary showed a deficit of about $50, which will be made up from the society treasury. The proposition to issue a monthly society bulletin was discussed at some length and then continued until the next meeting for further consideration.

The attendance at the last meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society was fairly good, with President James Robertson in the chair. One new member was elected and one name was presented for associate membership. It was voted to hold the rose and strawberry exhibition in Masonic hall this year on the same dates as last, June 23 and 24, and a premium list was adopted. Offers for special premiums in the children's classes, amounting to $60, were received from Mr. and Mrs. Lorillard Spencer. This amount will cover the June exhibition as well as the school garden premiums. Special prizes of $10 and $5 were offered by S. G. Harris for the best display of peony blooms in six varieties, six blooms of each.
